ADM. THOMAS MOORER
. . . Joint Chief Change

LBJ Names Alabamian To Top Staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — A World War II flying hero who likes to interview unhappy enlisted men is to become chief of naval operations.

President Johnson confirmed Saturday that he is nominating Alabama-born Adm. Thomas Hinman Moorer to succeed Adm. David L. McDonald who has held the top Navy post since August 1963. McDonald, a 60-year-old Georgian, is retiring July 31.

This is the first change in the makeup of the Joint Chiefs of Staff since February 1965.

Moorer, 55, now is commander of the Atlantic Fleet, commander in chief, Atlantic, and supreme allied commander, Atlantic, under the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, posts he has held since April 1965.

Vice Adm. Ephraim Paul Holmes will succeed Moorer in these commands.

Moorer, a tall, humorous man, became known for his people-to-people approach after he took command of the Pacific Fleet in mid-1964-as the youngest full admiral in the Navy.

About every 10 days he would send a message to the captain of a Pacific Fleet vessel coming into Pearl Harbor, requesting the skipper to find a volunteer for an interview. Moorer favored young sailors who were planning to leave the service.

The men interviewed were encouraged to air their gripes fully and frankly — and no reports on their views were sent back to their commanding officers.

"I know they come in scared to death," Moorer once told a newsman "But it only takes about 10 minutes to get them talking."

The son of a dentist, Moorer calls Eufaula, Ala., home. He entered the Naval Academy at 17 and graduated in 1933.

A combat flier, he was shot down in February 1942 off Australia. He was rescued by a ship only to have the vessel sunk by the Japanese later the same day. But later he met the Japanese flier who shot him down and now has the pilot's sword.

Among his decorations are the Distinguished Service Medal, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Silver Star, the Purple Heart and the Legion of Merit.

U.S. Denies Blast Of Bombing Ship

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States declared Saturday that it is not true, as charged by the Russians, that U.S. warplanes bombed the Soviet ship Turkistan some 50 miles northeast of Haiphong.

The Defense Department said a thorough investigation has been conducted under the supervision of Adm. Ulysses S. G. Sharp Jr., the Pacific commander in chief.

"The conclusion of the investigation is that no U.S. aircraft bombed or strafed the Soviet ship. There is absolutely no evidence to confirm the Soviet allegations," it added.

HIT BY ACKACK

The department speculated that the ship was struck by North Vietnamese antiaircraft fire.

The State Department called in the Soviet Embassy's charge d'affaires, Yuri N. Tcherniakov, and rejected the Soviet protest lodged in Moscow on Friday. The U.S. note also appealed to Moscow again to use its influence to bring peace in Vietnam.

The Russians said Friday that two U.S. jets bombed the Turkistan in a North Vietnamese harbor, killing one crewman and injuring six. Moscow's protest said that in event of a recurrence, the Soviet Union "will be compelled to take appropriate measures to insure the safety of its ships."

The Pentagon statement said it was known that the Soviet ship was anchored in the harbor at Cam Pha and the aircraft crews were cautioned to avoid the ship.

The Russian version was that a bomb hit the water about 100 yards from the Turkistan and the aircraft described as American made several strafing runs over the ship.

The Pentagon said: "There was no strafing by aircraft of either flight at any time."

This was a reference to two flights in the area by Air Force F105s, made over a 15-minute period starting at 4:33 p.m. local time. The statement said that throughout the period there was intense fire from 37mm, 57mm, and 85mm antiaircraft guns.

The Defense Department said: "It is probable that the heavy North Vietnamese antiaircraft fire was responsible for any damage to the Soviet ship and any casualties suffered by its crew."

Legislature Winds Up Fiscal Session Tuesday

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Louisiana Legislature winds up its 30-day fiscal session this week. The session ends Tuesday. For the most part, it was a peaceful session — until this past week.

The session was supposed to be quiet. Gov. John McKeithen held remarkable control — especially after word got out that Lt. Gov. C. C. Aycock may be out of the race for governor against him.

But the pressure built up sharply in the last full working week, exploding into near fistfights, name calling and marathon debates in House and Senate.

The usually staid Public Affairs Research Council (PAR) got into the act. PAR, a private agency run by Ed Steimel, accused McKeithen of hypersensitivity because the governor tongue-lashed PAR publicly for a report on lack of state personnel control.

The major task of the session was finished during the week. Legislation to support McKeithen's $1.2 billion budget was enacted and the budget was sent back to him out of balance by more than $1.5 million.

Perhaps the biggest issue of the session was settled also. A standby program of private school pupil tuition grants based on welfare needs won legislative passage. It piqued both public and private school people.

Earlier in the session issues such as urban renewal and property tax assessments were settled.

Among issues which fell by the wayside was legislative reapportionment. Sen. Jamar Adcock, Monroe, abandoned his controversial plan to have legislators in multi-office districts run by division.

Two hot issues remain in the House. They include the used car licensing bill, by Sen. B. B. Rayburn, Bogalusa, and the resolution to withhold pay raises voted for district attorneys and other officials until after civil service workers get theirs. McKeithen has threatened a veto unless the resolution is passed.

Issues still in the Senate include continued livestock grazing rights for private citizens on the Saline Wild Life Refuge. Sen. W. L. Rambo, Georgetown, lost by several votes in the first attempt to pass his resolution to this end, but saved it for another vote Monday.

Boston Riot Again Begins

BOSTON (AP) — For the second night in a row rioters roamed through the streets of a Boston Negro section Saturday, smashing windows and looting stores and attacking stray passersby.

The rioting broke out after dark, but by midnight police headquarters reported the disturbances were "contained" and calls for police diminished.

Through the evening, however, squads of police drawn from an emergency force of 1,900 men called to standby duty sped through the areas of the Grove Hall Square section of Roxbury to break up gathering crowds and chase looters.

(Photograph Page 6A)

At least eight persons were reported injured Saturday including a Boston fireman, Lt. Joseph Donovan, 39, who was shot in the right wrist by a sniper who fired in the darkness from a rooftop.

Donovan had led his crew to a firebox from which one of a number of false alarms had been sounded.

LYNDON B. JOHNSON
. . . Political Whirler

President Takes Whirl At Politics

NEW YORK (AP) — President Johnson rolled through a whirl of political talks here Saturday, blasting Republicans, getting all-out endorsement from Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D.-N.Y., and vowing that the United States "is determined to preserve the territorial integrity of the nations involved" in the Middle East crisis.

Kennedy said that in 1964 Johnson "won the greatest popular victory of modern times, and with our help he will do it again in 1968."

Johnson, in town for a triple-header round of Democratic fund-raising dinners, was loudly applauded on his Middle East remarks. He spoke out in a community which has a large percentage of supporters of Israel in its stance against a united Arab world.

Chanting demonstrators, their numbers growing quickly during the evening to about 1,500, followed the President as he went from one dinner to the other. They shouted, "H— no, we won't go!" and other protests against the war in Vietnam.

Kennedy, who hasn't always seen eye to eye with Johnson, was to have introduced him at the first affair — a dinner of the Democratic State Committee. But he had flown in from England where he attended a funeral and got to the hall while Johnson was in the windup of his talk.

Then Kennedy launched into a talk of his own, telling the Democrats that Johnson "has sought consensus, but he never shrank from controversy."

He said Johnson had "gained huge popularity, but he never hesitated to spend it" on things he thought important.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, here for the dinners, also was praised by Kennedy, brother of the assassinated president whom Johnson followed to the White House.

"With our help," Kennedy said, "he — Johnson — will have at his side the best vice president since his predecessor, Hubert Humphrey.' Johnson was Humphrey's predecessor.

Soldier Shot, Robbed Near Alexandria

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — Three Orange, Tex., men were arrested here early Saturday in connection with the robbery and shooting of a Ft. Polk soldier.

Jailed on charges of armed robbery and aggravated assault were Charles Conner, 21; Larry D. Hoffpauir, 18; and Cecil E. Doyle, 21.

Sheriff's deputies said the men had picked up Army Pvt. Larry F. Hodge, 21, of Morrilton, Ark., and assaulted him and robbed him. Hodge was hitchhiking.

Hodge was hit over the head and shot in the shoulder, authorities said.

The soldier was en route to Alexandria to meet his wife and to celebrate their first wedding anniversary Sunday. The couple is expecting their first child in September.

Hodge told deputies that about 14 miles from Alexandria one of the two men hit him over the head and later one of them shot him. He said the driver turned off on a sideroad and stopped the car after traveling about a mile. They demanded he get out, Hodge said, and asked for his money. He said he gave them his wallet, containing about $20.

Hodge walked back to the highway, bleeding from the shoulder. He was picked up by a passing motorist.

Hodge is a member of the Arkansas National Guard and is undergoing basic training at Ft. Polk. He is a plumber in civilian life.

He was reported in satisfactory condition by doctors, who discharged him later in the day from the base hospital at England Air Force Base.

Israelite Bluntly Declares Nation Could Defeat Arabs

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Defense Minister Moshe Dayan — Irael's hero of the 1956 Suez war — contended Saturday that Israeli soldiers could beat the Arabs in war without help from U.S., British or other foreign troops.

At the same time, Israel bluntly declared it will make its stand on the Gulf of Aqaba, which Egypt has proclaimed to be closed to Israeli shipping. That declaration was made in debate in the U.N. Security Council in New York where Israelis and Arabs exchanged bitter charges.

The Security Council postponed until next week any voting on peace proposals before it.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli government disclosed that Prime Minister Levi Eshkol has appealed to the Soviet Union to use its "great political power" and join other nations in an effort to bring about permanent peace in the Middle East. Eshkol's message to Premier Alexei N. Kosygin was delivered to the Soviet ambassador in Jerusalem on Thursday.

AP correspondent Bob Horton reported from the U.S. 6th Fleet aircraft carrier America that a second Soviet warship has begun shadowing the fleet in the Mediterranean. The new vessel on the scene is a guided missile destroyer, No. 381. She passed about 12 miles in front of America's task force of about six vessels, then cruised by to the left within four miles. The other shadowing Soviet vessel also is a destroyer.

Dayan, who wears an eye patch as a result of a battle injury, said that while he is confident that Israeli forces could defeat the Arabs in any war he agrees with his government's policy of seeking a diplomatic solution to lift Egypt's announced blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba and the removal of Arab troops from Israel's borders.

He said Israeli forces alone were capable of standing off the Arabs even though they outnumber the Israelis.

"I personally would not expect nor want anyone else to fight for us," the former general told a Tel Aviv news conference. "I wouldn't like American or British boys getting killed here in order to secure our safety.

'I do not want other people to fight and get killed for us."

Dayan said, however, he agrees with the Israeli government policy of seeking diplomatic solutions to lift Egypt's proclaimed blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba and to halt Arab troop massings along Israel's borders.

At the same time, the Israeli ambassador to the United Nations, Gideon Rafael, told the U.N. Security Council in New York that Israel "is determined to make its stand on the Gulf of Aqaba," the waterway leading to Israel's sole southern port. He declared that "nothing less than complete nonintervention with free and innocent passage is acceptable to the government of Israel."

Adib Daoudy, representative of Syria, responded that an attempt to break Egypt's proclaimed blockade of the gulf to Israeli shipping will be met by strong and united Arab counterblows.

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano accused the major powers in the United Nations of failing to do enough to solve the Middle East crisis that began in mid-May.

An AP dispatch from Cairo reported thousands of Egyptians staged an anti-American demonstration at Port Said as the U.S. Navy destroyer Dyess entered the Suez Canal and took up position to await a convoy heading south.

In another development, three Soviet destroyers left the Black Sea en route to the Mediterranean. They were accompanied by an auxiliary ship. The Soviet Union has announced it is sending 10 naval vessels into the Mediterranean, where the U.S. 6th Fleet is on patrol, apparently to bolster Arab morale.

Dayan's first news conference since his appointment as defense minister was on top of the day's developments in Israel.

U.S. Marines Mop Up After Fierce Fighting

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Marines mopping up after a bloody, two-day battle in coastal Quant Tin Province reported today that 474 Communist soldiers were killed.

The battle tapered off Saturday and Marines reported their own casualties as 54 killed and 120 wounded.

While the raging Marine battle for the ridge line died down Saturday, the air war over North Vietnam intensified. U.S. fighter- bomber pilots shot down two Communist MIG17 interceptors, the first kills in nearly two weeks.

The U.S. Command said that a Communist regiment — perhaps more than 2,000 men — scattered over a ridge line 13 miles northwest of Tam Ky broke contact with the Marines on Saturday afternoon.

In a follow-up sweep of the area, Marines said they established the Communist death toll at 474. Many of the dead apparently were killed by air and artillery strikes.

(Related Article Page 3A)

The Marines said they captured eight weapons.

Three bloodied companies of Marines, reinforced by other Marine units, moved Saturday morning into a hamlet that had been blasted with napalm, bombs, rockets and artillery, but found only two wounded Marines near the tree line on the edge of the hamlet.

There were only occasional sniper rounds fired. The North Vietnamese had managed to slip out of the fortified hamlet from which they had attacked the Marines as the Leathernecks crossed an open rice paddy.

Elsewhere, there was little ground fighting reported.

The two MIG17s downed Saturday were shot down by a flight of U.S. Air Force F105 Thunderchief fighter-bombers from the 388th Tactical Fighter Wing at Korat Air Force Base in Thailand.

The Thunderchiefs took on three MIGs in a dogfight east-northeast of Hanoi. There was no announcement of any U.S. planes being downed.

The latest MIG kills brought to 74 the number of Communist planes downed in aerial combat over North Vietnam. Mig interceptors have shot down 20 American warplanes.

Credited with the latest kills were Maj. Ralph L. Kuster, 35, of St. Louis, Mo., and Capt. Larry D. Wiggins, 33, of Houston, Tex. It was the first MIG kill for each.

U.S warplanes in raids Saturday struck at railroad yards, sidings and bridges deep in North Vietnam.

Pilots reported inflicting moderate to severe damage on warehouses, storage areas and rail lines in the Bac Giang railroad yards 27 miles northeast of Hanoi.

Silver Crisis Maneuvering

Treasury Makes Effort To Stem Coin Shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — An effort to prevent another coin shortage is behind the Treasury Department's maneuvering in the current silver crisis.

And officials said Saturday they are prepared to keep the Philadelphia Mint running around the clock five days a week, instead of cutting back to two shifts, to insure a plentiful supply of coins.

The problem, as Treasury officials see it, is that insufficient numbers of the new cupronickel coins have thus far been produced to supply the entire needs of the country.

Should all the old silver coins suddenly disappear, they reason, a coin shortage could again develop.

They said, however, that silver coins have continued to circulate side by side with the new coins and there have been no reports of any hoarding since the newest set of restrictions was imposed May 18.

By the end of the year, one top official said, the mints will have produced about 10.5 billion of the new coins, enough to supply the nation's needs.

Until that time, however, the administration's intends to hold the price of silver at $1.29 an ounce.

Coins containing 90 per cent silver would be worth their face value if the price rose to $1.38 an ounce while the silver in the new half dollars wouldn't be worth 50 cents unless the price soared to $3.38 an ounce, an unlikely prospect as government officials now see it.

Dimes, quarters and half dollars produced before 1965 contained 90 per cent silver. The Coinage Act of that year removed all silver from dimes and quarters and dropped the percentage in half dollars to 40 per cent.

To guard against the disappearance of silver coins, the department last month barred the melting, treatment and export of all silver coins.

The maximum penalty for a violation is a $10,000 fine and five years in jail.

At the same time, the department limited all future sales of its silver to legitimate domestic businesses, such as silversmiths and photo companies.

But this move represented an emergency response to a run on silver caused mainly by heavy ordering from foreign brokers. The immediate result of the Treasury's action has been to send the price of silver soaring overseas to more than $1.71 an ounce in London.

Other parts of the Treasury's program are still pending in Congress—to permit the secretary to declare some silver certificates irretrievably lost, thus freeing the silver behind them for domestic sales, and to fix a deadline for the redemption in silver of all outstanding silver certificates.

The department needs this legislation to maintain the $1.29 an ounce price through this year.

British Liner Kills 88 People

PERPIGNAN, France (AP) — A chartered DC4 carrying British tourists to Spain's Costa Brava crashed Saturday night in the foothills of the Pyrenees.

The French news agency announced the plane crashed on Mount Canigou killed all 88 persons aboard.

The agency said there were 83 passengers and five crew members aboard the plane.

A spokesman at the airport in Perpignan said the plane had taken off earlier from Manston Airport in England.

The plane crashed on the slopes of Mount Canigou, which lies about 12 miles north of the French-Spanish frontier.

Kennedy said that in 1964 Johnson "won the greatest popular victory of modern times, and with our help he will do it again in 1968."

Johnson, in town for a tripleheader round of Democratic fund-raising dinners, was loudly applauded on his Middle East remarks. He spoke out in a community which has a large percentage of supporters of Israel in its stance against a united Arab world.

Chanting demonstrators, their numbers growing quickly during the evening to about 1,500, followed the President as he went from one dinner to the other. They shouted, "H— no, we won't go!" and other protests against the war in Vietnam.

Kennedy, who hasn't always seen eye to eye with Johnson, was to have introduced him at the first affair — a dinner of the Democratic State Committee. But he had flown in from England where he attended a funeral and got to the hall while Johnson was in the windup of his talk.

Then Kennedy launched into a talk of his own, telling the Democrats that Johnson "has sought consensus, but he never shrank from controversy."

He said Johnson had "gained huge popularity, but he never hesitated to spend it" on things he thought important.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, here for the dinners, also was praised by Kennedy, brother of the assassinated president whom Johnson followed to the White House.

"With our help," Kennedy said, "he — Johnson — will have at his side the best vice president since his predecessor, Hubert Humphrey." Johnson was Humphrey's predecessor.

Soldier Shot, Robbed Near Alexandria

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — Three Orange, Tex., men were arrested here early Saturday in connection with the robbery and shooting of a Ft. Polk soldier.

Jailed on charges of armed robbery and aggravated assault were Charles Conner, 21; Larry D. Hoffpauir, 18; and Cecil E. Doyle, 21.

Sheriff's deputies said the men had picked up Army Pvt. Larry F. Hodge, 21, of Morrilton, Ark., and assaulted him and robbed him. Hodge was hitchhiking.

Hodge was hit over the head and shot in the shoulder, authorities said.

The soldier was en route to Alexandria to meet his wife and to celebrate their first wedding anniversary Sunday. The couple is expecting their first child in September.

Hodge told deputies that about 14 miles from Alexandria one of the two men hit him over the head and later one of them shot him. He said the driver turned off on a sideroad and stopped the car after traveling about a mile. They demanded he get out, Hodge said, and asked for his money. He said he gave them his wallet, containing about $20.

Hodge walked back to the highway, bleeding from the shoulder. He was picked up by a passing motorist.

Hodge is a member of the Arkansas National Guard and is undergoing basic training at Ft. Polk. He is a plumber in civilian life.

He was reported in satisfactory condition by doctors, who discharged him later in the day from the base hospital at England Air Force Base.

Boston Riot Again Begins

BOSTON (AP) — For the second night in a row rioters roamed through the streets of a Boston Negro section Saturday, smashing windows and looting stores and attacking stray passersby.

The rioting broke out after dark, but by midnight police headquarters reported the disturbances were "contained" and calls for police diminished.

Through the evening, however, squads of police drawn from an emergency force of 1,900 men called to standby duty sped through the areas of the Grove Hall Square section of Roxbury to break up gathering crowds and chase looters.

(Photograph Page 6A)

At least eight persons were reported injured Saturday including a Boston fireman, Lt. Joseph Donovan, 39, who was shot in the right wrist by a sniper who fired in the darkness from a rooftop.

Donovan had led his crew to a firebox from which one of a number of false alarms had been sounded.

Israelite Bluntly Declares Nation Could Defeat Arabs

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Defense Minister Moshe Dayan — Iraei's hero of the 1956 Suez war — contended Saturday that Israeli soldiers could beat the Arabs in war without help from U.S., British or other foreign troops.

At the same time, Israel bluntly declared it will make its stand on the Gulf of Aqaba, which Egypt has proclaimed to be closed to Israeli shipping. That declaration was made in debate in the U.N. Security Council in New York where Israelis and Arabs exchanged bitter charges.

The Security Council postponed until next week any voting on peace proposals before it.

In Jerusalem, the Israeli government disclosed that Prime Minister Levi Eshkol has appealed to the Soviet Union to use its "great political power" and join other nations in an effort to bring about permanent peace in the Middle East. Eshkol's message to Premier Alexei N. Kosygin was delivered to the Soviet ambassador in Jerusalem on Thursday.

AP correspondent Bob Horton reported from the U.S. 6th Fleet aircraft carrier America that a second Soviet warship has begun shadowing the fleet in the Mediterranean. The new vessel on the scene is a guided missile destroyer, No. 381. She passed about 12 miles in front of America's task force of about six vessels, then cruised by to the left within four miles. The other shadowing Soviet vessel also is a destroyer.

Dayan, who wears an eye patch as a result of a battle injury, said that while he is confident that Israeli forces could defeat the Arabs in any war he agrees with his government's policy of seeking a diplomatic solution to lift Egypt's announced blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba and the removal of Arab troops from Israel's borders.

He said Israeli forces alone were capable of standing off the Arabs even though they outnumber the Israelis.

"I personally would not expect nor want anyone else to fight for us," the former general told a Tel Aviv news conference. "I wouldn't like American or British boys getting killed here in order to secure our safety.

'I do not want other people to fight and get killed for us."

Dayan said, however, he agrees with the Israeli government policy of seeking diplomatic solutions to lift Egypt's proclaimed blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba and to halt Arab troop massings along Israel's borders.

At the same time, the Israeli ambassador to the United Nations, Gideon Rafael, told the U.N. Security Council in New York that Israel "is determined to make its stand on the Gulf of Aqaba," the waterway leading to Israel's sole southern port. He declared that "nothing less than complete nonintervention with free and innocent passage is acceptable to the government of Israel."

Adib Daoudy, representative of Syria, responded that an attempt to break Egypt's proclaimed blockade of the gulf to Israeli shipping will be met by strong and united Arab counterblows.

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano accused the major powers in the United Nations of failing to do enough to solve the Middle East crisis that began in mid-May.

An AP dispatch from Cairo reported thousands of Egyptians staged an anti-American demonstration at Port Said as the U.S. Navy destroyer Dyess entered the Suez Canal and took up position to await a convoy heading south.

In another development, three Soviet destroyers left the Black Sea en route to the Mediterranean. They were accompanied by an auxiliary ship. The Soviet Union has announced it is sending 10 naval vessels into the Mediterranean, where the U.S. 6th Fleet is on patrol, apparently to bolster Arab morale.

Dayan's first news conference since his appointment as defense minister was on top of the day's developments in Israel.

U.S. Marines Mop Up After Fierce Fighting

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Marines mopping up after a bloody, two-day battle in coastal Quant Tin Province reported today that 474 Communist soldiers were killed.

The battle tapered off Saturday and Marines reported their own casualties as 54 killed and 120 wounded.

While the raging Marine battle for the ridge line died down Saturday, the air war over North Vietnam intensified. U.S. fighter- bomber pilots shot down two Communist MIG17 interceptors, the first kills in nearly two weeks.

The U.S. Command said that a Communist regiment — perhaps more than 2,000 men — scattered over a ridge line 13 miles northwest of Tam Ky broke contact with the Marines on Saturday afternoon.

In a follow-up sweep of the area, Marines said they established the Communist death toll at 474. Many of the dead apparently were killed by air and artillery strikes.

(Related Article Page 3A)

The Marines said they captured eight weapons.

Three bloodied companies of Marines, reinforced by other Marine units, moved Saturday morning into a hamlet that had been blasted with napalm, bombs, rockets and artillery, but found only two wounded Marines near the tree line on the edge of the hamlet.

There were only occasional sniper rounds fired. The North Vietnamese had managed to slip out of the fortified hamlet from which they had attacked the Marines as the Leathernecks crossed an open rice paddy.

Elsewhere, there was little ground fighting reported.

The two MIG17s downed Saturday were shot down by a flight of U.S. Air Force F105 Thunderchief fighter-bombers from the 388th Tactical Fighter Wing at Korat Air Force Base in Thailand.

The Thunderchiefs took on three MIGs in a dogfight east-northeast of Hanoi. There was no announcement of any U.S. planes being downed.

The latest MIG kills brought to 74 the number of Communist planes downed in aerial combat over North Vietnam. Mig interceptors have shot down 20 American warplanes.

Credited with the latest kills were Maj. Ralph L. Kuster, 35, of St. Louis, Mo., and Capt. Larry D. Wiggins, 33, of Houston, Tex. It was the first MIG kill for each.

U.S warplanes in raids Saturday struck at railroad yards, sidings and bridges deep in North Vietnam.

Pilots reported inflicting moderate to severe damage on warehouses, storage areas and rail lines in the Bac Giang railroad yards 27 miles northeast of Hanoi.

Silver Crisis Maneuvering

Treasury Makes Effort To Stem Coin Shortage

WASHINGTON (AP) — An effort to prevent another coin shortage is behind the Treasury Department's maneuvering in the current silver crisis.

And officials said Saturday they are prepared to keep the Philadelphia Mint running around the clock five days a week, instead of cutting back to two shifts, to insure a plentiful supply of coins.

The problem, as Treasury officials see it, is that insufficient numbers of the new cupronickel coins have thus far been produced to supply the entire needs of the country.

Should all the old silver coins suddenly disappear, they reason, a coin shortage could again develop.

They said, however, that silver coins have continued to circulate side by side with the new coins and there have been no reports of any hoarding since the newest set of restrictions was imposed May 18.

By the end of the year, one top official said, the mints will have produced about 10.5 billion of the new coins, enough to supply the nation's needs.

Until that time, however, the administration's intends to hold the price of silver at $1.29 an ounce.

Coins containing 90 per cent silver would be worth their face value if the price rose to $1.38 an ounce while the silver in the new half dollars wouldn't be worth 50 cents unless the price soared to $3.38 an ounce, an unlikely prospect as government officials now see it.

Dimes, quarters and half dollars produced before 1965 contained 90 per cent silver. The Coinage Act of that year removed all silver from dimes and quarters and dropped the percentage in half dollars to 40 per cent.

To guard against the disappearance of silver coins, the department last month barred the melting, treatment and export of all silver coins.

The maximum penalty for a violation is a $10,000 fine and five years in jail.

At the same time, the department limited all future sales of its silver to legitimate domestic businesses, such as silversmiths and photo companies.

But this move represented an emergency response to a run on silver caused mainly by heavy ordering from foreign brokers. The immediate result of the Treasury's action has been to send the price of silver soaring overseas to more than $1.71 an ounce in London.

Other parts of the Treasury's program are still pending in Congress—to permit the secretary to declare some silver certificates irretrievably lost, thus freeing the silver behind them for domestic sales, and to fix a deadline for the redemption in silver of all outstanding silver certificates.

The department needs this legislation to maintain the $1.29 an ounce price through this year.

Council Gives Up Salary For Program

By SANDY KNOBLOCH
Staff Writer

Any time the town council members give up their salary for a program, they must consider it a worthwhile one.

And the council members of Sterlington did just that to help the Summer Recreation Program.

The people of Sterlington feel they have one of the finest and most comprehensive recreation programs in existence, and they have reason to do so.

The Sterlington Summer Recreation Program is free of charge to any Sterlington resident who wishes to participate, and there are activities of interest for all ages. These are tennis instruction, Pee Wee baseball, Dixie Boys baseball, handicrafts classes, baton twirling lessons, a fishing rodeo, Little League baseball, a trip to the Houston Astrodome, Dixie Seniors baseball, girls' softball and Friday night dances with live music.

And the council members aren't the only ones who have contributed funds to make the program a success. Certain Sterlington business establishments and industries have contributed both time and money to add to the $450 that was left over from concessions last year. And the sheriff made an outright donation of $100.

Also, there are only two people concerned with the recreation program who are being paid for their efforts. They are Director Terry Head football coach at Sterlington High School, and Miss Jackie Dumas who will assist him.

Everyone else is doing his work voluntarily with no pay at all. More than 100 women are doing all kinds of work including handling at the concession stands, chaperoning dances, providing transportation for the children and teaching classes.

One of the things the recreation program has to boast about most is the new Little League ball park which was built by 21 Optimist Club members. The park features regulation lights a chain link fence and a large backstop approximately 25 x 56 feet.

Covering about three acres the park also has covered dugouts for two teams.

The ball park will be dedicated Tuesday night at 7:30 at which time the Optimist Club will turn the park over to the town of Sterlington. The park is not completely finished; however, the Optimist Club is assuming full responsibility for what still needs to be done.

Three ball games will be played Tuesday night, in conjunction with the dedication. There will be a girls' softball game, a Pee Wee game and a Little League game.

With this event, the Sterlington Summer Recreation Program goes into full swing. Coming up next weekend will be the trip to Houston. This group will travel by bus and each will pay an individual fee of $20, which includes transportation, tickets, food and lodging. Friday night they will stay at the YMCA and the YWCA. Then on Saturday morning the group hopes to visit the Houston Zoo. In the afternoon they will enjoy the ball game to the Astrodome, and then return to Sterlington Saturday night.

The program features lessons in a number of activities. Tennis instruction will be given, starting June 13, throughout the program, under the direction of Harold DeBray. Trophies will be given, for both singles and doubles. About 85 have already signed up for the tennis classes.

There will also be two weeks of handicraft classes June 5-16 taught by Miss Bobbie Meeks, Northeast Louisiana State College art student. She will offer art instruction, both in painting and in drawing.

A Sterlington High School student Miss Wanda Meeks, will give baton twirling lessons June 5-9. Miss Meeks has had professional instruction and will give beginning lessons.

Final plans are now being made for a fishing rodeo which will be under the direction of Virgil Manning. There will $50 in prize money, for the largest single fish caught and for the largest number of fish caught by one person. Already, 65 would - be prize fish - catchers have signed up for the rodeo.

Each Friday night, except for the weekend of the Houston trip, there will be a dance for Sterlington - Fairbanks area young people and their guests. The dances will feature live music by the Tidal Waves and by The Other Syde. Both of the groups are composed of Sterlington high school students.

And the residents of Sterlington will have plenty of opportunity to use their new ball park, too. The participants will all have uniforms, regulation uniforms for Little League and Dixie League and jerseys for Pee Wee and girls' softball. All the uniforms are being furnished by the Recreation Committee.

The girls' softball program has four teams. There are two teams of 7-12 graders, with 17 members on each team, and two teams of 1-6 graders, with 16 on each team.

Then there are the Pee Wees, the Dixie Boys, the Little League and the Dixie Seniors. All the groups are for specific grade and age levels.

And the wonderful thing about all these opportunities is that they are free. Judging from the number signed up for the different events, the people of Sterlington plan to take advantage of this summer opportunity.

VIRGIL MANNING, coach of the Sterlington Little League, is one of nearly 100 Sterlington citizens who are devoting their time and talents, without pay, to making the Summer Recreation Program a success.

Training For Aviation Set At Northeast

Northeast Louisiana State College has been authorized to begin training students next fall for careers in one of America's fastest - growing industries, aviation.

President George T. Walker has announced that the State Board of Education has approved the establishment of a curriculum in aviation at Northeast leading to the bachelor's degree.

Northeast's aviation program will prepare students for a variety of careers in the industry, including airport management, airlines sales management, aircraft sales, airport services, airline station management and aviation education as well as careers as professional pilots.

W. E. Whetstone, member of the State Board of Education from the Fifth Congressional District, is enthusiastic about the new program.

"Responsible leaders in aerospace technology, government and industry have frequently expressed the need for flight personnel with adequate science backgrounds," said Whetstone. "They envision that in the future, due to the rate of complexity of aerospace technical equipment and supporting facilities, as well as the growing complexity of air transportation, a solid academic background at the baccalaureate level for flight crew and ground support personnel will be essential."

The Northeast program is structured with a board scientific base on which to prepare the student not only for present technological needs of the industry but also provide a background necessary for future demands which the industry will make on aviation scientists. The curriculum includes a wide range of science and technical courses including chemistry, mathematics engineering, physics and zoology as well as courses in business managemnet and liberal arts.

Twenty - four hours of aviation courses are required in the curriculum. These courses, which include flight training and ground school phases of aviation, will be conducted by Fleeman Flying Service of Monroe. Fleeman's is authorized by the Federal Aviation Agency to give flight and ground school training examinations for three FAA certificates — the Private Pilot Certificate, the Commercial Pilot Certificate and the Instrument Pilot Certificate.

"A critical need exists for college trained aviation industry personnel," Dr. Walker said. "A recent FAA study revealed a need for 30 per cent more people in the industry by 1970. The lace of opportunity to combine aviation training with college level academic programs has made it practically impossible to supply the demand. The aviation curriculum at Northeast is designed to supply graduates with the broad educational background and the specific technical training necessary to meet the needs of a rapidly expanding industry."

The aviation program will be administered through the School of Pure and Applied Sciences at Northeast. Dr. Daniel E. Dupree is dean of the School.

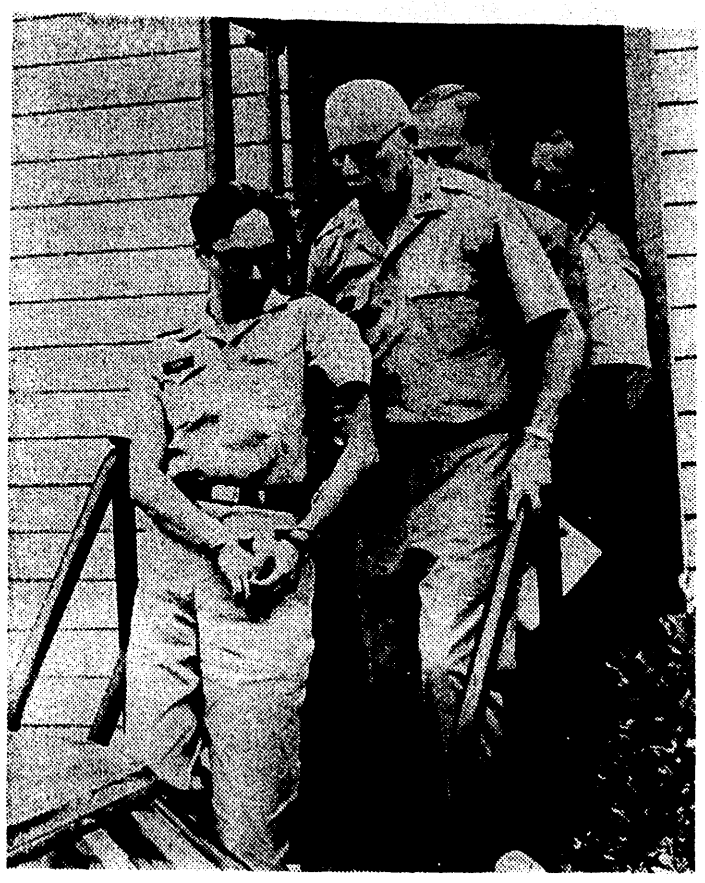
Army Sentences Capt. Levy To Three Years In Prison



CAPT. HOWARD Levy, 30-year-old Army doctor Brooklyn, N.Y., is led handcuffed from the court martial building at Ft. Jackson near Columbia, S.C. after being sentenced Saturday to three years in prison for disobedience and making disloyal statements. (AP Wirephoto)

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Capt. Howard B. Levy, who once vowed he would rather go to jail then serve in Vietnam, was sentenced Saturday to three years in prison and dismissed from the Army for disobedience and disloyalty.

Levy was convicted Friday of disobeying an order to train Green Beret medics in his dermatology clinic and with making disloyal statements opposing U.S. policy in Vietnam.

The slender, dark-haired Brooklyn, N.Y., dermatologist showed no emotion as the 10-member general court-martial board handed down the sentence.

The 30-year-old Army doctor was handcuffed, whisked from the clapboard courtroom and confined behind barbed wire at the Ft. Jackson, S.C., stockade.

Levy's girl friend, Trina Sahli of Columbia, burst into tears when the sentence was read.

His father, Seymour Levy, said the sentence, "is in line with everything else that has transpired here." He declined further comment.

His mother said, "I was not surprised. What upset me was the way Howard was grabbed and handcuffed."

The chief defense attorney, Charles Morgan of the American Civil Liberties Union, also complained about the manner in which Levy was taken away.

He declared Levy's right to counsel had been violated because he and other defense attorneys did not know where Levy was being taken and were not allowed to accompany him.

When Col. Chester Davis of the Ft. Jackson Hospital staff took Levy's arm, Morgan protested "take your hands off him. This is a disgrace, colonel!"

Three Marine Units Work Out Of Traps

TAM KY, South Vietnam (AP) — For eight hours Friday, three companies of U.S. Marines fought for their lives, pinned down in sun-baked rice paddies by North Vietnamese soldiers who poured rockets, mortars and machine-gun fire on them.

Only with darkness could the Leathernecks draw back. Then jets, helicopter gunships and artillery turned the night sky red as they hammered at the Communists, entrenched in the hamlet of Vinh Huey No. 2.

"They let us pass through and get into the paddies," said Lance Cpl. Mike Miller, Mansfield, Ohio. "Then all h— broke out. Our entire company was pinned down, trapped behind the paddy dikes. We ran out of ammunition but found some from the men who had been killed and kept them back.

"Whenever we tried to move, though, they picked us off."

Miller was with a company that had begun to cross 800 yards of rice paddies between a low hill and the hamlet.

A second company had moved to the right through a tree line into the rice paddies while the third company rooted out enemy soldiers dug into the hill.

When the battle ended Saturday, the Marines had suffered 50 men killed and at least 83 wounded.

Enemy losses were 252 confirmed killed, according to Lt. Col. Peter L. Hilgartner, Austin, Tex., commander of the Marine battalion.

Hilgartner had sent his three companies deeper into the Hiep Duc Valley at 5 a.m. Friday in a sweep for North Vietnamese units.

As the Marines approached the hill overlooking Vinh Huey, about 27 miles south of Da Nang, the enemy threw some 30 canisters of tear gas at them, he said. Sniper resistance stiffened, and he held his troops up momentarily before leaving the hill to cross the 800 yards of level paddy land.

Then he moved one company out to secure the right flank while the second moved into the checkerboard paddies. Some North Vietnamese soldiers evidently covered themselves with straw and remained motionless as the Leathernecks moved past them. Other enemy soldiers manning three or four machine-gun nests waited until the Marines were halfway across the paddies, then opened fire.

Information from villagers indicated the three companies of Marines, about 450 men, had encountered more than 1,000 North Vietnamese regulars defending what is believed to have been the headquarters of the 3rd North Vietnamese Division.

"They defended it like h—." Hilgartner said. "We tried to get through and get our men in the paddies from every angle. We couldn't do it. We hung on until dark, and then our men filtered back."

The commander of the company, a captain, pinned down took 10 men to assault the machine-gun nests.

"I had been talking with him on the radio for at least three hours," Hilgartner said, "and he knew he was going to die. He refused to leave his wounded when I asked him if he could get out. I told him we had attacked in every direction to break through, but he said he would not leave any of his men behind.

"Then, he took 10 men to attack the machine-gun positions."

The captain and his squad shot their way into the fringe of the hamlet. Then, Hilgartner said, the captain told him they were being attacked by at least 25 enemy soldiers.

"He must have put down his radio to fight after that, because I didn't hear him again," the colonel said.

The bodies of the captain and his 10 men were found Saturday.

Another company commander, Lt. Dave McIntruff, Sundown, Tex., had led his niut around on the right flank, entering the paddies from a slender finger of tree line. When they were pinned down as the North Vietnamese opened fire, "He told me this was do or die," Hilgartner said, "and that he was going to dig in and stick."

"We had to help the company on my left," McIntruff said. "We just stayed and fought. At dark they tried to infiltrate our lines, but we kept driving them out."

Near midnight, McIntruff said his men heard North Vietnamese prowling the battlefield after most of the Marines had managed to pull back.

"We could hear them talking and moving around," McIntruff said. "Some called out: 'Marine, where are you?' "

Even then, he said, Lt. Bill Link, Kansas City, Mo., took a squad out into the paddies at 2 a.m. to find wounded Marines and help them back.

The three bloodied companies, reinforced by other Marine units, moved Saturday into the hamlet that had been blasted with napalm, bombs, rockets and artillery. They found two wounded Marines near the tree line.

Movement To Draft Rarick Seen

Roy Boyd, president of the Greater Ouachita Parish Citizen Council, claimed here Saturday that a statewide movement is underway to draft Sixth District Congressman John R. Rarick as a candidate for governor in this fall's Democratic Primary election.

"Mr. Rarick became a rising star in Louisiana politics last year by unseating Congressman Jimmie Morrison, a 24-year veteran of Congress," Boyd said.

The Citizen Council head described Rarick as "a staunch segregationist and defender of the constitution.

Boyd said petitions were now being circulated in this area in an effort to get Rarick to run for governor. He said information on this could be obtained by contacting him at his home.

"Rarick campaigned constantly for God and Constitution in his Sixth District Campaign" Boyd said. "He traveled with former Gov. George Wallace in 1964 when Wallace entered the primary in Indiana, the boyhood home of Congressman Rarick. He has been an ardent supporter of Wallace."

Boyd said that Rarick is an outspoken critic of the federal government and was once quoted as "saying the Supreme Court judges were the nation's number one enemies."

Rarick, a Baptist and a 32nd Degree Mason, Shriner and combat veteran of World War II, attended Tulane and Louisiana State University and was admitted to the bar in 1949.

Three New Members Of BBB Announced

The Better Business Bureau of Ouachita Parish processed 152 "instances of service" during May and there were three new members added to the roster which raised the total membership to 262.

B. W. Biedenharn, chairman of the executive committee of the bureau, said the new members were Riser Realty, Ouachita Enterprises and Habco Corporation.

"One year ago," Biedenharn said, "we had a nucleus of 28 firms on which to build an expanded BBB for Ouachita Parish reaching 262 within a 12-month period is a clear indication of the high degree of civic responsibility found in our community among businesses and professions."

In his report to the executive commitete, R. A. Booth, BBB manager, said sales activities which cause public doubt will become known to the bureau about as soon as the sales campaign begins.

In this connection, Booth said it would be well to remember that magazines are sold and not given free, nor are magazines supplied just for postage charges, nor are magazine subscriptions awarded to people in exchange for letters of recommendation.

During May, 20 per cent of the work load was devoted to answering queries in regards to magazine sales, Booth reported.

Next highest in total instances of service was life insurance, the BBB manager said.

Movement To Draft Rarick Seen

Roy Boyd, president of the Greater Ouachita Parish Citizen Council, claimed here Saturday that a statewide movement is underway to draft Sixth District Congressman John R. Rarick as a candidate for governor in this fall's Democratic Primary election.

"Mr. Rarick became a rising star in Louisiana politics last year by unseating Congressman Jimmie Morrison, a 24-year veteran of Congress," Boyd said.

The Citizen Council head described Rarick as "a staunch segregationist and defender of the constitution.

Boyd said petitions were now being circulated in this area in an effort to get Rarick to run for governor. He said information on this could be obtained by contacting him at his home.

"Rarick campaigned constantly for God and Constitution in his Sixth District Campaign" Boyd said. "He traveled with former Gov. George Wallace in 1964 when Wallace entered the primary in Indiana, the boyhood home of Congressman Rarick. He has been an ardent supporter of Wallace."

Boyd said that Rarick is an outspoken critic of the federal government and was once quoted as "saying the Supreme Court judges were the nation's number one enemies."

Rarick, a Baptist and a 32nd Degree Mason, Shriner and combat veteran of World War II, attended Tulane and Louisiana State University and was admitted to the bar in 1949.

Three New Members Of BBB Announced

The Better Business Bureau of Ouachita Parish processed 152 "instances of service" during May and there were three new members added to the roster which raised the total membership to 262.

B. W. Biedenharn, chairman of the executive committee of the bureau, said the new members were Riser Realty, Ouachita Enterprises and Habco Corporation.

"One year ago," Biedenharn said, "we had a nucleus of 28 firms on which to build an expanded BBB for Ouachita Parish reaching 262 within a 12-month period is a clear indication of the high degree of civic responsibility found in our community among businesses and professions."

In his report to the executive commitete, R. A. Booth, BBB manager, said sales activities which cause public doubt will become known to the bureau about as soon as the sales campaign begins.

In this connection, Booth said it would be well to remember that magazines are sold and not given free, nor are magazines supplied just for postage charges, nor are magazine subscriptions awarded to people in exchange for letters of recommendation.

During May, 20 per cent of the work load was devoted to answering queries in regards to magazine sales, Booth reported.

Next highest in total instances of service was life insurance, the BBB manager said.

Prejudice In Politics Shows Drop In America

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON — Over the past 30 years, one of the most significant trends in American life has been the sharp decline in prejudicial attitudes in politics.

A Gallup survey 30 years ago, in 1937, found that only 46 per cent of the American people would vote for an otherwise qualified Jew for President; 64 per cent said they would vote for a Catholic for President, and only 31 per cent said they would vote for a qualified woman for the nation's highest office.

Today the proportion who would vote for a Jew has jumped to 82 per cent. The figure for a Catholic has increased to 89 per cent, and now a majority (57 per cent) say they would vote for a qualified woman for President.

Prejudice Shows Marked Decline

Prejudice against Negroes in politics has also shown a marked decline over recent years. In 1958, 38 per cent said they would vote for a qualified Negro for President. Now, the figure is 54 per cent.

Here are the questions asked and the results showing the changes since the earlier surveys:

"If your party nominated a well - qualified person for President and he happened to be a (Catholic, Jew, Negro) would you vote for him?"

——and——

"If your party nominated a woman for President would you vote for her if she were qualified for the job?"

Varies By Region, Education

Analysis of the results by major population groups shows that prejudice varies greatly by a person's educational attainment and by the region of the country in which he lives.

Taking into account differences between regions in their religious and racial composition, rejection of potential candidates on the basis of race or religion is far greater in the South than in any other region. This is shown in the following table:

% SAYING THEY WOULD VOTE FOR...

	Jew	Catholic	Negro
East	91%	94%	68%
Midwest	83	92	54
South	67	79	32
West	89	91	64

College-trained persons are considerably more tolerant than those who attended only grade school, as shown in the table below:

% SAYING THEY WOULD VOTE FOR...

	Jew	Catholic	Negro
College	93%	94%	69%
High School	84	91	55
Grade School	66	78	36

Little difference by region or education is found on the question of a woman for President. It is interesting to note, however, that women, themselves, are somewhat less tolerant on this issue than men.

Jews Least Prejudiced

A person's religious faith is a factor. Persons of the Jewish faith, as a group, are the least prejudiced, with Catholics next, followed by Protestants. Differences between men and women are slight.

Younger persons, the survey finds, are less prejudiced than older people.

JAMES T. FRANDSEN

Cub Scout Award Will Be Given

James Timothy Frandsen, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Frandsen, 300 Betin, Monroe, will receive the special "Parvuli Dei" award for Catholic cub scouts today in an 8:30 a.m. Mass at Our Lady of Fatima Church.

The young cub is a member of Pack 30, sponsored by the church. His father is cubmaster of the pack and with Mrs. Frandsen will watch the presentation by the Rev. George Martinez, pastor of the church.

"Parvuli Dei," meaning "Children of God," is a silver medal on which a replica of the Holy Family—Jesus, Mary and Joseph—is outlined, suspended from a bar bearing the name of the award.

An applicant for the award must "follow a rigid rule of daily prayer, both morning and night, must have a general knowledge for his age of church functions, and he must make some article of religious design."

Cub Frandsen made a plaster-of-paris model of the famous "Praying Hands" sculpture, as well as a crucifix.

All members of Cub Pack 30 will attend the Mass and witness the presentation.

Jobless Still Many In U.S. Areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Economic Development Administration said Saturday that despite continuing growth in the national economy 849 communities and areas need federal aid to help meet the problems of unemployment and low income.

Announcement of the new list of qualified areas for the year starting July 1 was made by the Commerce Department, of which EDA is a part.

The announcement said 185 areas on the previous list have experienced economic improvement to the point that their unemployment rate has dropped below six per cent and therefore are no longer eligible for public works and business development assistance.

Governor Hopes House Will Kill DA Raise

By MILO DAKIN
World Legislative Writer

BATON ROUGE — Gov. John McKeithen has alienated many of the state's district attorneys with his decision to veto their pay raise bill which has already cleared the House and Senate.

But he is still hoping the House will pass a resolution doing the same thing and prevent him from having to exercise veto power.

The resolution is on the House calender and is scheduled to be pulled off Monday. But House members are disturbed over the proposal and it may be stuck into a committee.

With the legislature adjourning for the year Tuesday, time is running out. The resolution was introduced in the Senate Wednesday by Sen. Jamar Adcock of Monroe on behalf of the governor and passed without a dissenting vote. It stipulates that all pay increases for any state district, parish or municipal officer shall be suspended until a recommended pay raise for classified state employes is implemented.

This classified hike would cost approximately $16 million in funds which the state don't have.

Pay raise bills in this session including those for the state's 32 district attorneys would cost about $600,000. Adcock's resolution would kill them all.

If the House don't pass the resolution Monday or Tuesday however, it will be directly up to McKeithen whether to veto them or give his signature of approval.

He says they will be vetoed if the resolution fails in the House.

The Louisiana District Attorney's Association met in Baton Rouge Friday and unofficially declared war on McKeithen and the proposal.

Most of them want that $4,500 across-the-board pay raise which they stand to loose if the pay raises are suspended.

The inclusive pay raise bill passed the Senate 34-1 and the House 88-9. Of the nearly $600,000 involved, $144,000 would be for district attorneys.

They have promised to be in the capitol bright and early Monday morning when the last week of this session begins.

The House goes back in at 2 p.m. and the Adcock resolution will be one of the first items taken up.

The district attorneys are apparently trying to kill the resolution and put McKeithen on the spot by having to veto their pay raises. He had already promised to sign their bill if it passed the legislature, which it has.

But he told the House Thursday he had since realized the actue need for other salaried employes on state payrolls. Nurses at New Orleans Charity Hospital have been threatening to strike unless they are raised and this has been very instrumental in the governor's change of plans.

The $16 million pay raise recommended for classified employes would cover a nurses pay raise in charity hospitals.

Enrollment For Summer Set At Tech

RUSTON (Special) — Enrollment for the nine-week summer term at Louisiana Tech is set for Tuesday, with classes to begin the following day.

Dormitories will be open at 9 a.m. Monday for both men and women students.

Preceding registration day, orientation events for all new students are scheduled for Monday. These programs will begin with placement tests in mathematics from 10 to 12 a.m. in rooms 128, 132 and 133 of Bogard Hall, engineering building.

A convocation for new students will be held Monday from 1 to 1:30 p.m. in Howard Auditorium. Pat Briney of Alexandria, president of the Student Senate, will preside. On the program will be an address of welcome by Dr. F. Jay Taylor, Tech president.

Orientation events for Monday afternoon will include an assembly of commuting and Ruston women students, a meeting of men students interested in the Air Force ROTC and chemistry exemption examinations.

Tuesday, packets of registration material will be available in the foyer of Howard Auditorium for the following students:

Undergraduates enrolled for the 1967 spring semester who notified the registrar of their intention to attend summer school; graduate students enrolled for the 1966 summer session and the fall and spring of 1966-67; former students who have made application for readmission by May 30 and new students who have submitted application forms by May 30. Other students will report to the division of school and college services, room 206 of Keeny Hall.

Students will register in an alphabetical order Tuesday.

After obtaining their packets, students will report to their respective deans and then to their faculty advisers at various locations on the campus. Next they will go to the women's gymnasium to have their general information cards checked and to pay their fees. Then they will proceed to Adams Cafeteria to obtain their class cards and to turn in their material to representatives of the registrar.

Irate Village Shuns Voting As Revenge

ROME (AP) — After half a century of patient waiting, the little west Sicilian hill village of Pusillesi struck back indignantly Saturday against the state, charging it had been left like an abandoned orphan since before the days of fascism.

To a man, the villagers pledged they wouldn't vote in Sicilian regional elections June 11. They said they wouldn't even give a paper ballot to a state that had forgotten they existed.

At a town rally presided over by Don Albert di Stefano, their parish priest, the residents of the little village inland from Trapani vented their indignation and spelled out their reasons in this public resolution:

"Come winter or summer, about 600 people live here in Pusillesi. Aside from the parish house and the school — which were here even before fascism — and aside from the compulsory military service, the carabinieri and the taxes, there is no evidence here that a state exists.

"There is no light. Neither children nor adults know television. There is no garbage collection, and the trash piles up along the streets. There isn't even water, unless you go and haul it yourself from the only fountain the so-called Arab Quarter.

"Roads leading here are completely untended and are impassable by machine. Children are not required to stay in school until the age of 14. No newspapers get here, and the mail arrives at a place three miles away.

"The residents of Pusillesi intend to be respected better than this. They demand to be brought back into contact with the rest of the human race."

After agreeing to all that, the registered electors of the village filed up to the village hall and handed back their voting certificates.

Just the same, about three million other Sicilians are expected to go to the polls June 11 to elect their semiautonomous Regional Assembly.

NEW ORLEANS (Special) — Several students from the Northeast Louisiana area are among 174 receiving doctor of medicine degrees from Louisiana State University School of Medicine Saturday.

Joseph Michael Ribaudo, Alexandria, was the 3,000th physician to receive a degree at the school. Others from the area receiving degrees were James Rheuben Andrews, Homer; Herman Winston Brown Jr., Calhoun; George Standley Buckner Jr., Monroe; Fred Carroll Culpepper III, Monroe; Joseph Michael D'Angelo, Alexandria;

Douglas Loren Gamburg, Alexandria; Carolton Russ Greer, Oak Grove; Eleanor Claire Justice, Waterproof; Roy Arthur Kelly Jr., Monroe; John David Lee, Tallulah; Russell Thomas Lolley Jr., West Monroe; Ronald Harry Marrus, Jonesboro; Clyde Colvin McDonald, Haynesville;

William Proctor Newman III, Hodge; Roger Wayne Ortego, Alexandria; Oliver Alfred Williams, Mangham.

Among those receiving bachelor of science in nursing were: Dorothy Edma Coleman, Choudrant; Jan Freya Jensen, Winnfield; Maureen Ann Kelly, Monroe; and Barbara Jean Mitchell, Alexandria.

Inspection Trial Runs Are Held

In preliminary proceedings Saturday the voluntary inspection lanes scheduled to be offered free to the public on the 10th and 17th of this month received trial runs.

Inspecting automobiles belonging to Twin Cities police departments the professional mechanics utilized portable hydraulic jacks to conduct a through check of the vehicles.

Kick-off of the proceedings began with ribbon cutting ceremonies headed by Monroe Mayor W.L. Howard and West Monroe Mayor W.B. Hatten being assisted by IGO representatives Bob Jackson and Stan Boggs, president of the local Sertoma Club.

According to Jackson, Saturday's inspections were held to facilitate the 10th and 17th's running smoothly.

Conducted on a completely voluntary basis the inspections will include checking the auto's brakes, front and back lights, turn signals, stop lights, steering, tires, exhaust system, windshield wipers, mirrors and horn.

Working jointly the IGO and the local Sertoma Club plan to inspect vehicles on the two Saturdays in four Monroe shopping centers and two shopping centers in West Monroe.

Expected to handle as many as 350 cars per day the inspection lanes will be manned by mechanics and Sertoma Club volunteers.

Jackson, recently appointed by Gov. John J. McKeithen to the Louisiana Highway Safety Commission, created in April by an executive order of the governor's, said that the inspection results would have no compulsory results of any kind. 'We just want to prevent deaths," Jackson said.

Tech Gets Grant For Study Program

RUSTON (Special) — Louisiana Tech has been awarded a Federal grant to establish undergraduate and graduate programs in international studies, Senator Allen J. Ellender has disclosed. The new programs will be coordinated through Tech's Center for Comparative International Studies, directed by Dr. Ellis Sandoz.

A grant of $63,500 has been made for fiscal year 1967-1968 under terms of the Higher Education Act of 1965. The program approved will continue over a five year period and be supported by an estimated $700,000 in Federal funds.

Louisiana Tech will cooperate with Emory University of Atlanta, Ga., as well as with other universities in establishing the new program. Area and language study coverage will include curricula in American Studies, European Studies, Latin American Studies, and Slavic Studies. Present plans call for introduction of the American and European B. A. programs in the fall of this year. The M.A. program in American Studies is scheduled for introduction in the fall of 1968.

"Our new program will be both interdisciplinary and thoroughly comparative," Dr. Sandoz said. "It will directly involve faculty totalling 75 persons and teaching students at all levels — Freshmen to Graduate students — in every curriculum of the university.

"The value of interdisciplinary instructional programs is now well established," he continued. "To combine the interdisciplinary approach with the comparative one and to include within the frame of such a program both American and European studies curricula, as well as 'non-Western' Latin American and Slavic studies programs is the central thrust of the present plan. So far as I can determine, such a coordinated program of language and areas studies with emphasis upon comparative understanding would be unique both to our state and region. The nearest approach to it, to my knowledge, is at Indiana University. The prospet is exciting."

The "interdisciplinary" technique is the characteristic feature of all area and language study programs. It has come into prominence in American education since World War II. This approach to learning is organized around an area of the world, rather than around a discipline or subject field. Thus, a student interested in understanding America would study political science, economics, history, sociology, philosophy and literature in a coordinated program designed to maximize conversance with all aspects of the American heritage, way of life, and contemporary problems. Intensive foreign language instruction is a prominent part of the curricula in European, Latin American, and Slavic studies.

Governor Hopes House Will Kill DA Raise

By MILO DAKIN

BATON ROUGE — Gov. John McKeithen has alienated many of the state's district attorneys with his decision to veto their pay raise bill which has already cleared the House and Senate.

But he is still hoping the House will pass a resolution doing the same thing and prevent him from having to exercise veto power.

The resolution is on the House calender and is scheduled to be pulled off Monday. But House members are disturbed over the proposal and it may be stuck into a committee.

Puerto Rico Will Vote On Statehood In July

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI)—In Puerto Rico these days, you will occasionally meet a man with a pin in his lapel which reads "51." It means that he wants this island in the sun to become the 51st state of the United States.

The Puerto Ricans who wish to keep their present American citizenship are in the majority, but that does not mean there is a majority favoring statehood. The question of what Puerto Rico shall be underlies most other issues, and on July 23 the voters are going to the polls to express their preference.

Every weekend since January the politicians have been speaking the 100-mile length and 35-mile breadth of this Spanish-speaking, Caribbean island in favor of one of the three choices before the voters. The choices are the present "free associated state" linked the United States, U.S. statehood—or independence.

Over $2 million is likely to be spent in finding the answer, which, ironically, may not settle anything at all. Only the U.S. Congress can finally decide Puert Rico's fate. If, as expected, the status quo wins the plebiscite, no one thinks that the supporters of statehood and independence are going to give up struggling for their ideals.

WARNS OF VIOLENCE

A curious lethargy has affected the campaign in recent weeks. F.B.I. Director J. Edgar Hoover has made Puerto Rican leaders and police officials bristle, however, with a warning that the small leftist pro-independence groups which are boycotting the vote may try to touch off a "new wave of violence" as plebiscite day approaches.

The characters in the debate over the future are the people, arguing in town plazas in the evening, in weekend political meetings, in restaurants, offices and homes. But the issues are personified by men.

First of all, by Luis Munoz Marin, 69, El Vate (the bard), the most famous of all Puerto Ricans living or dead, famous son of a famous father, leader of the ruling Popular Democratic party. For Munoz, the plebiscite is a test for his life's work, because he was the originator of the present "free associated state of Puerto Rico," usually called the "commonwealth" in English.

A heavy-shouldered man with charisma and simplicity, he is trying to devote link with the United States. He travels throughout the island, speaking to groups of rural district leaders in small towns, addressing businessman's luncheons, persuading, explaining.

The "free associated state," or commonwealth, came into being in 1952. Under the arrangement, Puerto Rico has its own constitution, elects its own governor and legislature, collects its own taxes. Its products have free access to the huge American market. The currency it uses is American.

It is American territory, but does not have to pay American taxes, even though it receives millions in federal funds. America handles defense, and Puerto Ricans fight and die in Vietnam. The final arbiter of the island's affairs is the U.S. Congress.

Sitting at ease in his garden at Trujillo Alto near San Juan—grounds still heavily guarded by police since Puerto Rican nationalist terrorists tried to kill him, as well as then President Harry Truman, in 1950—Munoz talks of commonwealth and the plebiscite:

"My chief pride in commonwealth is that it is a new addition to federalism in the United States, and in the world. It can be infinitely adapted in a changing world.

"Therefore," he says with a smile, "I think that it should last forever—let's say as long as the Roman Empire."

He is always quick to add that it is capable of infinite adaptation within the framework of permanent association with them United States and American citizenship. That is the immutable framework.

While the Puerto Rican people could conceivably choose to opt for statehood in "25 or 30 years," he said, independence is in fact ruled out by the political facts of life in Puerto Rico.

"Ninety-five per cent of the people have voted in past elections in favor of association with the United States," he points out. "Those for independence are losing ground and the historical trend cannot be reversed. Independence is impossible."

Statehood, Munoz argues, would mean that Puerto Ricans and the industries which have found a tax haven here would immediately begin paying $300 million a year in federal taxes. It would mean the end of economic development and also perhaps the loss of Puerto Rico's cultural identity.

Per capita income in Puerto Rico rose from $376 a year in 1948 to $900 in 1965. It sitll ranks below the poorest American state, Mississippi, but above, for example, Mexico, Uruguay and Spain.

The rate of growth has ranged between 5 and 6 per cent a year in comparison to 4.4 per cent for Mississippi. The gross national product increased from $651 million to $2,757 million. A total of 1,027 new manufacturing plants were attracted to the island, prior to 1948 known mainly for sugar cane and coffee.

A commonly cited statistic here is that if all the people in the world were crowded into the mainland United States, it would have about the same density of population as Puerto Rico—752 to the square mile, slightly less than Belgium and Taiwan.

The population was estimated at 2,668,000 at the beginning of this year. With all the economic development, however, unemployment is still estimated at around 13 per cent, and at slack times of the year in the fields, as high as 20 per cent.

Should Puerto Rico become a state? The hopes of the people who think so are symbolized by Luis Antonio Ferre, 63, an industrialist from Ponce, the island's second city. An intense, highly respected man, Ferre is one of those who wears a "51" pin on his lapel. Three times unsuccessful candidate for governor, but with an increased vote each time, Ferre is the leader of the statehood forces in the plebiscite campaign under the banner of United Statehooders (U.S.). It is an odd fact that Ferre had to bolt the official statehood party, the Statehood Republican Party (PER), to lead his campaign, because its leader opposes participation in the plebiscite at all.

Ferre explained to UPI how he feels about statehood:

"I think that it is the duty of an American citizen to want for his territory a position of dignity and equality. We don't want our American citizenship at a discount, because it isn't dignified.

"We can't be American citizens with a real sense of equality unless we have equal duties and equal rights, including the right to vote for president and to elect members to Congress. Anything else is contrary to the principle of equality, which is the essence of American democracy."

In the plebiscite, Ferre thinks there is a chance statehood will win in spite of the predictions. Even if it should, however, he sees a necessary transition period of 8 to 10 years before statehood could become a fact, and if the U.S. Congress agrees.

OBJECT TO VOTE

If the statehooders are divided, the independence forces are splintered. Most of them are against the whole idea of the plebiscite, but an earnest, quiet-spoken professor of economics and statistics named Hector Alvarez Silva disagrees.

In defiance of his own Puerto Rico Independence party (PIP) and all the other independentistas ranging to the pro-Castro fringe, he is leading the independence forces in the plebiscite—with no illusions that he can win, but with determination to make the independence voice heard at the polls.

Anarchists Meet

CARRARA, Italy (AP) — Long-haired, old-togged, guitar-slung, they came by hundreds and thronged the Carrara streets Friday for Italian youth's first anti-everything rally. Everything but peace, that is.

Among them were Milan's "Beat World" and "Green Wave," Rome's "Knights of Nothing," Florence's "Beatnik Provos."

Woman Wants Her Man Well-Groomed

Hairstyling Fashion Trend

By PAT HERLEVIC
Staff Writer

For almost every rule there is an exception including the rule that little boys don't like to get their hair cut. After collecting 300 soft drink bottles one boy is known to have cashed them in for two cents each. He used the money to have his hair styled.

Hairstyling is one of the new trends in men's hair fashions today and the prediction is that long shabby hair is on its way out.

"In five years the men's hairstyling industry will compare and possibly surpass the women's hairstyling industry," according to Tony Sangermano, coach of the U.S. advanced barbering team that won first place in the Olympics of Men's Hairstyling in Brussels, Belgium, last year.

A complete hairstyling, said local barber Stanley Brister, includes a haircut, shampoo, set with styling gel, dry, comb and spray.

Why do men have their hair styled?

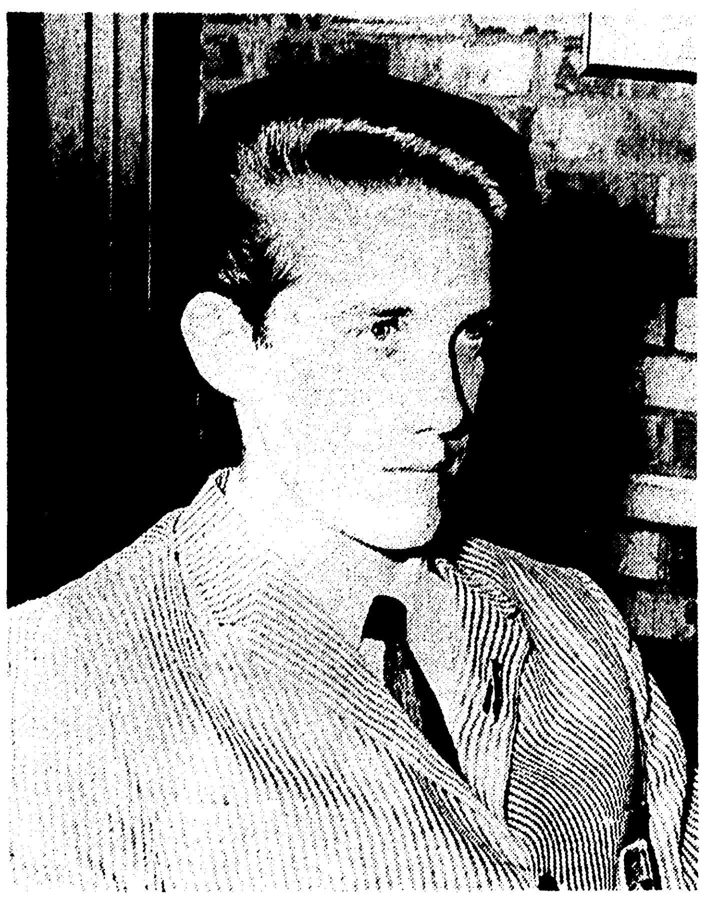
Through hairstyling a man can acquire a better appearance. Many features such as protruding nose, a long face or a round face can be "hidden" by having the hair style fit the features of the individual.

For who do men have their hair styled?

In most cases it is for women. Women already spend three to four times more in beauty salons than a man spends in barber shops and when she goes out with a man she is no longer content to have "her" man's hair in a disheveled and messy state. She wants him to have the continental look. To today's woman the manly man will be well-groomed, with a hair style suited to his own facial features.

The barber of today is educating and elevating himself and his profession in the community, helping him with this is the federal government. The first grant ever given a labor organization by the federal government to upgrade persons already employed was awarded to the International Journeymen Barbers Union. With the $267,000 the Union arranged to bring into a training session barbers from 30 cities scattered around the country.

According to a report by Victor Hood, administrator of the program for advanced training, in the April issue of the Journeymen Barbers, Hairdressers, Cosmetologist and Proprietors' International Union of America magazine, "Reports coming in to the International Headquarters indicate that those who took the training and put it to use in their shop increased their income more than $2,000 a year on the average. Many shops have been remodeled. Dealers have noted a sharp increase in the sale of supplies to shops where the "On the Job Training" program has been put to use."



AN UPCOMING HAIRSTYLE for today's style conscious man is this new backward sweep with a side flow to eliminate parting, worn by Benjy Russell. Hairstyling is a part of the advanced training barbers are now studying. (Staff Photo by Charles Kitchingham)

Hood also stated, "One barber, who is a member of our union and an OJT trainee, showed me his check for one week's employment in the amount of $291. He works in a hotel shop and his tips net him another $100 per week. You can't argue against results such as this!"

The chain - reaction training effort from this program was so great that the Barbers Union decided to extend the program. This took place in the form of regional training sessions. Each participant in this phase may qualify as a certified demonstrator who can conduct his own series of evening training sessions.

At the present such an advanced training session is now being conducted in Monroe by Brister. The course, attended by 15 area barbers, consists of four hour sesisions once a week for a period of nine weeks for a total of 36 hours. Subjects being taught include salesmanship, shear blending, hair straightening, hair coloring, hairpiece fitting and contour razor cutting (a razor cut causes the hair to interlock).

This advance training has called for new salons and sophisticated equipment. An example is a machine, which can analyze deficiencies in a strand of hair and which has a chart to suggest remedies.

"In the future a patron going into a barber shop may be referred to a specialist if he has a special hair problem such as graying or loss of hair much the same way that a general practitioner refers patients to medical specialists," Sangermano predicted. "This will give a person the best grooming treatment possible."

This advance in barbering has also caused an increase in men's cosmetics. Future products coming on the market, barbers say, will include a face powder for men similar to makeup for women with a corn base to keep perspiration from making it run. Clear nail polish for men is another new product.

Brister estimated that more of these cosmetics will be sold this year than in the past three years put together. These products will include hair relaxers, hair sprays, styling gels, color tints and hairpieces.

Other new In's and Out's of barbering were noted by Otis Johnson, another local barber. Long bushy hair is going Out, he said. The "full sweep style is coming In, the wave is Out and straight hair is In and bangs added.

No age bracket for having hair styled can be pinpoint. All ages of men are doing it, so if you are a male between six or 60, it's the "In" thing to do, or at least so they say.

DENY CHARGE

TOKYO (UPI)—A member of parliament charged Friday that U.S. troops on Okinawa are training Japanese, Korean, Filipino and Thai troops for guerrilla warfare.

A government spokesman denied the charge, made in the parliament by Seiichi Inaba, a Socialist.

Smoke Firms Air Protest To FCC Rule

WILSON, N.C. (AP)—Tobacco industry spokesmen Saturday voiced strong objection to a Federal Communications Commission order assuring free broadcast time to opponents of smoking comercials on radio and television.

The FCC said Friday stations broadcasting cigarette ads must provide air time to antismoking programs. The amount of time was not specified.

John D. Palmer, president of Tobacco Associates, which promotes overseas sales of tobacco, termed the FCC order "a flagrant violation to require radio and television stations to advertise against their supporters in this situation."

The FCC order said stations could try to sell time for the antismoking programs. But the order added that if no sponsor could be found, the time would have to be provided without charge.

Palmer said, "So far, not one human being, despite the millions of dollars spent by the government and tobacco companies, can be proved to have died from cigarette smoking."

Palmer said the ratio of money spent by the industry in research on smoking and health exceeds the government expenditure about four to one. He said until the facts are known, attacks on smoking are "without foundation."

"The alarming thing to me," said Palmer, "is just how far will the federal government go, not only in cigarette advertising but in other areas, in allowing Washington 'eggheads' to arbitrarily determine what is — or is not — in the public interest."

Thomas D. Miller of Miller Tobacco Co. and Fuller Dibrell of Wilson Tobacco Co. also said they felt the FCC order was discriminatory.

Miller said, "It is well and good to allow groups to use the various news media. However, they should be required to pay for the service."

Government reports have linked smoking with lung cancer.

Palmer said by extension of the FCC order"the freedom of press and speech — or anything else that concerns our day to day living — can be nullified."

He said, "Last weekend approximately 500 persons were killed on the nation's highways. It is entirely possible, at some future date, that firms accepting automobile advertising will be required to run material against the car industry."

Acadians A Tradition In Louisiana Sections

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) Deep in the southern Louisiana marsh country, where the winding bayous are shaded by moss-draped oak and cypress trees, lives a colorful, happy people whose star-crossed past is part myth and part reality.

The accent is French and, like champagne, bubbles up in a thousand diferent ways, deeply influencing almost all facets of life in Louisiana.

Their story began before this Nation was born, and perhaps the early sorrow and suffering left an abiding love of the good life that cannot help but be noticed by those who dwell for awhile in Cajun country.

Their ancestors were the first French refugees in America, those Acadians driven out of Nova Scotia more than two centuries ago by the British and depicted in Longfellow's "Evangeline."

BRITISH GET ACADIA

The series of French and English wars on the North American continent concluded in the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713, which gave Acadia to the British.

The Acadians, descendants of French pioneers, refused to take an unrestricted oath of allegiance to the British crown. and finally, years later, British threw them out of Nova Scota. They were loaded on boats and sent searching down the Atlantic coast.

Town after town did not want them — New Haven, Boston, New York, Hampton Roads, Charleston and Savannah. Some were permitted to stay in Philadelphia. Others struggled back to France.

Some who landed at Savannah and found themselves unwanted hear of St. James Parish in what is now Louisiana, where other French - speaking peoples lived. Others, refused entry at other places, heard of the spot in Louisiana, too, and they came — splintered families, tired, poor, by boat, by wagon, and on foot — owning nothing more than what they carried.

In this unexplored wilderness, the Acadians — or Cajuns, as they are sometimes called — started anew and built their own life with its own customs and close familiy ties, which survive in part today.

Some became farmers in the rice fields, others trappers slogging hip - deep through the marshes, or fishermen for crab and crayfish, shrimp and oystrs, or cane planters along the front of the big bayous, or moss gatherers secluded in the swamps.

The customs of these laughter-loving people spread outside the area as they mixed their blood and shared their "joie de vivre" with other French descendants, Spanish, Creoles, Indians and the few Americans in the region.

Their work hard, play-hard attitude bound them together, creating a strong sense of cooperation, and a certain clainnishness, stubbornness that had developed in earlier and rougher days.

And from 2500 Acadians in 1780, upwards of half a million Louisianaians today trace their ancestors back to that hardy group.

MUCH REMAINS, TOO

Much has changed, surely, but much remains — a unique culture in a swiftly changing land.

There are many young persons still in Louisiana who spoke Cajun French before they learned English. And at many family gatherings down around Lafayette, Breaux Bridge and Broussard the conversation will unconsciously lapse back into French while mama and the girls are putting together a sumptuous Sunday dinner in the kitchen.

Good cooking was and remains a trademark of the Acadians. Seafood, pork, beef and fowl became something special in the hands of the Cajun housewife as she adds that certain touch of seasoning.

Seasoning, just the right dab of this or that, is the thing that sets Cajun cooking apart. It remains out of the question in many homes to prepare a meal without an adequate supply of onions, garlic, bay leaf, celery, pepper — red, green, black and cayenne — parsley, shallots, basil, cloves, nutmeg, allspice, mustard and horseradish.

Some of the chefs in New Orleans' finest restaurants enhance their art with skill earned from a French Cajun heritage.

Numerous festivals throughout the state — rice, sugar cane, sweet potato, crayfish and shrimp — are flavored with Acadian tradition. Annual pirogue races in the spring and the blessing of the shrimp fleet each Labor Day give thousands a glimpse of a tradition dating back to Acadian fishermen in Nova Scotia.

The Cajun accent is pronounced and quite discernible among natives of the region. And when it is mixed with the Eatern Seaboard twang of native New Orleanians and the flat, hillish drawl of northern Louisianaians, a session of the State Legislature reminds one of the United Nations.

Marine Study

BRUSSELS (UPI) —A Belgian scientific expedition is enroute to Great Barrier Reef, off northeast Australia, to study marine fauna and flora and shoot 10 short scientific films. The expedition includes zoologists, botanists and cameramen. Sailing on a coastal patrol ship of the Belgian Navy, it is expected back in Belgium in February, 1968.

Episcopalian Wants Pope As Leader

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Episcopal Bishop C. Kilmer Myers, is making an appeal to Anglicans and Protestants to acclaim the Roman Catholic Pope "the chief pastor of the Christian family."

The leader of the Episcopal Diocese of California urged Christians to set aside centuries-old differences to foster "the unity of the human family."

In a sermon, prepared for delivery at the 11 a.m. Sunday service in Grace Cathedral, Bishop Myers urged that Pope Paul VI should "stretch out his arms in a loving gesture to all men, whether Christians or not."

"If the Pope will undertake this Christian amplification of his own real image," the bishop said, "we Anglicans and Protestants should consider most prayerfully our relationship to him.

"We should, I for one believe, acknowledge him as the chief pastor of the Christian family and we should joyfully acclaim him as the holy father in God of the universal Church.

"We need a holy father. We need a father who can speak and witness to the whole human race.

"We need someone to say, as chief pastor in Christ, that the worldwide community of Christians must exert its massive power to halt war and conflict in the world.

"We need a chief pastor who will lead us in the fight against poverty and the powerlessness of peoples in the earth."

Bishop Myers continued: "We Anglican and Protestant Christians ought to re-examine our relationship to the Holy See. In doing this, I am not suggesting that in any sense we abjectly crawl to the feet of the Pope to ask his forgiveness and acceptance.

"I have high hope that the present Pope — and his successors — will carve out a new role for the papacy in the modern world."

QUIETLY HAPPY

SOUTH OXHEY, England (UPI)—When they told Bill Martin last week he had won $38,920 in the Australian soccer pool, he whispered "hurray." Then he lapsed into a psychological silence which lasted seven days.

"I'm okay now," said Martin, 52.

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) Deep in the southern Louisiana marsh country, where the winding bayous are shaded by moss-draped oak and cypress trees, lives a colorful, happy people whose star-crossed past is part myth and part reality.

The accent is French and, like champagne, bubbles up in a thousand diferent ways, deeply influencing almost all facets of life in Louisiana.

Their story began before this Nation was born, and perhaps the early sorrow and suffering left an abiding love of the good life that cannot help but be noticed by those who dwell for awhile in Cajun country.

Their ancestors were the first French refugees in America, those Acadians driven out of Nova Scotia more than two centuries ago by the British and depicted in Longfellow's "Evangeline."

BRITISH GET ACADIA

The series of French and English wars on the North American continent concluded in the Treaty of Utrecht in 1713, which gave Acadia to the British.

The Acadians, descendants of French pioneers, refused to take an unrestricted oath of allegiance to the British crown. and finally, years later, British threw them out of Nova Scota. They were loaded on boats and sent searching down the Atlantic coast.

Town after town did not want them — New Haven, Boston, New York, Hampton Roads, Charleston and Savannah. Some were permitted to stay in Philadelphia. Others struggled back to France.

Some who landed at Savannah and found themselves unwanted hear of St. James Parish in what is now Louisiana, where other French - speaking peoples lived. Others, refused entry at other places, heard of the spot in Louisiana, too, and they came — splintered families, tired, poor, by boat, by wagon, and on foot — owning nothing more than what they carried.

In this unexplored wilderness, the Acadians — or Cajuns, as they are sometimes called — started anew and built their own life with its own customs and close familiy ties, which survive in part today.

Some became farmers in the rice fields, others trappers slogging hip - deep through the marshes, or fishermen for crab and crayfish, shrimp and oystrs, or cane planters along the front of the big bayous, or moss gatherers secluded in the swamps.

The customs of these laughter-loving people spread outside the area as they mixed their blood and shared their "joie de vivre" with other French descendants, Spanish, Creoles, Indians and the few Americans in the region.

Their work-hard, play-hard attitude bound them together, creating a strong sense of cooperation, and a certain clainnishness, stubbornness that had developed in earlier and rougher days.

And from 2500 Acadians in 1780, upwards of half a million Louisianaians today trace their ancestors back to that hardy group.

MUCH REMAINS, TOO

Much has changed, surely, but much remains — a unique culture in a swiftly changing land.

There are many young persons still in Louisiana who spoke Cajun French before they learned English. And at many family gatherings down around Lafayette, Breaux Bridge and Broussard the conversation will unconsciously lapse back into French while mama and the girls are putting together a sumptuous Sunday dinner in the kitchen.

Good cooking was and remains a trademark of the Acadians. Seafood, pork, beef and fowl became something special in the hands of the Cajun housewife as she adds that certain touch of seasoning.

Seasoning, just the right dab of this or that, is the thing that sets Cajun cooking apart. It remains out of the question in many homes to prepare a meal without an adequate supply of onions, garlic, bay leaf, celery, pepper — red, green, black and cayenne — parsley, shallots, basil, cloves, nutmeg, allspice, mustard and horseradish.

Some of the chefs in New Orleans' finest restaurants enhance their art with skill earned from a French Cajun heritage.

Numerous festivals throughout the state — rice, sugar cane, sweet potato, crayfish and shrimp — are flavored with Acadian tradition. Annual pirogue races in the spring and the blessing of the shrimp fleet each Labor Day give thousands a glimpse of a tradition dating back to Acadian fishermen in Nova Scotia.

The Cajun accent is pronounced and quite discernible among natives of the region. And when it is mixed with the Eatern Seaboard twang of native New Orleanians and the flat, hillish drawl of northern Louisianaians, a session of the State Legislature reminds one of the United Nations.

Marine Study

BRUSSELS (UPI) —A Belgian scientific expedition is enroute to Great Barrier Reef, off northeast Australia, to study marine fauna and flora and shoot 10 short scientific films. The expedition includes zoologists, botanists and cameramen. Sailing on a coastal patrol ship of the Belgian Navy, it is expected back in Belgium in February, 1968.

Episcopalian Wants Pope As Leader

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Episcopal Bishop C. Kilmer Myers, is making an appeal to Anglicans and Protestants to acclaim the Roman Catholic Pope "the chief pastor of the Christian family."

The leader of the Episcopal Diocese of California urged Christians to set aside centuries-old differences to foster "the unity of the human family."

In a sermon, prepared for delivery at the 11 a.m. Sunday service in Grace Cathedral, Bishop Myers urged that Pope Paul VI should "stretch out his arms in a loving gesture to all men, whether Christians or not."

"If the Pope will undertake this Christian amplification of his own real image," the bishop said, "we Anglicans and Protestants should consider most prayerfully our relationship to him.

"We should, I for one believe, acknowledge him as the chief pastor of the Christian family and we should joyfully acclaim him as the holy father in God of the universal Church.

"We need a holy father. We need a father who can speak and witness to the whole human race.

"We need someone to say, as chief pastor in Christ, that the worldwide community of Christians must exert its massive power to halt war and conflict in the world.

"We need a chief pastor who will lead us in the fight against poverty and the powerlessness of peoples in the earth."

Bishop Myers continued: "We Anglican and Protestant Christians ought to re-examine our relationship to the Holy See. In doing this, I am not suggesting that in any sense we abjectly crawl to the feet of the Pope to ask his forgiveness and acceptance.

"I have high hope that the present Pope — and his successors — will carve out a new role for the papacy in the modern world."

Guide To Good Reading

Genealogy Section Is Most Popular

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

One of the most popular sections at the Ouachita Parish Public Library is the genealogy section. It is widely used not only by our own people but by people from all over Northeast Louisiana and Southern Arkansas. Because a collection of this sort is highly specialized most of the other libraries in northeast Louisiana are not trying to build up a collection of their own. Each year they make a contribution to our collection, which helps us build up our holdings. Another cooperative project which we have is with Shreve Memorial Library in Shreveport. Each month they send us one card for each genealogy book which they add to their collection and we send them one card for each book we add to ours. These cards are filed in our respective card catalogs. If a patron wants a book which we do not have, they can check to see if Shreve has it. If they do, they can make a trip over there to use it.

In the past few weeks we have added a large number of genealogy books and today, my entire article is being devoted to them. First there are the general books such as "General Armory of England, Scotland and Wales" compiled by Sir Bernard Burke. We have a revised edition of "Fairbairn's Crests of Leading Families of Great Britain and Ireland" and a revised edition of John Hotten's "The Original Lists of Persons of Quality Who Came to the American Plantations." This revised edition has a much more complete index than the older edition. There is a list of the daughter of the Pilgrims and the Lineages of the Members of this Society and also a list of the members of the "Society of Colonial Wars, 1892-1967." We have recently added volumes six and eight of John Bennett Boddie's "Historical Southern Families" and Hugh McIlhany's "Some Virginia Families."

Most people in North Louisiana have ancestors who settled first in Virginia, so we are striving for complete coverage of this state. New books about Virginia are "They Went Thataway" volume two by Charles Hamlin, "Virginia Taxpayers, 1782-1787" compiled by Augusta Fothergill is a very useful volume. "Virginia Wills before 1799" by William Clemens is an excellent index of wills available. "Sketches of Virginia History and Biography" by William Henry Foote contains much new information.

If you know what county your ancestors came from in Virginia, there are many books on particular counties which can help you. New ones of this type are "Marriages of Orange County, Virginia, 1747-1810" compiled by Catherine Knorr, and "Early Wills of Lunenburg County, Virginia 1746-1866" compiled by Katherine B. Elliott. There are two new books about Pittsylvania County marriages. Catherine Knorr's book covers the period from 1676 to 1805 and Kathleen Willims' volume covers the period from 1806 to 1830. Then there is Joseph A. Waddell's "Annals of Augusta County, Virginia."

From Virginia the path of migration went in two directions. One was into West Virginia and into Kentucky. This was the route made famous by Daniel Boone. For those whose ancestors followed this trail there are such new books as "West Virginia Revolutionary Ancestors" compiled by Anne Walle Reddy and "Kentucky Pioneers and Their Descendants" by Ila Earle Fowler. There are three new volumes of "Kentucky Bible Records," "The Second Census of Kentucky, 1800" copied and arranged by Glenn Clift and "Kentucky Records, Early Wills and Marriages and Old Bible Records and Tombstone Inscriptions" by Julia Hoge Ardery.

The other route from Virginia was down into North Carolina and for those whose ancestors went into North Carolina a most useful index is "The Bertie Index: For the Courthouse Records of Bertie County, N.C." copied and indexed by Edythe Smith Dunston and "Bertie County Abstracts of Deed Books A.G. 1720-1753" compiled by Mary Best Bell. William Henry Foote has also written a volume of "Sketches of N.C., Historical and Biographical." There are two volumes about Edgecombs County by Ruth Smith Williams. One is "Tombstones and Census Records of Early Edgecomb" and the other is "Abstracts of the Wills of Edgecomb County."

From North Carolina, migration again took two routes. One of which was into Tennessee and then on into Arkansas. For those whose ancestors followed this route there are several new volumes "Tennesse Cousins" by Worth S. Ray, Records of "Davidson County Pioneers" and Overton County Pioneers" by Edythe Rucker Whitley, "Record of Rhea County" by Thomas Campbell and 'Abstracts of Will Books of Sumner County" by Edith Whitley and "Pioneers and Makers of Arkansas" by Josiah H. Shinn.

The other path from North Carolina led down into South Carolina, then through Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi to Louisiana. We have much material for this group, for this was the more popular route of migration. Many people skipped Georgia and went straight to Alabama. Others skipped Mississippi and came from Alabama straight to North Louisiana and there were many from all of these states who went to Texas just before or during the Civil War.

We have secured some very fine books about South Carolina. "History of the Old Cheraws" by Alexander Gregg is a gold mine of information. "Warrants for Land in S.C., 1672-1679" by Alexander S. Salley is very useful. We have the complete set of "Stub Entris to Indents Issued in Payment of Claims Against South Carolina Growing Out of the Revolution." If an ancestor is listed here, this is accepted as proof for D.A.R. membership. "Gone to Georgia" by William C. Stewart is a font of information about people who travelled through the Pendleton District of South Carolina to Jackson and Gwinnett Counties of Georgia.

Alabama is represented by three volumes: "Alabama Source Book, Vol. I" by Flora England contains much valuable material. "Revolutionary Soldiers in Alabama" Volume 2" is a very useful tool and there is also Nelle Jenkins's "Pioneer Families of Sumter County. We have four new bound volumes of "The Journal of Mississippi History." Finally we reach our own state of Louisiana about which there are two volumes: "Historic Cotile" by Patsy K. Barber and "Calendar of La. Colonial Documents, Vol. 3, Part 1." "The D'Arensbourg Records, 1734-1769." This book deals with St. Charles Parish and of course these people did not follow the paths of migration which I have mentioned, but were of French and German descent. Last of all there is a reprint of the "Texas Almanac, 1857-1873" which is a compendium of Texas History.

THE STATUE OF A WEEPING WOMAN stands on the site of the destroyed Czech village of Lidice, while in the background is Novy (New) Lidice, built after the end of World War Two. From all over the world people raised money to rebuild the Czechoslovakian village, leveled by Nazis on June 10, 1942, after the men had been murdered and the women and children sent to concentration camps. The events which led to the Nazis' action are recounted in documents in the memorial museum on the site. The massacre and destruction of the village were in reprisal for the assassination in nearby Prague of Nazi SS Gen. Reinhard Heydrich, governor of that area of occupied Czechoslovakia. Three pictures in the center grouping show: Top left: Car in which Heydrich was wounded fatally by a bomb thrown by Czech resistance fighters. Top right: Closeup of car. Center: Bicycle on which one of the assassins escaped. All three were killed in a siege of their hiding place. Bottom: Reward posters. At right are the ruins of Horak house, razed along with the rest of the village. The men of the village were locked up in it by Nazi police, then taken out in groups of 10 and shot. New Lidice Stands Where Old Village Razed, Men Killed

By MARTIN ZUCKER

NOVY LIDICE, Czechoslovakia (AP) —Marie Dolezalova, one of the survivors, stopped hacking at the weeds and gestured at the surroundings with a sweep of her rake.

"For our 25th memorial day all the grass will be green," she said.

The ground she pointed to was a gentle, grassy hillside with a few rocky ruins and a little creek at the bottom. Once it was Lidice, Czechoslovakia.

On June 10, 1942, Nazi police murdered the men of Lidice, sent the women and children off to concentration camps and then razed the village.

YOUNG, OLD SHOT

A total of 173 men-the oldest 84, the youngest 15, and including the father of Marie Dolezalova - were lined up against a wall and shot. Nineteen men from Lidice working the night shift in a nearby mine were rounded up and also shot. Marie's 15 - year - old brother was among them.

The 200 women of the village were dispatched to Ravensbrueck concentration camp and never knew what happened to their men until they were told after their liberation in 1945. The three - year ordeal was survived by 143, who then returned to Czechoslovakia.

Of 104 children, only 17 came back. Eighty - two are believed to have been killed in the gas chambers of the Chelmmo concentration camp.

Marie Dolezalova was one of the 17. Then a girl of 9, she and eight other children passed Nazi "racial tests" and were sent off to live with German families.

Now a woman of 34 with a husband and 12-year-old daughter, she works at the Lidice Memorial, tending the grass, trimming the roses and selling literature to visitors.

How she escaped gassing is a mystery to her.

The children were taken to Litzmannstadt - now Polish Iodz - and qualification tests performed on them. For one, their heads were measured.

"I can't explain why, but I was picked for Germinazation," Marie told a recent visitor. "My hair was and still is dark, not blonde, and my eyes gray, not blue.

"I was sent off to Posen - now Polish Pozman - and lived two years with a German family there. Then we moved to Boizenburg on the Elbe River. I was still there after the war when a refugee organization, searching for the children of Lidice, found me.

Until June 1942, Lidice was a quiet, rural place, 12 miles west of the capital of Prague and two miles from the mining center of Klado. Its peasants had tilled their land for 600 years and many of its men toiled in the nearby mines and iron works.

Suddenly the world knew of Lidice.

Miners in Great Britain started a "Lidice shall live" campaign and collected over $90,000 to be used for the resurrection of the village after the war.

In Latin America, there was a wave of sympathy. San Jeronimo in Mexico, a small village also, renamed itself Lidice. Squares, villages and streets in Brazil, Venezuela, Cuba, Peru, Ecuador, Chile, Panama and Uruguay were named after Lidice.

After the war, the Czechoslovakia Republic made reconstruction one of its first duties and when the Communists took over the government is 1948 they finished the job.

Today, Novy Lidice straddles a hilltop overlooking the remains of the old.

The 150 red-roofed buildings of the new Lidice present a pleasant picture of a small, modern community — a sharp contrast to the old, weather faces of surrounding villages.

The population is nearly 500, one-third of which is children of school age. Homes have been given to those who survived. They need pay only fuel and electricity. Some of the women remarried. The surviving children, now adults, are married and have families of their own. As before, many of the men work in the Kladno mines.

Of the old village, a few stone foundations are all that is left to see. One is the Horak house, where the 173 men were locked up by the Nazis and then taken out back and shot.

Higher up the slope is a memorial museum and a rose garden with 29,000 bushes from 34 nations.

Psychiatrists' Meeting 'Unconventional'

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

DETROIT (AP)—Psychiatry, it has been said, is an inexact science. Psychiatrist-watching, it must be said, is even more imprecise.

"I think they look at me differently than other men at a convention," said the blonde bunny at the Playboy Club, who had much to look at.

"With the psychiatrists, I don't get the feeling I might have to jump quickly. But I do get the feeling they're analyzing me."

The girl was only partly right. The doctor looking at her had the same thoughts any other conventioneer has away from home, but he was likely to become an activist. He looked at her long legs, at her low-cut bodice.

"It's nice to see you're so glad you're a girl," he said, and turned back to his colleagues, to an intensive discussion of the psychodynamics of a recent pathological murder in Detroit.

WEEK OF WATCHING

On the basis of an exhaustive week of psychiatrist-watching 6,000 shrinks at the 123rd annual convention of the American Psychiatric Association-it can now be said with considerable authority that psychiatrists do not act like other poople in convention assembled.

They make less noise. They don't slap backs. They don't wear funny hats. They don't chase girls down hotel corridors or leer in elevators. They drink, but they drink quietly. They do not, as a rule, come to a convention with an implicit sense, or hope, of sin. They are very square. They dance with their wives to Guy Lombardo. They even ask him for his autograph.

They like free-loading as well as the next man, at cocktail parties, in hospitality suites, at the exhibition booths where drug merchants give away sample tranquilizers and antidepressants. But they do not systematize their grabbing after samples, "Not like at the AMA," said a veteran of various medical conventions, "where some doctors come armed with shopping bags."

LESS BASIC

In some ways, psychiatrists at a convention are less basic than many basic scientists at a convention.

"The psysicists, the biochemists, the professors of internal medicine, the deans of medical colleges," said the dean of a Midwestern medical college, "like to go to honky-tonks, the girlie joints, where the general atmosphere is one of sexuality.

"Not the psychiatrists. They're so serious. They go to meetings from morning to night. I guess it's because, in their practice at home, they listen to so many tales of lust, rape, perversion, sin, they begin to experience something vicariously that kills off the zeal."

Dr. Jolien West, professor of psychiatry at the University of Oklahoma, has a different theory.

He says: "I've been to lots of annual meetings-educational, military, business-and it embarrasses me to report that the mildest, the most sedate, the best behaved boy scouts are the psychiatrists. Being less inhibited, you might think they'd be swingers."

"Not so," Dr West continued "That's because their profession requres them to constantly evaluate their own behavior and feelings. People who carry on at conventions are acting out feelings they don't understand. But a psychiatrist is unlikely to be able to deceive himself. Before he raised some hell, he'd ask himself, 'What am I trying to prove?' And then he'd decide he wasn't interested."

Psychiatrists don't spend their time at conventions analyzing each other. However, said a New York analyst, "they can't help noticing, out of habit, the more obvious peaks of their other fellow's personality, the way a jeweler looks at another man's ring or a tailor notes somebody's suit."

And they, the head doctors, are not above using the subtleties of their trade during debate, which can get heated.

At one panel discussion here, which drew an overflow crowd for a highly clinical seminar on "The Problem of Sex Today," Dr. Natalie Shainess of New York was attacking the recent Masters-Johnson study of the physiology of sex, such studies, she said, were contributing to a mechanistic view of sex.

Dr. Harold I. Leif of New Orleans questioned her documentation.

Dr. Shainess cited her own experience as an analyst and, to laughing applause, "as a woman."

She disputed Masters-Johnson on the question of certain erogenous reactions to which an elderly doctor, standing against a side wall, shouted, "Hear! Hear!"

Then, with a broad smile, Dr. Shainess said, "I can't help wondering why Dr. Leif's skepticism is turned toward me rather than the Masters-Johnson report."

LIKE QUICK KICK

The casual visitor senses that in psychiatric argument this sudden attempt to turn the other fellow in on himself by wondering out loud about his motivation resembles the quick kick in football, and works about as often.

The head doctors themselves can get mildly impatient with this gambit.

At a recent early morning panel, the psychiatrists dissected two plays from the theatre of the absurd, with which they had been entertained the night before.

Cape Kennedy World Tourist Center

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Like the door-to-door brush salesman, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has learned that personal contact is the best way to sell its product to the public.

Only instead of NASA going into people's homes, the public is beating a path to NASA's door here. Every day, seven days a week, tourists flock to Cape Kennedy by the hundreds - usually thousands. They come as individuals, families, school classes and civic organizations from all 50 states and more than 50 foreign nations - including the Soviet Union.

Cape Kennedy has become more than the jumping platform to the moon. It is also one of the biggest tourist attractions in Florida and is fast approaching the day when it will be one of the most popular tourist stops in the entire United States.

WANT TO ACCOMMODATE

"We want to accommodate the public as long as they don't interfere with our mission," said Gordon Harris, chief of public affairs at NASA's Kennedy Space Center.

This is a nice way of saying that people are welcome as long as they don't disrupt work. Sightseeing buses, for example, are kept out of the spaceport during rush - hour traffic periods and steered away from busy launch sites.

"It's my own estimate we will reach a peak within the next year in terms of numbers of people we can carry on buses without interfering with operations," Harris said.

Trans World Airlines, under contract to NASA, runs sightseeing buses through the spaceport every day between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. EDT. Each tour lasts about 2 hours, 15 minutes.

Brochures, tape recordings en route and the bus drivers keep visitors abreast of what they are seeing along the tour route. A stop is included at the Saturn Vehicle Assembly Building, the world's largest building, where massive Saturn 5 man - to - the - moon rockets are assembled.

Stops also are usually made at the Apollo Simulator Building, where the spacecraft training device is located that astronauts use to rehearse upcoming space flights, and the Air Force's Space Museum, where military missiles are on display.

EXHIBIT AT ENTRANCE

Even if they don't want to take time for the tour, visitors can see an exhibit of NASA hardware at the entrance to the moon launch area. The exhibit includes a one - man Mercury spaceship and the type of Redstone rocket that launched America's first astronauts.

By July 1968, NASA hopes to replace this exhibit with a visitor information center - a million - dollar building to house space hardware and displays, twin theaters for viewing motion pictures, a snack bar and other facilities.

Cost of the bus tour is $2.50 for adults, $1 for youths between 12 and 18 years old, and 50 cents for children under 12. Infants up to 2 years old are admitted free. There is also a special military rate of $1.25 for persons on active duty.

Space agency officials assure they are not making a profit, but assess the charge to defray expenses of operating the buses.

The tours got off to a fair financial start when they first began July 22, 1966. After Labor Day, however, schools opened again and vacationers went home.

OPERATION DEFICIT

"The operation sustained a sizeable deficit for the period Sept. 1 through mid - December," Harris said. Attendance then increased, however, and has continued steadily rising in popularity.

As many as 4,300 persons toured one day during the Christmas holidays and more than 3,000 were handled every day during Easter vacation. TWA predicts patronage will increase sharply during the remainder of 1967 and has begun phasing in a larger fleet of improved buses to handle up to 5,000 persons daily.

According to NASA records, two of every three tourists who visit the spaceport live outside Florida, and more than 70 per cent of the tourists are adults.

In a survey made before the tours started, the National Park Service predicted the number of tourists would increase annually to a peak of three million in 1970, based on the assumption American astronauts would rocket to the moon about that time.

THE STATUE OF A WEEPING WOMAN stands on the site of the destroyed Czech village of Lidice, while in the background is Novy (New) Lidice, built after the end of World War Two. From all over the world people raised money to rebuild the Czechoslovakian village, leveled by Nazis on June 10, 1942, after the men had been murdered and the women and children sent to concentration camps. The events which led to the Nazis' action are recounted in documents in the memorial museum on the site. The massacre and destruction of the village were in reprisal for the assassination in nearby Prague of Nazi SS Gen. Reinhard Heydrich, governor of that area of occupied Czechoslovakia. Three pictures in the center grouping show: Top left: Car in which Heydrich was wounded fatally by a bomb thrown by Czech resistance fighters. Top right: Closeup of car. Center: Bicycle on which one of the assassins escaped. All three were killed in a siege of their hiding place. Bottom: Reward posters. At right are the ruins of Horak house, razed along with the rest of the village. The men of the village were locked up in it by Nazi police, then taken out in groups of 10 and shot. New Lidice Stands Where Old Village Razed, Men Killed

By MARTIN ZUCKER

NOVY LIDICE, Czechoslovakia (AP)—Marie Dolezalova, one of the survivors, stopped hacking at the weeds and gestured at the surroundings with a sweep of her rake.

"For our 25th memorial day all the grass will be green," she said.

The ground she pointed to was a gentle, grassy hillside with a few rocky ruins and a little creek at the bottom. Once it was Lidice, Czechoslovakia.

On June 10, 1942, Nazi police murdered the men of Lidice, sent the women and children off to concentration camps and then razed the village.

Their hatchet swoop was reprisal for the assassination in Prague by Czech resistence fighters of Nazi SS Gen. Reinhard Heydrich, deputy chief of the Gestapo and governor of the occupied Czechoslovak regions of Bohemia and Moravia.

YOUNG, OLD SHOT

A total of 173 men-the oldest 84, the youngest 15, and including the father of Marie Dolezalova - were lined up against a wall and shot. Nineteen men from Lidice working the night shift in a nearby mine were rounded up and also shot. Marie's 15 - year - old brother was among them.

The 200 women of the village were dispatched to Ravensbrueck concentration camp and never knew what happened to their men until they were told after their liberation in 1945. The three - year ordeal was survived by 143, who then returned to Czechoslovakia.

Of 104 children, only 17 came back. Eighty - two are believed to have been killed in the gas chambers of the Chelmmo concentration camp.

Marie Dolezalova was one of the 17. Then a girl of 9, she and eight other children passed Nazi "racial tests" and were sent off to live with German families.

Now a woman of 34 with a husband and 12-year-old daughter, she works at the Lidice Memorial, tending the grass, trimming the roses and selling literature to visitors.

How she escaped gassing is a mystery to her.

The children were taken to Litzmanstadt - now Polish Iodz - and qualification tests performed on them. For one, their heads were measured.

"I can't explain why, but I was picked for Germinazation," Marie told a recent visitor. "My hair was and still is dark, not blonde, and my eyes gray, not blue.

"I was sent off to Posen - now Polish Pozman - and lived two years with a German family there. Then we moved to Boizenburg on the Elbe River. I was still there after the war when a refugee organization, searching for the children of Lidice, found me.

Until June 1942, Lidice was a quiet, rural place, 12 miles west of the capital of Prague and two miles from the mining center of Klado. Its peasants had tilled their land for 600 years and many of its men toiled in the nearby mines and iron works.

South And 1968 Election

A veteran Dixie Democratic Congressman said recently it is possible a new political coalition strong enough to control the outcome of national elections can be produced in the South. Surely, that is a worthy objective, since the South is the principal area in the nation which continually insists upon the preservation of states' right and upon local self-control in government.

Representative Robert L. F. Sikes pointed out that previous efforts had been made in the South to change the course of political out-comes but called attention to the fact that conditions are different now.

One of the things that has given a recent jolt to Southerners who want a return to national fiscal responsibility and to local control over local affairs was a newspaper analyst's report that Governor George Romney of Michigan is seeking an alliance with Governor Ronald Reagan of California in the hope of gaining the Republican nomination for President in 1968. The report made it sound as if Reagan might be receptive to the idea.

This is one of the last things Southern conservatives want. In this part of the nation, Romney is one of the least popular of the Republicans aspiring for the nomination. He is regarded as a "me-too" man who wouldn't do much of anything different from the way it is being handled by President Johnson's administration. If anyone simply wants more of the same, the question "What change?" could naturally be asked.

In his announced policy and in his administration of affairs in California, Regan has more nearly approached the South's concept of home rule than have most of the other Republican hopefuls, including Romney. If Reagan were to form an alliance with Romney for the sake of getting the vice-presidential nomination, the enthusiasm of the people of the South would be greatly dulled. A reversal of the proposed ticket, with Reagan at its head, would be far more acceptable, although there still would not be much enthusiasm for Romney.

In his statement that the South might play a big role in controlling the outcome of national elections, the congressman said the aim of any such efforts would be to prevent any presidential candidate from receiving an Electoral College majority and thus to force the election into the House of Representatives, "where," he said, "each state has one vote.

Sikes continued:

"If such action could be taken constructively, it would be worthy of consideration. It could force the acceptance of moderation by both major parties.

"Southern votes should never be used in a negative way, simply to hold back progress, but there is a possibility that they can be used in the right way to insure the right kind of progress."

Sikes suggested it would be well for Southerners to take a close look at the policies set forth by former Governor George C. Wallace of Alabama and Governor Lester Maddox of Georgia.

"Their position seems closer to constitutional beliefs — as we in the South see them — than that of many others," he said. "They have continually insisted upon preservation of states' rights and upon local self-government. These views I consider very desirable, and regretfully they are fast disappearing."

Sikes said his suggestion that Southerners consider policies of Wallace and Maddox does not necessarily mean a third party movement.

"Such support," he said, "could very well be given within the existing Democratic party. In any event, it appears that now is the time for clarification of the objectives in order to avoid confusion which attends party conventions.

"The trend toward a liberal Republican party," he continued, places a Southern Congressman in a difficult position. Most of us believe first consideration should be to preserve our nation and its constitution, both of which we think are being endangered by present-day trends in government."

We can see only a worsening situation if the Democrats win the next presidential election. If President Johnson should win, he would consider it a mandate to apply the principles of his so-called Great Society with full force. That would mean further losses of states' rights and local controls and of individual freedom. If, by a remote chance, Robert Kennedy should maneuver President Johnson out of the Democratic presidential nomination and should gain it for himself and should then win the election, it is difficult to see how we could long escape a complete dictatorship.

Since both parties have long chosen to ignore the South to a large extent in making their campaigns, it seems to be up to the South to use its power in the most effective manner possible.

Although the South probably won't be able to do much at the Democratic national convention, other than to prevent the nomination of Robert Kennedy, it might have a far greater influence on the Republican convention by convincing delegates that the only way the Republicans can win is to nominate a man who more nearly conforms to the home-rule and conservative views of the South.

Reuther's New Route

Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, who has been feuding a good many months with George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, in an effort to get a new organization that would give him more power, now is reported to be "decommitting" himself from President Johnson.

Some of the few who have talked recently with the embattled auto union chief report he is slowly, methodically and quietly maneuvering so he can remain neutral or back a peace ticket in 1968.

Reuther probably cares as little as the next man about whether we quit the war in Vietnam or start a war in defense of Israel but he has a reason that, to him, is good enough for withdrawing his support of President Johnson. Meany, with whom Reuther is carrying on a powerful labor struggle, has already endorsed Johnson for re-election. Naturally, Reuther thinks he can't fight Meany by going along with him.

The Detroiter's first move to "decommit" himself from President Johnson was to refuse to pay the auto union's quota of dollars into the AFL-CIO coast-to-coast political network known as COPE (Committee on Political Education). Heretofore the United Auto Workers have contributed about $100,000 annually, on the record, to COPE. Actual contributions may have been larger.

This year the red-headed firebrand of the American labor movement is putting his boycott into effect just at the time COPE is starting to whip into gear the machinery leaders believe necessary to re-elect Johnson — in one of the toughest campaigns any incumbent has ever contemplated.

The sudden shift of the Vietnam "doves" to the "hawk" side in the Middle East situation may leave Reuther wondering just where his anti-war campaign is carrying him but is not likely to affect his attitude toward contributing to the Johnson campaign fund.

The national flower of Finland is the lily of the valley, selected by popular referendum in 1966.

The motto of the state of Kansas is Ad astra per aspera (to the stars through difficulties).

The motto of the state of Washington is Al-Ki, an Indian word meaning "bye and bye."

The motto of the state of California is Eureka, meaning "I have found it."

We cannot afford to let our schools suffer in this day of destiny. Our public school system has helped make this one of the greatest nations of all time.

Being chairman of the Police and Traffic Committee of the West Monroe Chamber of Commerce has made me see the need of our cities for more money. The starting salary of a patrolman in West Monroe is so low I am not going to give it in this story. The board of directors voted to approve a recommendation by the committee to back up the mayor and city council for a raise. This sales tax will give the city more money to do these things.

A sales tax is the most fair tax of all taxes. We all pay and feel a part of the benefits received by the tax. This will be an opportunity for all our people to have a part in parish and city governments and also in our fine schools.

Liquor Tax Profits

Newellton, La.

To the Editor

I read recently in the Morning World that our Stage budget Committee in estimating the state's income for the coming year figures that the state will take in about $7,000 more in the coming year in revenues from the sale of hard liquor than they did the past year.

They plan to spend $365,000 more in caring for alcoholics and other problems associated with or created by the sale of hard liquor.

If our state can operate on this kind of profits, I wonder if they would be interested in buying my logging outfit.

Why aren't more south Vietnamese in combat? According to the papers, Americans are furnishing about 99 per cent of the fighting men, and the Vietnamese engage in very little combat. They betray Americans, profiteer off the soldiers, steal from them, and also steal military supplies, and do every thing else they can, to get ahead at our expense. They lead a safe, normal, life, and couldn't care less how many G I s are killed. They can't even agree on their military commanders, or even a civilian government of their own. Why do our political, and military commanders keep on permitting such goings on? I spent 37 months in world war II, about half of it in combat in an infantry division, and have a son in-law in service now. I also have a son, who can look forward to the same thing in the future. This no win situation, as it now exists, literally makes me sick on my stomach. Let's all get together, and write to our Representives, Senators congressmen, Governors, and President, about this intolerable situation. If enough people will speak up, I think we can remedy at least a part of this sickening situation. After all, we elect these officials, and should feel free to ask them to do something, about the sad situation we've gotten into in Vietnam.

And another thing, why, and how, can our government let a "black power", black muslim, draft dodger, like Cassius Clay, dodge the draft, just because he has the millions of dollars to keep going thru the courts. Why can't he be drafted, just like every one else? When I was drafted, in 1942, if I had failed to take the oath, as Clay did, I would have been sent to the Federal Pen at Fort Leavansworth, Kansas so fast it would have made my head swim.

I am not a race monger by any means, and have several Negro friends. However, I am a segrationist, and I am for separate, but certainly, equal, school, and other public facilities, such as pools and churches. If our beloved civil rights leaders, such as Chief justice Warren, and all of the other do gooders, really want to do a job, and do it right, let them build schools that would be designated as intergrated, and let anyone who wants to, attend these places, instead of forcing Negroes to go to white schools, and white teachers teach in Negro schools. In other words, let's have three kinds of facilities. Some for all white, some for Negro, and integrated ones, so that people who want to mix racially will be free to do so.

And one other thing, why should we vote for a one cent sales tax increase, which will surely help Earl Warren's cause, as much, if not more than the under paid school teachers and other public servants. After all, no one has yet said exactly where this money will all be allotted. We have some vague figures, and that's all.

Mayors Hatten, and Howard, were quoted in the May 29 News Star, as saying, "The Cities Are Not Broke". And it was stated editorally, that this tax would produce approximately $5.2 million annually. Yet, only $3.1 million is to be distributed to schools, for teachers, and other personnel. The remaining $2,007,758 is to be divided among Police Juries, and Municipalities. It is not pledged to any one particular project. It will be a slush fund, to be dished out as Politicians see fit. The Big Man will get fat pay raises, and the Little Man, collecting trash, reading meters, and digging ditches, will probably get a Five Dollar a week raise, if he is lucky. I am not against a just, fair, tax, to be distributed fairly, where it is needed. But this tax as it is now being planned, is not fair, and as I see it, it will be nothing but a political football. You show me a reasonable tax, and tell me exactly how it will be spent, and I will get behind it 100 per cent. Otherwise, I am against it. I voted for Cooley, Glenwood and other parish property taxes, because I knew where the money was going. But honestly, I just can not agree on this proposed one cent sales tax. Can You?

Negro Farmers

Monroe La.

To the Editor

I am a Negro residing in the Fifth Congressional District since February 2, 1929 less time served in World War II. I read with interest your editorial on "Negro Farmer Vanishing" in Tuesday, May 23rd issue of Monroe Morning World.

I can write a brief outline of why the Negro farmer is vanishing. I was raised on a farm where my uncle did business with a white merchant and doctor. His bill was always so much cotton in bales — not dollars and cents. Is that a reason to farm (and my uncle owned his land.) I could see through that as a ten year old boy and tried to show him. But he died feeling that man was honest to him. My uncle couldn't read or write.

I decided at age 17 in the year 1935 I'd make a try on my own. So I went to a white farmer as a wage hand at $15.00 per month and board. I slept in a house, with mattress, springs, one sheet and one quilt for 2½ months. No changes in bedding and bathed in a branch. I got one months pay and 1½ months later I asked the man for my other pay. He got out of his truck, hit at me with a stick of cooking wood and said "don't no nigger ask me for no money." Is that a reason for the vanishing Negro farmer? In 1936 I worked as a sharecropper and made 8 bales of cotton that brought $14.10 to $14.25 per CWT. I ate rabbits, coons, wild hogs and very little other meat. I was supposed to have borrowed $100.000. I made 240 bu. corn plus cottonseed. I just had overalls, jumper work shoes and unions for underwear. No wife — and I barely broke even. I took gin numbers of cotton from my tract and when I asked for it I was told I never had no D— cotton. Is that a reason for the vanishing Negro farmer? In 1939 I hired out to a good white man to lay by a crop. I was to receive $20.00 per month and board. I didn't smoke or drink so I bought a $25.00 suit, $4.00 shoes my first two months there. One half month later I was told by the white man "he'd be d— if he could work a nigger that worked for him and wore better clothes than he had." There I slept in a corn crib, ate in the yard and was fit to do his work but not go in his house. Is that a reason for the vanishing Negro farmer?

I am yet an uneducated Negro that is a respected citizen where I live and detests a farm — unless a person, white or Negro, is educated enough to run it and manage his own affairs. I've only seen one plantation that told the Negro what he bought — itemized, plus dollar value of cotton, seed, corn or what have you. World War II caused the big mass migration off the farm. Even to the sawmill at the old commissary was better than the farm that read on settlement day as follows: "Joe or Jim you never quite broke even, but whatever you need you can still get it." So the reason bascially is the Negro farmer vanished because he wanted to work at even the lowest paid jobs where he would get his money. Mechanization isn't the cause of it. The reason is a tractor driver, loading or skidding logs, can get $15.00 per day, so why drive farm tractors for $5.00. I am sure that being editor you can in your heart say I've told the truth. I could drive the old Farmall, John Deere and Fordson I drove them 31 years ago. And if you print it in your paper I'll read it as I arise looking for your paper as a cash buyer. I'm not crying at your point of view. I only hope I gave you an answer.

Postal Workers

Bastrop, La.

To the Editor

In reference to an article which appeared in your paper Friday, May 19 1967, I wish to convey to you my disgust.

The article pertained to the income of postal workers. The author stated completely without foundation, that the average postal worker is paid $7,500 per year or $3.60 per hour. This might come as something of a shock to one of my fellow employees who has been employed as a postal worker for 20 years and is presently receiving $3.35 per hour. The "average" postal employee would be one who has in far fewer than 20 years of postal service.

The author also commented on the big turnover of postal employees. Could this be because the average pay of a postal employee is less than the starting pay of a garbage collector in some large cities?

I was particulary irritated by his report that some workers take 10 seconds to read an address. This would be six letters per minute. If he had taken time to check, he would have discovered that there is a minimum requirement of many times this figure.

Summing up, I believe this article was intended to mislead the public at a time when postal workers are seeking a raise.

Please print this letter to try to counter-act some of the harm done by this misleading article.

High Court Nullifies U. S. 10th Amendment

THE TENTH AMENDMENT to the United States Constitution ordinarily is remembered, when it is remembered at all, as the "States' rights" amendment. The term is a misnomer. It ought properly to be known as the "reserved powers" amendment, but in the light of last Monday's Supreme Court decision in the California case, we may refer to it henceforth simply as the Discarded Tenth.

Until last Monday, many of us truly had believed that not even the Warren court could fail to honor the explicit meaning of the Tenth. What the amendment says is that all powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively "or to the people."

Those last four words strike to the very heart of popular government. Destroy them, and the structure falls. What the court held on Monday is that the people of California, exercising their ultimate sovereignty, no longer have the power to amend their own State Constitution in order to proclaim an elementary statement of property rights. Five members of the high court — Warren, Douglas, Brennan, White and Fortas — substituted their own naked will for the expressed desire of more than 4,500,000 Californians. Government by the people yielded on Monday to government by the judges.

THE FACTS IN the case are well known. In 1963, the California legislature adopted the Rumford Fair Housing Act. The law, intended to reduce racial discrimination, took away from the owners of certain residential property their right to sell or to lease as they wished. The opponents of the law thereupon initiated a referendum, known as Proposition 14, intended to nullify the Rumford Act and to write into California's supreme law a positive statement of every person's right "to decline to sell, lease or rent (his) property to such person or persons as he, in his absolute discretion, chooses."

Proposition 14 carried overwhelmingly in the 1964 election. Several Negro plaintiffs then brought suit to have the referendum declared void as a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment. The California Supreme Court upheld their position. On Monday, the U. S. Supreme Court affirmed by a 5-4 vote.

To describe the majority's reasoning as bizarre is to put a useful word to an inadequate purpose. The majority's reasoning was simply incredible. As the five justices saw it, California's constitutional declaration of a man's right to decline to sell his property amounted to "encouragement of racial discrimination by the State." Such a State power is prohibited by the Fourteenth Amendment; it therefore cannot be exercised by the people through amendment of their basic law.

HOW PROPOSITION 14 could be read as "encouragement" of racial discrimination is beyond comprehension. As Harlan said for the four dissenters, "the provision is neutral on its face." Its effect is merely to restore certain private behavior "to the sphere of free choice." The Rumford Act established a special privilege for buyers. Proposition 14 took that special privilege away, and left the law of property where it was before —in a condition where the buyer's right to buy is fairly balanced by the seller's right not to sell. If the people themselves cannot restore that right, how then is it ever to be restored?

The Supreme Court majority could not even find precedents to support its Olympian view. One cited case involved a railway; another involved a political party; a third involved a restaurant owned by a public parking authority in Wilmington; a fourth dealt with State statutes requiring segregation in restaurants. Speaking for the majority, White feebly acknowledged that "none of these cases squarely controls the case we now have before us." The fact was that none of the cited cases remotely approached a California constitutional amendment dealing with free choice in the sale of private property.

IN A CONCURRING opinion, Douglas reiterated his alarming view that rights of free choice no longer exist in any area, such as the sale of real estate, that is handled through agents licensed by the State. He has not yet been able to rally a majority of his brothers to this extremist position, but one finds small comfort in the fact. In last Monday's decision, the high court carried its obsessive egalitarianism to lengths that the framers of the Fourteenth Amendment could never have conceived.

Harlan summed it up: By refusing to accept the decision of the people of California, and by contriving a new and ill-defined constitutional concept to allow Federal judicial interference, "the court has taken to itself powers and responsibilities left elsewhere by the Constitution." This the high court had no right to do. But five of its members did it.

Some Try To Pay Off Violence Promotes

THERE IS AN almost exact similarity between Hubert Humphrey's plea that we give advocates of domestic violence everything they want to buy them off and the suggestion that we give the Chinese and North Vietnam Communists everything they want.

In both instances there is the implied suggestion that the guilt for the particular violence involved lies elsewhere than with the practitioners of the violence.

In Humphrey's case the clear suggestion is that those who promote riots in our cities are doing it as a natural and justified consequence of their ill treatment. With those who advocate giving in to the Communists there is the clear suggestion that the war involves justified civil complaints which got out of hand.

USUALLY THE suggestion is that the Communists are only seeking political reform of a hitherto corrupt government in the South. The fact that the Communists have done everything in their power to halt free elections in the South, whereas the supposedly corrupt government has actually held free elections under the most trying of circumstances, is brushed aside.

In the case of "justification" for domestic riots, the fact that government has gone as far as it properly can, or perhaps even further, in redressing grievances also is brushed aside. The new argument is that it isn't enough.

In the case of the domestic appeasement of violence there is no clear definition of just what might be enough. Humphrey suggests certain programs, but he must be aware that what the Stokely Carmichaels want is not just Humphrey's programs and promises, but power — not power won at the polls by ballots but power won at the barricades and enforced by bullets.

HOW DOES HUMPHREY expect to buy off such demands with money?

The situation is much more definite in Vietnam. We know precisely what the Communists want, and there are highly placed Americans who are quite willing to give it to them. The goal for which the Communists began fighting in the first place is simply to obtain an official role for the National Liberation Front (the action arm of the Viet Cong in the South) in the government of South Vietnam.

The political dimensions of victory or defeat in Vietnam, therefore, involve whether or not the fighting ends with the National Liberation Front in or out of the governmental machinery.

THERE IS NO WAY to buy the enemy off with anything less. The alternative is to beat them in the field.

There is no way, either, to buy off the advocates of violence in our cities. The alternative is to take them into court as we would any others who breach the peace.

In Vietnam, I continue deeply to believe that victory is possible, moral and vital to the cause of freedom everywhere.

In our cities, I continue to believe that victory for law and order is possible and vital to the cause of freedom everywhere in our land and among all our citizens, regardless of race, creed or color.

The New York City comptroller says that hundreds of thousands of dollars in poverty funds have disappeared there. The only consolation is to hope that they might have relieved some smart operator's poverty.

South And 1968 Election

A veteran Dixie Democratic Congressman said recently it is possible a new political coalition strong enough to control the outcome of national elections can be produced in the South. Surely, that is a worthy objective, since the South is the principal area in the nation which continually insists upon the preservation of states' right and upon local self-control in government.

Representative Robert L. F. Sikes pointed out that previous efforts had been made in the South to change the course of political out-comes but called attention to the fact that conditions are different now.

One of the things that has given a recent jolt to Southerners who want a return to national fiscal responsibility and to local control over local affairs was a newspaper analyst's report that Governor George Romney of Michigan is seeking an alliance with Governor Ronald Reagan of California in the hope of gaining the Republican nomination for President in 1968. The report made it sound as if Reagan might be receptive to the idea.

This is one of the last things Southern conservatives want. In this part of the nation, Romney is one of the least popular of the Republicans aspiring for the nomination. He is regarded as a "me-too" man who wouldn't do much of anything different from the way it is being handled by President Johnson's administration. If anyone simply wants more of the same, the question "What change?" could naturally be asked.

In his announced policy and in his administration of affairs in California, Regan has more nearly approached the South's concept of home rule than have most of the other Republican hopefuls, including Romney. If Reagan were to form an alliance with Romney for the sake of getting the vice-presidential nomination, the enthusiasm of the people of the South would be greatly dulled. A reversal of the proposed ticket, with Reagan at its head, would be far more acceptable, although there still would not be much enthusiasm for Romney.

In his statement that the South might play a big role in controlling the outcome of national elections, the congressman said the aim of any such efforts would be to prevent any presidential candidate from receiving an Electoral College majority and thus to force the election into the House of Representatives, "where," he said, "each state has one vote.

Sikes continued:

"If such action could be taken constructively, it would be worthy of consideration. It could force the acceptance of moderation by both major parties.

"Southern votes should never be used in a negative way, simply to hold back progress, but there is a possibility that they can be used in the right way to insure the right kind of progress."

Sikes suggested it would be well for Southerners to take a close look at the policies set forth by former Governor George C. Wallace of Alabama and Governor Lester Maddox of Georgia.

"Their position seems closer to constitutional beliefs — as we in the South see them — than that of many others," he said. "They have continually insisted upon preservation of states' rights and upon local self-government. These views I consider very desirable, and regretfully they are fast disappearing."

Sikes said his suggestion that Southerners consider policies of Wallace and Maddox does not necessarily mean a third party movement.

"Such support," he said, "could very well be given within the existing Democratic party. In any event, it appears that now is the time for clarification of the objectives in order to avoid confusion which attends party conventions.

"The trend toward a liberal Republican party," he continued, places a Southern Congressman in a difficult position. Most of us believe first consideration should be to preserve our nation and its constitution, both of which we think are being endangered by present-day trends in government."

We can see only a worsening situation if the Democrats win the next presidential election. If President Johnson should win, he would consider it a mandate to apply the principles of his so-called Great Society with full force. That would mean further losses of states' rights and local controls and of individual freedom. If, by a remote chance, Robert Kennedy should maneuver President Johnson out of the Democratic presidential nomination and should gain it for himself and should then win the election, it is difficult to see how we could long escape a complete dictatorship.

Since both parties have long chosen to ignore the South to a large extent in making their campaigns, it seems to be up to the South to use its power in the most effective manner possible.

Although the South probably won't be able to do much at the Democratic national convention, other than to prevent the nomination of Robert Kennedy, it might have a far greater influence on the Republican convention by convincing delegates that the only way the Republicans can win is to nominate a man who more nearly conforms to the home-rule and conservative views of the South.

Reuther's New Route

Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, who has been feuding a good many months with George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, in an effort to get a new organization that would give him more power, now is reported to be "decommitting" himself from President Johnson.

Some of the few who have talked recently with the embattled auto union chief report he is slowly, methodically and quietly maneuvering so he can remain neutral or back a peace ticket in 1968.

Reuther probably cares as little as the next man about whether we quit the war in Vietnam or start a war in defense of Israel but he has a reason that, to him, is good enough for withdrawing his support of President Johnson. Meany, with whom Reuther is carrying on a powerful labor struggle, has already endorsed Johnson for re-election. Naturally, Reuther thinks he can't fight Meany by going along with him.

The Detroiter's first move to "decommit" himself from President Johnson was to refuse to pay the auto union's quota of dollars into the AFL-CIO coast-to-coast political network known as COPE (Committee on Political Education). Heretofore the United Auto Workers have contributed about $100,000 annually, on the record, to COPE. Actual contributions may have been larger.

This year the red-headed firebrand of the American labor movement is putting his boycott into effect just at the time COPE is starting to whip into gear the machinery leaders believe necessary to reelect Johnson — in one of the toughest campaigns any incumbent has ever contemplated.

The sudden shift of the Vietnam "doves" to the "hawk" side in the Middle East situation may leave Reuther wondering just where his anti-war campaign is carrying him but is not likely to affect his attitude toward contributing to the Johnson campaign fund.

The national flower of Finland is the lily of the valley, selected by popular referendum in 1966.

The motto of the state of Kansas is Ad astra per aspera (to the stars through difficulties).

The motto of the state of Washington is Al-Ki, an Indian word meaning "bye and bye."

There I slept in a corn crib, ate in the yard and was fit to do his work but not go in his house. Is that a reason for the vanishing Negro farmer?

I am yet an uneducated Negro that is a respected citizen where I live and detests a farm — unless a person, white or Negro, is educated enough to run it and manage his own affairs. I've only seen one plantation that told the Negro what he bought — itemized, plus dollar value of cotton, seed, corn or what have you. World War II caused the big mass migration off the farm. Even to the sawmill at the old commissary was better than the farm that read on settlement day as follows: "Joe or Jim you never quite broke even, but whatever you need you can still get it." So the reason bascially is the Negro farmer vanished because he wanted to work at even the lowest paid jobs where he would get his money. Mechanization isn't the cause of it. The reason is a tractor driver, loading or skidding logs, can get $15.00 per day, so why drive farm tractors for $5.00. I am sure that being editor you can in your heart say I've told the truth. I could drive the old Farmall, John Deere and Fordson. I drove them 31 years ago. And if you print it in your paper I'll read it as I arise looking for your paper as a cash buyer. I'm not crying at your point of view. I only hope I gave you an answer.

Postal Workers

Bastrop, La.

To the Editor:

In reference to an article which appeared in your paper Friday, May 19, 1967, I wish to convey to you my disgust.

The article pertained to the income of postal workers. The author stated completely without foundation, that the average postal worker is paid $7,500 per year or $3.60 per hour. This might come as something of a shock to one of my fellow employees who has been employed as a postal worker for 20 years and is presently receiving $3.35 per hour. The "average" postal employee would be one who has in far fewer than 20 years of postal service.

The author also commented on the big turnover of postal employees. Could this be because the average pay of a postal employee is less than the starting pay of a garbage collector in some large cities?

I was particulary irritated by his report that some workers take 10 seconds to read an address. This would be six letters per minute. If he had taken time to check, he would have discovered that there is a minimum requirement of many times this figure.

Summing up, I believe this article was intended to mislead the public at a time when postal workers are seeking a raise.

Please print this letter to try to counter-act some of the harm done by this misleading article.

High Court Nullifies U. S. 10th Amendment

THE TENTH AMENDMENT to the United States Constitution ordinarily is remembered, when it is remembered at all, as the "States' rights" amendment. The term is a misnomer. It ought properly to be known as the "reserved powers" amendment, but in the light of last Monday's Supreme Court decision in the California case, we may refer to it henceforth simply as the Discarded Tenth.

Until last Monday, many of us truly had believed that not even the Warren court could fail to honor the explicit meaning of the Tenth. What the amendment says is that all powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively "or to the people."

Those last four words strike to the very heart of popular government. Destroy them, and the structure falls. What the court held on Monday is that the people of California, exercising their ultimate sovereignty, no longer have the power to amend their own State Constitution in order to proclaim an elementary statement of property rights. Five members of the high court — Warren, Douglas, Brennan, White and Fortas — substituted their own naked will for the expressed desire of more than 4,500,000 Californians. Government by the people yielded on Monday to government by the judges.

THE FACTS IN the case are well known. In 1963, the California legislature adopted the Rumford Fair Housing Act. The law, intended to reduce racial discrimination, took away from the owners of certain residential property their right to sell or to lease as they wished. The opponents of the law thereupon initiated a referendum, known as Proposition 14, intended to nullify the Rumford Act and to write into California's supreme law a positive statement of every person's right "to decline to sell, lease or rent (his) property to such person or persons as he, in his absolute discretion, chooses."

Proposition 14 carried overwhelmingly in the 1964 election. Several Negro plaintiffs then brought suit to have the referendum declared void as a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment. The California Supreme Court upheld their position. On Monday, the U. S. Supreme Court affirmed by a 5-4 vote.

To describe the majority's reasoning as bizarre is to put a useful word to an inadequate purpose. The majority's reasoning was simply incredible. As the five justices saw it, California's constitutional declaration of a man's right to decline to sell his property amounted to "encouragement of racial discrimination by the State." Such a State power is prohibited by the Fourteenth Amendment; it therefore cannot be exercised by the people through amendment of their basic law.

HOW PROPOSITION 14 could be read as "encouragement" of racial discrimination is beyond comprehension. As Harlan said for the four dissenters, "the provision is neutral on its face." Its effect is merely to restore certain private behavior "to the sphere of free choice." The Rumford Act established a special privilege for buyers. Proposition 14 took that special privilege away, and left the law of property where it was before —in a condition where the buyer's right to buy is fairly balanced by the seller's right not to sell. If the people themselves cannot restore that right, how then is it ever to be restored?

The Supreme Court majority could not even find precedents to support its Olympian view. One cited case involved a railway; another involved a political party; a third involved a restaurant owned by a public parking authority in Wilmington; a fourth dealt with State statutes requiring segregation in restaurants. Speaking for the majority, White feebly acknowledged that "none of these cases squarely controls the case we now have before us." The fact was that none of the cited cases remotely approached a California constitutional amendment dealing with free choice in the sale of private property.

IN A CONCURRING opinion, Douglas reiterated his alarming view that rights of free choice no longer exist in any area, such as the sale of real estate, that is handled through agents licensed by the State. He has not yet been able to rally a majority of his brothers to this extremist position, but one finds small comfort in the fact. In last Monday's decision, the high court carried its obsessive egalitarianism to lengths that the framers of the Fourteenth Amendment could never have conceived.

Harlan summed it up: By refusing to accept the decision of the people of California, and by contriving a new and ill-defined constitutional concept to allow Federal judicial interference, "the court has taken to itself powers and responsibilities left elsewhere by the Constitution." This the high court had no right to do. But five of its members did it.

Some Try To Pay Off Violence Promotes

THERE IS AN almost exact similarity between Hubert Humphrey's plea that we give advocates of domestic violence everything they want to buy them off and the suggestion that we give the Chinese and North Vietnam Communists everything they want.

In both instances there is the implied suggestion that the guilt for the particular violence involved lies elsewhere than with the practitioners of the violence.

In Humphrey's case the clear suggestion is that those who promote riots in our cities are doing it as a natural and justified consequence of their ill treatment. With those who advocate giving in to the Communists there is the clear suggestion that the war involves justified civil complaints which got out of hand.

USUALLY THE suggestion is that the Communists are only seeking political reform of a hitherto corrupt government in the South. The fact that the Communists have done everything in their power to halt free elections in the South, whereas the supposedly corrupt government has actually held free elections under the most trying of circumstances, is brushed aside.

In the case of "justification" for domestic riots, the fact that government has gone as far as it properly can, or perhaps even further, in redressing grievances also is brushed aside. The new argument is that it isn't enough.

In the case of the domestic appeasement of violence there is no clear definition of just what might be enough. Humphrey suggests certain programs, but he must be aware that what the Stokely Carmichaels want is not just Humphrey's programs and promises, but power — not power won at the polls by ballots but power won at the barricades and enforced by bullets.

HOW DOES HUMPHREY expect to buy off such demands with money?

The situation is much more definite in Vietnam. We know precisely what the Communists want, and there are highly placed Americans who are quite willing to give it to them. The goal for which the Communists began fighting in the first place is simply to obtain an official role for the National Liberation Front (the action arm of the Viet Cong in the South) in the government of South Vietnam.

The political dimensions of victory or defeat in Vietnam, therefore, involve whether or not the fighting ends with the National Liberation Front in or out of the governmental machinery.

THERE IS NO WAY to buy the enemy off with anything less. The alternative is to beat them in the field.

There is no way, either, to buy off the advocates of violence in our cities. The alternative is to take them into court as we would any others who breach the peace.

In Vietnam, I continue deeply to believe that victory is possible, moral and vital to the cause of freedom everywhere.

In our cities, I continue to believe that victory for law and order is possible and vital to the cause of freedom everywhere in our land and among all our citizens, regardless of race, creed or color.

The New York City comptroller says that hundreds of thousands of dollars in poverty funds have disappeared there. The only consolation is to hope that they might have relieved some smart operator's poverty.

How To Get Along

Having trouble getting along with people? Here are a few pointers:

1. Keep skid chains on your tongue; always say less than you think. Cultivate a low, persuasive voice. How you say it often counts more than what you say.
2. Make promises sparingly and keep them faithfully, no matter what it costs you.
3. Never let an opportunity pass to say a kind and encouraging word to or about somebody. Praise good work done, regardless of who did it. If criticism is needed, criticise helpfully, never spitefully.
4. Be interested in others. Let everyone you meet, however humble, feel that you regard him as one of importance.
5. Preserve an open mind on all debatable subjects. Deliberate, but not argue. It is a mark of superior minds to disagree and yet be friendly.
6. Let your virtues, if you have any, speak for themselves, and refuse to talk of another's vices. Discourage gossip.
7. Be careful of another's feelings.
8. Pay no attention to ill-natured remarks about you. Simply live that nobody will believe them.

Interesting Note

Efforts on the part of some state legislatures to protect their citizens from deadbeat drivers who are unwilling, or unable, to insure themselves appear to have backfired. In New York, North Carolina and Massachusetts, for instance, the most immediate effect of compulsory auto insurance laws has been to increase insurance rates because of an escalation of claims.

According to University of Michigan Professor Ross Wilhelm, "The number of claims jumped 23 per cent in New York and 35 per cent in North Carolina during the first year the law was in effect."

The reason being that with everybody insured, everybody — on either side of the accident — sues.

Maybe the best way, as some have suggested, would be the setting up of a rigid standard for drivers before they can get their licenses. Unless they could meet tough standards, no license. If they drove without a license, a mandatory jail term.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT in a recent church bulletin said: "Due to a lack of response, next Thursday will be cancelled." And a shopping circular recently advised the perfect gift for Mother's Day — a wedding ring.

Weather Control

A Russian meteorologist — Professor E. K. Federov — has posed an interesting question or statement. He foresees, in our time, a scientific victory as colossal as space flight and ocean exploitation — control of climate as well as weather.

Moreover, he warns that the world's scientists better start now to try for climate control, or else all the space, nuclear and industrial activities — notably pollution — might set off a chain of events that could destroy our climate.

Very Blue Star

And speaking of science, a very blue star, probably a supernova, has been discovered in the constellation of Ursa Major, of which the Big Dipper is a part.

A supernova is a star that suddenly, for reasons unknown, blazes forth with a brilliance often rivaling that of an entire galaxy of millions of stars. The new object is considered unusual because no parent galaxy, in which supernovas usually occur, is visible on plates taken with the 48-inch Schmidt telescope atop Mt. Palomar.

The very blue star was spotted by Drs. William J. Luyten and Jean H. Anderson of the University of Minnesota.

The probable supernova is too faint to be seen without a large telescope, but it has brightened at least 5.6 magnitudes since 1963.

I. Q. Linked To Genes

Dr. Arthur Jensen of Stanford University's Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences — reports heredity is far more important than environment in determining human intelligence. He based his conclusion on a new mathematical formula for deriving estimates of heritability. He applied this formula to past studies of identical and fraternal twins.

Dr. Jensen claimed his results decidedly contradicted current notions that environment is primarily responsible for intellectual differences among people.

Talking About Your Wife

There are some areas anyone but a fool would leave be. But then sometimes someone must try and get the point across. So here goes a memo to wives about some remarks husbands get tired of hearing:

"Remember the fellow who wanted me to elope with him in college? I just heard he's been elected board chairman of the biggest bank in my home town."

"How is it that you can remember the score of every football game ever played, but can never remember my birthday?"

'You haven't been listening to a thing I said, have you? You have? All right, tell me — what did I say?"

"All I can say is that if we can't afford a cleaning woman every once in a while, you're the one who is going to have to start waxing the kitchen floor and mopping the bathroom."

"Maybe if you'd just let me tint the gray in your hair it might help you get ahead at the office faster. I hear that most bosses now want their employes to look as young as possible."

"Don't bother to take off your shoes. Have you forgotten we're going to the PTA meeting? They have a real interesting speaker I'm dying to hear. He's going to talk on, "Child Education among the Early Aztecs, and It's Implications in a Permissive Society.""

"If I can get by on a tuna fish salad sandwich for lunch, why do you have to have beef stew and an expensive dessert?"

"Don't tell me it's your wife you've been listening to on the phone for the last half hour? You must be really henpecked."

"Remember Ronald, the boy I told you about who used to carry my books home from high school? Well, I just heard he's been made the executive vice president of a big advertising firm."

"Agnes and Jack are celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary next week. He's surprising her with a trip to Bermuda. Where are you planning to take me on our 25th anniversary — to the movies?"

"Hi Pop. Can you give me $10? We're having a school dance, and I have to take a girl, and — well, you know how it is. The gang always goes somewhere to eat afterward."

"All we have for dinner tonight is leftovers. If you don't want them, you can take me out to a restaurant. It shouldn't kill you to do that, should it"?

"I was dusting off the bookshelf this afternoon, and came across our wedding album. You know, you really weren't half bad-looking — then."

"Remember Charlie, the little boy who was so wild about me in kindergarten? I just heard he's running for governor next year. "I wonder what it would feel like to be the first lady in a state mansion?"

The Week's World In Focus

Threats, Warnings In Tense Middle East; U Thant Explains, Auto Sales Up, Toll High

THE Israeli - Arab crisis generated growing alarm throughout the world during the week, beginning with United Arab Republic President Gamal Abdel Nasser's statement that a negotiated peace with Israel was "out of the question" until Palestinian Arabs returned to their homeland — in what is now Israel.

While the United States sought backing among Western maritime nations for a test of the Egyptian blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba — Israel's only sea outlet to the east and south — the Soviet Union sent warships to reinforce its Middle East naval force. The Russians have expressed support of the Arab position.

Alarm Underscored

Alarm was underscored Tuesday, when Nasser and King Hussein of Jordan, longtime enemies, announced a military alliance if either nation is attacked.

The tension graduated another step Thursday, when Israel's Maj. Gen. Moshe Dayan, hero of the 1956 Sinai campaign against Egypt, was named defense minister. The move was seen as a boost to Israeli morale in the event of war.

On Friday, an Israeli patrol and four-man Syrian squad battled on the border, resulting in the first deaths since the current crisis began: two Israelis and one Syrian.

U.S. officials in Washington meanwhile announced that the United States and Britain are seeking accord with the maritime nations for a declaration for free and open passage through the contested gulf of all nations, including Israel.

Meanwhile, in Washington British Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned on Friday that failure to end peacefully Egypt's declared blockade of the Gulf of Aquaba could lead to not only a local war in the Middle East but a much larger conflict "in a matter of hours."

Wilson, held a news conference with President Johnson on the Middle East crisis.

He said the United States and Britain are seeking a peaceful solution through action in the U.N. Security Council and through issuance of a declaration on the blockade issue by the world's maritime powers.

The declaration would assert that the gulf and the entrance to it through the Strait of Tiran constitute an international waterway for all shipping. Israel has announced it will sign the declaration, so its shipping would be covered.

Wilson raised the question whether the Egyptian announcement of the blockade two weeks ago, primarily against Israeli shipping, was a threat and whether the blockade would in fact be enforced.

If it cannot be avoided, he said, and if it is enforced "then I believe there is a very, very dangerous state in which not only a local conflict but a much larger conflict might be only a matter of hours."

Wilson also said he accepts the sincerity of the Soviet government "in their desire to see restraint exercised" in the Middle East.

Action Defended

Secretary-General U Thant on Friday night defended his order withdrawing the United Nations Emergency Force from Egypt at the request of President Gamal Abdel Nasser. Considering the concept under which the UNEF operated, he said, his move was proper.

His first public defense of it came at the close of a speech to the United Nations Association for Canada.

Thant's action has been criticized by Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson and President Johnson as hasty in the current Middle East crisis. Thant ordered the withdrawal at the request of Egypt on May 19.

"I know that the withdrawal of UNEF and the situation which has given rise to it are a source of bitter disappointment and deep anxiety in many countries," Thant said. "Especially in Canada which has such a close relationship with UNEF from the very beginning, these feelings are acute." Pearson won the 1957 Nobel Peace Prize for his part in setting up the U.N. peacekeeping apparatus in the wake of the 1956 Suez war.

PRESIDENT Johnson and Australia's Prime Minister Harold E. Holt confer during week.

Thant declared that Canada, which had contributed men to the force from its inception more than 10 years ago, "has a large share of the credit both for the idea and for the practical success of this international force.

The Vietnam War

HEAVY fighting around Vietnam's demilitarized border zone claimed steep U.S. casualties for the week, but South Vietnamese government troops claimed victory Friday over the Viet Cong.

At least 150 of the 500-man Viet Cong outfit were reported killed by a task force of South Vietnamese paratroops, infantry and armor, with air and artillery backing.

Other clashes occurred below the zone, where the North Vietnamese have infiltrated fresh troops in a new bid to claim the border province of Quang Tri. This province, according to captured documents, was to have been the launching site for North Vietnamese invasion attempts frustrated in 1966.

U.S. Toll High

U.S. forces suffered 313 killed and 2,616 wounded during the week, a record combined total. The number of wounded was the highest for any week of the war, the number of dead second to last week's 337.

The allies reported 2,216 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese killed for the week, with wounded estimated at as much as 50 per cent higher.

NEW YORK City was beleaguered by domestic strife last week. On Tuesday, about 200 "hippies" gathered in an East Side park to play bongo drums and recite Buddhist love chants.

Police ordered the congregation to disperse, but a scuffle erupted in which at least two youths and one policeman were injured slightly. About three dozen hippies were arrested.

Mayor John V. Lindsay and aides later suggested that the police were overfearful of trouble, and planned to set aside park areas where hippies may drum and chant without restriction.

New York Trouble

On another front, some 600 landlords stormed City Hall on Friday, smashing windows and shouting, "We want to see our hippie mayor!"

The landlords were enraged over Lindsay's effort to end a strike of building service employes in about 1,000 rent-controlled Manhattan appartment houses, Lindsay accused the landlords of precipitating the strike so as to wreck the rent-control laws.

MEANWHILE, uncollected garbage piled higher and higher under a warm sun as the strike went into its eighth day Friday. Lindsay declared a health emergency and ordered sanitation men to cross picket lines to haul away the garbage.

High Court Ruling

The U.S. Supreme Court during the week upheld the California Supreme Court's decision that the state's controversial Proposition 14, approved by voters in 1964 as an amendment to California's constitution, is racially discriminatory.

The 5-4 decision held that the amendment went beyond mere repeal of the state's fair - housing legislation and created a right to refuse to rent or sell housing on racial grounds.

The Supreme Court also ruled that Congress lacks the authority to pass laws stripping Americans of their citizenship without their consent.

A third Supreme Court decision voided a 46-year-old rule that police officials could not use evidence seized in lawful searches of suspects' homes. Formerly, only illegal articles such as narcotics or instruments of crimes were usable as courtroom evidence.

Religious Difference

Religious differences broke apart the Republic of Nigeria on Tuesday, when the Eastern region declared itself an independent republic and named itself Biafra.

Nigeria has long been split by battles between the predominantly Moslem tribes of the North and the Christian and animist tribes of the East, who live around the Bight of Biafra, on Africa's west coast.

The 53 - foot ketch Gipsy Moth IV slipped past England's Plymouth breakwater at 8:58 p.m. Sunday, marking the triumphant finish of the epic sea voyage of Sir Francis Chichester.

Sir Francis, 65, sailed alone around the world, covering 28,500 miles in 226 days at sea.

Quotation of the week: "Citizenship is no light trifle to be jeopardized any moment Congress decides to do so under the name of one of its general or implied grants of power." — Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black.

Auto Sales Up

U.S. auto sales in the last 10 days of May scooted slightly ahead of sales in the same period a year earlier, putting the month's total eight per cent above May 1966, sales reports showed the past week.

The lead of May 21-31 this year over the period a year earlier was a slim two per cent, or 3,859 cars.

With giant General Motors leading the upward swing that has narrowed to 13 per cent the gap between the sluggish sales so far this year and sales at the same point in 1966.

All GM divisions reported more sales in this 10-day period than they had a year earlier, and the corporation's total sales were 11 per cent above May 21-31 1966.

Ford, the second largest of the U.S. automakers, continued to be the most behind the 1966 sales pace, with May 21-31 sales this year 11 per cent below those in the period a year ago.

Chrysler sales jumped to 44,603, five per cent above the 42,455 Chrysler vehicles sold in the May 21-31 period in 1966.

A JORDANIAN army doctor checks a volunteer at a training camp.

GM's sales for the period were 155,606, up from 144,355 a year earlier, and Ford's sales were 82,872, well below the 92,419 vehicles Ford sold in May 21-31, 1966.

The industry's total for the month was 801,195, up 47,600 — or eight per cent — from May a year ago, with GM's monthly sales up 18 per cent from a year ago, Chrysler's up 6 per cent, and Ford down 12 per cent.

Tiny American Motors reported sales of 22,602, up 5.4 per cent from May, 1966.

Meanwhile Walter P. Reuther foresees his United Auto Workers making $35,000 to $40,000 annually "in 20 years or so."

The UAW president told his union's Chrysler Council on Friday he anticipates this, and he later told a news conference that "technology to bring this about is in the works — and that day is coming."

Reuther said the United States' gross national product was only $40 billion in 1929, but predicted it will go beyond $800 billion next year, and added that his membership expects to get its "fair share out of this greater productivity."

Reorganization

The Defense Department announced Friday major reorganization of the National Guard and the Army Reserve. The plan is expected to touch off protests in state capitals and possibly in Congress.

The plan will abolish 15 under-strength National Guard divisions and replace them with combat-ready brigades. It will also give the Guard all combat and combat-support units now part of the Reserve.

Pentagon officials said the reorganization would create a smaller reserve, but one which could be mobilized faster — hopefully within eight weeks. Deputy Defense Secretary Cyrus Vance said the change would "assure maximum effectiveness and the fighting edge of the Reserve force will thus be further sharpened."

Spokesmen said the plan would be put into effect by the administration, but that Congress would have to approve the change in manpower levels. The new plan would reduce total manpower of the Guard and Reserve from 678,500 to 640,000 — a cut of 38,500 men

Because it involves National Guard units, which are in effect state militia until called to federal service, the plan was expected to touch off controversy across the nation.

About The M16

THE M16 is called the "little black rifle" by the Viet Cong and all sorts of names by some U.S. Marines.

Controversy surrounds the rifle, for two years the standard firearm in the U.S. Army in Vietnam but adopted by the Marines only three months ago.

"I'd rather have an air rifle."

"We'd be better off with the M14." So say some of the Marines whose lives may depend on the M16.

Others praise it as excellent.

Marine sergeants, lieutenants and generals — and even many in the ranks— agree the problem will wither away with proper care of the rifle, more training time, and just plain living with it.

The M16 is four pounds lighter than the 11-pound M14. Thus a soldier can carry more ammunition. It is fired singly or automatically, giving every rifleman the increased fire of a light machine gun.

But sometimes a cartridge gets stuck in the chamber, making it impossible to fire the next round.

After the vicious fight near Khe Sanh early last month several Marines complained their M16s jammed at critical moments.

The M16 will jam, Marine experts say, if corrosion on the sides of a cartridge glues a shell in the chamber. Too much cleaning oil, or a little dust, also are bad.

When a shell is jammed the extractor hook which grabs the cartridge rim will not pull the shell out. The only way the barrel can be cleared is to assemble a cleaning rod, shelve it down the muzzle, and ram the cartridge out — an unnerving sequence in combat.

Marine spokesmen, including the outgoing Marine commander in Vietnam, Lt. Gen. Lewis W. Walt, says the problem would be solved if Marines would clean their M16s properly. A jammed gun is most often the result of a Marine "not doing what he is supposed to do," Walt told reporters.

FROM time to time sergeants can be seen imspecting Marine's weapon and sometimes dressing him down. One veteran, who says he has had no trouble, adds that the Leathernecks had only one or two days to learn the M16 in Vietnam whereas they trained for months as recruits with the M14.

Gen. Wallace M. Greene Jr., the Marine commandant, says principles involving the older rifles apply also to the M16 and that Marines get 10½ hours of training the M16 before they come to Vietnam.

Greene told Washington reporters recently that the M16 has proved to be reliable and hard-hitting. He described as faulty any impression that the Marine Corps is dissatisfied with it.

The Week's Twin Cities-Area News In Review

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Out west, the story goes, the wide open spaces are so vast a traveller may drive for hours, walk for days to reach an object seeming but a hoot-and-a-holler away.

Perhaps. Natural law is not subject to repeal, however, and departures beget arrivals. As every Western driver knows, perserverance pays.

Northeast Louisiana drivers, in a sense, know it too, for in less than a week they will have reached the end of one of those long roads, a road travelled steadily for over a year. Indeed, by the time these lines appear again, they will have voted on the Fifth District sales tax.

The one-cent levy to boost school, parish and municipal pay and provide various other improvements, at last in final form, will meet its test next Saturday. It was obvious last week the election was imminent. The tax, for one reason or another, was in spotlight frequently.

The glare was hottest, however, on Monday, as Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard, Mayor Bert Hatten of West Monroe, school leaders and other supporters of the measure assembled at City Hall to a cross section of local businessmen.

"ISSUE DISTORTED"

The session suddenly turned into a rip-snorting attack on opposition which had appeared over the weekend in the form of circulars suggesting, at least by implication, the closure of public schools. Howard, branding the material, signed only "Citizens of Ouachita Parish," a "distortion of the issue," said it made the coming election appear as a case of "segregation and integration."

The circular, placed on a number of cars, had said of the fact that by fall most Fifth District schools will have been desegregated, "The only choice we may have now is to remove our children from the public school system." It asked, "Do you want to support an integrated school system or put your money into private schools that will keep our children white and safe from the hands of illiterate Negroes and communists?"

Howard read the worst into the sheet and, to applause, issued an early warning that, "We will not tolerate rough stuff and interference with the operation of our schools." He called on everyone present to "use all your influence so that peace and good order can be maintained," adding, "If our people will keep their shirts on their back and their feet on the ground, we will have peace.

"In my opinion," he said, "the answer is not putting the schools in the hands of a bunch of radicals who are just as extreme on their side as integrationists are on theirs."

Howard, Hatten and the school officials took turns at the meeting in listing most critical needs which they said success of the tax would answer. Meanwhile, backers of the tax were diagnosing the best chance for passage June 10 than at any time since the long road began in May, 1966.

Certainly, strong voter interest in the election was a foregone conclusion. Absentee balloting, underway for two weeks, closed at noon Saturday and by Friday, when these notes were inscribed, appeared almost sure to set a record. Over 200 registered voters in Ouachita Parish, expecting to be away on June 10, had wended to the courthouse and marked an opinion, this despite rainfall during the week conservatively called "heavy."

Thirty-six votes were cast Wednesday alone, the briskest single day.

Interest in another form was being shown as Ouachita Parish Police Jury President T. W. Humphries surprised many observers by calling a special Friday meeting to "discuss and take appropriate action" on the sales tax. Best earlier indications had been clearly that the jury would not take a stand, though some among them, such as Ward 3's Curtis Joiner, were being explicit that it should.

Results of the meeting doubtless were in Saturday's Morning World in a story written after this one, which is limited by a weekend overlap. Conversations during the week, however, anticipated a vote ranging from 15-4 to 18-1, a range indicating strong support for the tax. One member, M. W. Montgomery, Ward 3, due to be out of town Friday evening, expressed his "100 per cent" approval before the session started.

The tax, during the week, also received the endorsement of the Richland Parish Police Jury.

WOEFUL WEATHER

The weatherman last week was a woeful figure, or at least his stock-in-trade was a gloomy commodity. In the period covered here, Sunday was alright; was Friday; but, in between was no bowl of cherries — they would have drowned on the vine.

The Twin Cities could knock on wood, or the levee, that there was no heavy damage amid the swirl of thunderstorms which clouded the skies and dashed 2.34 inches of rain to earth — half the usual total for the entire month of May — in a three-day period. And this during a period in which the rain fell generally only in the mornings.

The whole Morning World coverage area found itself under tornado alert on more than one occasion, though again, fate to thank, really severe damage and loss of life was spared. Some crop losses were expected, however, on the final balance sheet, and one large section of Shreveport felt with particular effect a siege of flooding. That city, by the way, took four and one-half inches of rain in 12 hours Tuesday.

Back in Monroe, residents were watching a creeping rise on the Ouachita River which already has made cardboard-sliding down the levee grass a moist proposition. By Friday, her level stood at 29.2 — 10.8 feet under flood stage. Though the Ouachita has gone beyond previous crest estimates by some two feet, engineers see no cause for anxiety in a Twin City area that cut its teeth on floods. Present readings have been reported eight to 10 feet below usual expectations.

LOCALS HONORED

Home folks were doing well by themselves last week in the honors department, led by the example of the Monroe Police Department pistol team which would up fourth in a field of 17. The competition, at the Louisiana Peace Officers Association convention in Bossier City, found one of the Monroe team members, Jerry Roden, a nine-year officer, as individual quick draw champion. Shooting but two and one-half points short of a maximum possible score, he racked up what was believed the first individual first place ever earned by a Monroe shooter.

Monroe Jaycees, meantime, were honoring their own when, at the annual Awards Night Banquet, John Wray Young III was named Jaycee of the Year, cited by President Tom Lee and the organization for "an exceptional job this year in youth, sports, publicity and public relations. Young, chapter vice president, was recently appointed executive director of the annual Jaycee-sponsored Miss Louisiana Pageant, due to run this year June 28-July 1.

(A) separate announcement during the week named 1959 Miss America Mary Ann Mobley of Brandon, Miss., now a nationally known movie and television performer, as the pageant Mistress of Ceremonies. The program is scheduled again for the auditorium of Neville High School.)

Other top awards went to Cliff Lawrence as Director of the Year, and to J. D. Cascio as Chairman of the Year. Lawrence is general chairman for the Jaycees' upcoming first annual Air Show at Monroe Municipal Airport, set for June 11.

Jerry Ainsworth won a "Speak Up, Jaycee" award, amid a number of presentations for first-year and long-time service. Featured speaker was lifetime member Pete Dowd of Monroe.

Meeting Friday night for its awards and recognition dinner, the Ouachita Parish Heart Association installed Frank McDermott of Monroe as president, succeeding Jerry Braud. Speaker was Dr. William M. Lukart of Baton Rouge, president of the Louisiana Heart Association, while awards were made to various fund leaders and news media representatives.

Also during the week, the Ouachita Association for Retarded Children filled the unexpired terms of B. R. Bond and Howard Smith Jr., naming Mrs. Francis Garner as administrative secretary and Mrs. Elaine Zirkle as treasurer. Elected to directorships were Mrs. Lois Taylor and Mrs. Betty Smith.

In ceremonies elsewhere, the impending retirement of Monroe Sewer Supt. John B. Renaud was marked by a banquet in his honor. A city employee since May, 1934, the former superintendent of both the water and sewer departments will retire officially June 30. From the city he received a watch, from his department a transistor radio and from local plumbers a six-day trip with Mrs. Renaud to Galveston, Tex

IN THE AREA

Counting Baton Rouge as the area, the Legislature, clanking to the close of its last full week in a 30-day fiscal session, was making news of note.

Perhaps of keeaest political interest was the disclosure that multi-office senatorial districts will not be cut into divisions — at least, not yet. Sen. Jamar Adcock, of Monroe, whose idea it was, indicated he would not press the matter, earlier called an emergency justifying consideration at a fiscal session. The thought was to further sectionalize districts in such a way as to narrow fields of candidates. In the local district, for example, candidates might have run in a Ouachita - Morehouse Parish division, while others ran in an East Carroll-West Carroll division.

Also of local interest was a House-passed bill to charge college students a maximum $30 "building use" fee on which construction bonds would be issued. Monroe's Adcock again was author, with Louisiana Tech President Dr. F. Jay Taylor active in support.

Another measure getting plenty of scrutiny also was Adcock's — a resolution introduced Thursday to suspend legislatively - approved pay raises for district attorneys, judges and others. Gov. John McKeithen, holding a teetering budget, made a surprise visit to back the resolution, which probably would save him the necessity of having to veto the raises are funds to the state's 32 district attorneys and for judges. McKeithen's urging, reports said, had some solons grumbling and doubtful the resolution will pass Tuesday on the session's last day.

In matters more strictly in the area, Newellton voters defeated a 2.5 mill tax for creation of a recreation district, while okaying a $480,000 bond issue for a sewage district. Though the first got popular approval, the assesement majority went against it. It was enough.

Uncle Sam also had words for the area, good or bad, depending on where one stood. From Washington came the report that the Civil Rights Commission will open a voter registration office in Tallulah. It wasn't said when, but it doesn't usually take long.

In Lake Providence, at this time, for some reason the pursestrings were showing signs of tightening. The poverty warriors at least temporarily have rejected Head Start money for the East Carroll Parish Community Action Association. A 14-hour hearing on the appeal was held in Lake Providence Monday, with the decision due back in a couple of weeks.

OTHER NEWS

With what remains of our space and the reader's patience, here's a count of the week's other key news events:

Mrs. Alma Jordan, 56, of Pineville, formerly of Tallulah, died in an automobile crash five miles west of Ferriday on U.S. 84.

Registration for Northeast Louisiana State College's two six-week summer sessions was held Thursday. Classes got underway Friday.

The name of the Ouachita Valley Vocational Technical School in West Monroe was changed by the Legislature to Ouachita Valley Technical Institute.

West Monroe Negro Willie Earl Burton, 17, of 134 Copley St., was charged with aggravated burglary after the slashing of 21-year-old Mrs. Darlene Adams in her home at 1907 Trenton St., West Monroe. Mrs. Adams, who officers said woke to find an intruder in the home, was reported recuperating satisfactorily. Burton will be arraigned Monday.

A $720,000 annual reduction in rates charged by Southern Bell for intrastate toll calls went into effect Thursday, in accord with a Louisiana Public Service Commission order of April 21. It will bring to nearly $2.5 million, the total reduction in intrastate long distance charges over the past three years.

The first summer production of Monroe Little Theatre's Children's Theatre started Thursday a four-day run. Called "Androcles and the Lion," the production goes on the boards for the last time at 2:30 p.m. today.

How To Get Along

Having trouble getting along with people? Here are a few pointers:

1. Keep skid chains on your tongue; always say less than you think. Cultivate a low, persuasive voice. How you say it often counts more than what you say.

2. Make promises sparingly and keep them faithfully, no matter what it costs you.

3. Never let an opportunity pass to say a kind and encouraging word to or about somebody. Praise good work done, regardless of who did it. If criticism is needed, criticise helpfully, never spitefully.

4. Be interested in others. Let everyone you meet, however humble, feel that you regard him as one of importance.

5. Preserve an open mind on all debatable subjects. Deliberate, but not argue. It is a mark of superior minds to disagree and yet be friendly.

6. Let your virtues, if you have any, speak for themselves, and refuse to talk of another's vices. Discourage gossip.

7. Be careful of another's feelings.

8. Pay no attention to ill-natured remarks about you. Simply live that nobody will believe them.

Interesting Note

Efforts on the part of some state legislatures to protect their citizens from deadbeat drivers who are unwilling, or unable, to insure themselves appear to have backfired. In New York, North Carolina and Massachusetts, for instance, the most immediate effect of compulsory auto insurance laws has been to increase insurance rates because of an escalation of claims.

According to University of Michigan Professor Ross Wilhelm, "The number of claims jumped 23 per cent in New York and 35 per cent in North Carolina during the first year the law was in effect."

The reason being that with everybody insured, everybody — on either side of the accident — sues.

Maybe the best way, as some have suggested, would be the setting up of a rigid standard for drivers before they can get their licenses. Unless they could meet tough standards, no license. If they drove without a license, a mandatory jail term.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT in a recent church bulletin said: "Due to a lack of response, next Thursday will be cancelled." And a shopping circular recently advised the perfect gift for Mother's Day — a wedding ring.

Weather Control

A Russian meteorologist — Professor E. K. Federov — has posed an interesting question or statement. He foresees, in our time, a scientific victory as colossal as space flight and ocean exploitation — control of climate as well as weather.

Moreover, he warns that the world's scientists better start now to try for climate control, or else all the space, nuclear and industrial activities — notably pollution — might set off a chain of events that could destroy our climate.

Very Blue Star

And speaking of science, a very blue star, probably a supernova, has been discovered in the constellation of Ursa Major, of which the Big Dipper is a part.

A supernova is a star that suddenly, for reasons unknown, blazes forth with a brilliance often rivaling that of an entire galaxy of millions of stars. The new object is considered unusual because no parent galaxy, in which supernovas usually occur, is visible on plates taken with the 48-inch Schmidt telescope atop Mt. Palomar.

The very blue star was spotted by Drs. William J. Luyten and Jean H. Anderson of the University of Minnesota.

The probable supernova is too faint to be seen without a large telescope, but it has brightened at least 5.6 magnitudes since 1963.

I. Q. Linked To Genes

Dr. Arthur Jensen of Stanford University's Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences — reports heredity is far more important than environment in determining human intelligence. He based his conclusion on a new mathematical formula for deriving estimates of heritability. He applied this formula to past studies of identical and fraternal twins.

Dr. Jensen claimed his results decidedly contradicted current notions that environment is primarily responsible for intellectual differences among people.

Talking About Your Wife

There are some areas anyone but a fool would leave be. But then sometimes someone must try and get the point across. So here goes a memo to wives about some remarks husbands get tired of hearing:

"Remember the fellow who wanted me to elope with him in college? I just heard he's been elected board chairman of the biggest bank in my home town."

"How is it that you can remember the score of every football game ever played, but can never remember my birthday?"

'You haven't been listening to a thing I said, have you? You have? All right, tell me — what did I say?"

"All I can say is that if we can't afford a cleaning woman every once in a while, you're the one who is going to have to start waxing the kitchen floor and mopping the bathroom."

"Maybe if you'd just let me tint the gray in your hair it might help you get ahead at the office faster. I hear that most bosses now want their employes to look as young as possible."

"Don't bother to take off your shoes. Have you forgotten we're going to the PTA meeting? They have a real interesting speaker I'm dying to hear. He's going to talk on, "Child Education among the Early Aztecs, and It's Implications in a Permissive Society."

"If I can get by on a tuna fish salad sandwich for lunch, why do you have to have beef stew and an expensive dessert?"

"Don't tell me it's your wife you've been listening to on the phone for the last half hour? You must be really henpecked."

"Remember Ronald, the boy I told you about who used to carry my books home from high school? Well, I just heard he's been made the executive vice president of a big advertising firm."

"Agnes and Jack are celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary next week. He's surprising her with a trip to Bermuda. Where are you planning to take me on our 25th anniversary — to the movies?"

"Hi Pop. Can you give me $10? We're having a school dance, and I have to take a girl, and — well, you know how it is. The gang always goes somewhere to eat afterward."

"All we have for dinner tonight is leftovers. If you don't want them, you can take me out to a restaurant. It shouldn't kill you to do that, should it"?

"I was dusting off the bookshelf this afternoon, and came across our wedding album. You know, you really weren't half bad-looking — then."

"Remember Charlie, the little boy who was so wild about me in kindergarten? I just heard he's running for governor next year. "I wonder what it would feel like to be the first lady in a state mansion?"

The Week's World In Focus

Threats, Warnings In Tense Middle East; U Thant Explains, Auto Sales Up, Toll High

THE Israeli - Arab crisis generated growing alarm throughout the world during the week, beginning with United Arab Republic President Gamal Abdel Nasser's statement that a negotiated peace with Israel was "out of the question" until Palestinian Arabs returned to their homeland — in what is now Israel.

While the United States sought backing among Western maritime nations for a test of the Egyptian blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba — Israel's only sea outlet to the east and south — the Soviet Union sent warships to reinforce its Middle East naval force. The Russians have expressed support of the Arab position.

Alarm Underscored

Alarm was underscored Tuesday, when Nasser and King Hussein of Jordan, longtime enemies, announced a military alliance if either nation is attacked.

The tension graduated another step Thursday, when Israel's Maj. Gen. Moshe Dayan, hero of the 1956 Sinai campaign against Egypt, was named defense minister. The move was seen as a boost to Israeli morale in the event of war.

On Friday, an Israeli patrol and four-man Syrian squad battled on the border, resulting in the first deaths since the current crisis began: two Israelis and one Syrian.

U.S. officials in Washington meanwhile announced that the United States and Britain are seeking accord with the maritime nations for a declaration for free and open passage through the contested gulf of all nations, including Israel.

Meanwhile, in Washington British Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned on Friday that failure to end peacefully Egypt's declared blockade of the Gulf of Aquaba could lead to not only a local war in the Middle East but a much larger conflict "in a matter of hours."

Wilson, held a news conference with President Johnson on the Middle East crisis.

He said the United States and Britain are seeking a peaceful solution through action in the U.N. Security Council and through issuance of a declaration on the blockade issue by the world's maritime powers.

The declaration would assert that the gulf and the entrance to it through the Strait of Tiran constitute an international waterway for all shipping. Israel has announced it will sign the declaration, so its shipping would be covered.

Wilson raised the question whether the Egyptian announcement of the blockade two weeks ago, primarily against Israeli shipping, was a threat and whether the blockade would in fact be enforced.

If it cannot be avoided, he said, and if it is enforced "then I believe there is a very, very dangerous state in which not only a local conflict but a much larger conflict might be only a matter of hours."

Wilson also said he accepts the sincerity of the Soviet government "in their desire to see restraint exercised" in the Middle East.

Action Defended

Secretary-General U Thant on Friday night defended his order withdrawing the United Nations Emergency Force from Egypt at the request of President Gamal Abdel Nasser. Considering the concept under which the UNEF operated, he said, his move was proper.

His first public defense of it came at the close of a speech to the United Nations Association for Canada.

Thant's action has been criticized by Canadian Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson and President Johnson as hasty in the current Middle East crisis. Thant ordered the withdrawal at the request of Egypt on May 19.

"I know that the withdrawal of UNEF and the situation which has given rise to it are a source of bitter disappointment and deep anxiety in many countries," Thant said. "Especially in Canada which has such a close relationship with UNEF from the very beginning, these feelings are acute." Pearson won the 1957 Nobel Peace Prize for his part in setting up the U.N. peacekeeping apparatus in the wake of the 1956 Suez war.

PRESIDENT Johnson and Australia's Prime Minister Harold E. Holt confer during week.

Thant declared that Canada, which had contributed men to the force from its inception more than 10 years ago, "has a large share of the credit both for the idea and for the practical success of this international force.

The Vietnam War

HEAVY fighting around Vietnam's demilitarized border zone claimed steep U.S. casualties for the week, but South Vietnamese government troops claimed victory Friday over the Viet Cong.

At least 150 of the 500-man Viet Cong outfit were reported killed by a task force of South Vietnamese paratroops, infantry and armor, with air and artillery backing.

Other clashes occurred below the zone, where the North Vietnamese have infiltrated fresh troops in a new bid to claim the border province of Quang Tri. This province, according to captured documents, was to have been the launching site for North Vietnamese invasion attempts frustrated in 1966.

U.S. Toll High

U.S. forces suffered 313 killed and 2,616 wounded during the week, a record combined total. The number of wounded was the highest for any week of the war, the number of dead second to last week's 337.

The allies reported 2,216 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese killed for the week, with wounded estimated at as much as 50 per cent higher.

NEW YORK City was beleaguered by domestic strife last week. On Tuesday, about 200 "hippies" gathered in an East Side park to play bongo drums and recite Buddhist love chants.

Police ordered the congregation to disperse, but a scuffle erupted in which at least two youths and one policeman were injured slightly. About three dozen hippies were arrested.

Mayor John V. Lindsay and aides later suggested that the police were overfearful of trouble, and planned to set aside park areas where hippies may drum and chant without restriction.

New York Trouble

On another front, some 600 landlords stormed City Hall on Friday, smashing windows and shouting, "We want to see our hippie mayor!"

The landlords were enraged over Lindsay's effort to end a strike of building service employes in about 1,000 rent-controlled Manhattan appartment houses, Lindsay accused the landlords of precipitating the strike so as to wreck the rent-control laws.

MEANWHILE, uncollected garbage piled higher and higher under a warm sun as the strike went into its eighth day Friday. Lindsay declared a health emergency and ordered sanitation men to cross picket lines to haul away the garbage.

High Court Ruling

The U.S. Supreme Court during the week upheld the California Supreme Court's decision that the state's controversial Proposition 14, approved by voters in 1964 as an amendment to California's constitution, is racially discriminatory.

The 5-4 decision held that the amendment went beyond mere repeal of the state's fair - housing legislation and created a right to refuse to rent or sell housing on racial grounds.

The Supreme Court also ruled that Congress lacks the authority to pass laws stripping Americans of their citizenship without their consent.

A third Supreme Court decision voided a 46-year-old rule that police officials could not use evidence seized in lawful searches of suspects' homes. Formerly, only illegal articles such as narcotics or instruments of crimes were usable as courtroom evidence.

Religious Difference

Religious differences broke apart the Republic of Nigeria on Tuesday, when the Eastern region declared itself an independent republic and named itself Biafra.

Nigeria has long been split by battles between the predominantly Moslem tribes of the North and the Christian and animist tribes of the East, who live around the Bight of Biafra, on Africa's west coast.

The 53 - foot ketch Gipsy Moth IV slipped past England's Plymouth breakwater at 8:58 p.m. Sunday, marking the triumphant finish of the epic sea voyage of Sir Francis Chichester.

Sir Francis, 65, sailed alone around the world, covering 28,500 miles in 226 days at sea.

Quotation of the week: "Citizenship is no light trifle to be jeopardized any moment Congress decides to do so under the name of one of its general or implied grants of power." — Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black.

Auto Sales Up

U.S. auto sales in the last 10 days of May scooted slightly ahead of sales in the same period a year earlier, putting the month's total eight per cent above May 1966, sales reports showed the past week.

The lead of May 21-31 this year over the period a year earlier was a slim two per cent, or 3,859 cars.

With giant General Motors leading the upward swing that has narrowed to 13 per cent the gap between the sluggish sales so far this year and sales at the same point in 1966.

All GM divisions reported more sales in this 10-day period than they had a year earlier, and the corporation's total sales were 11 per cent above May 21-31 1966.

Ford, the second largest of the U.S. automakers, continued to be the most behind the 1966 sales pace, with May 21-31 sales this year 11 per cent below those in the period a year ago.

Chrysler sales jumped to 44,603, five per cent above the 42,455 Chrysler vehicles sold in the May 21-31 period in 1966.

A JORDANIAN army doctor checks a volunteer at a training camp.

GM's sales for the period were 155,606, up from 144,355 a year earlier, and Ford's sales were 82,872, well below the 92,419 vehicles Ford sold in May 21-31, 1966.

The industry's total for the month was 801,195, up 47,600 — or eight per cent — from May a year ago, with GM's monthly sales up 18 per cent from a year ago, Chrysler's up 6 per cent, and Ford down 12 per cent.

Tiny American Motors reported sales of 22,602, up 5.4 per cent from May, 1966.

Meanwhile Walter P. Reuther foresees his United Auto Workers making $35,000 to $40,000 annually "in 20 years or so."

The UAW president told his union's Chrysler Council on Friday he anticipates this, and he later told a news conference that "technology to bring this about is in the works — and that day is coming."

Reuther said the United States' gross national product was only $40 billion in 1929, but predicted it will go beyond $800 billion next year, and added that his membership expects to get its "fair share out of this greater productivity."

Reorganization

The Defense Department announced Friday major reorganization of the National Guard and the Army Reserve. The plan is expected to touch off protests in state capitals and possibly in Congress.

The plan will abolish 15 under-strength National Guard divisions and replace them with combat-ready brigades. It will also give the Guard all combat and combat-support units now part of the Reserve.

Pentagon officials said the reorganization would create a smaller reserve, but one which could be mobilized faster — hopefully within eight weeks. Deputy Defense Secretary Cyrus Vance said the change would "assure maximum effectiveness and the fighting edge of the Reserve force will thus be further sharpened."

Spokesmen said the plan would be put into effect by the administration, but that Congress would have to approve the change in manpower levels. The new plan would reduce total manpower of the Guard and Reserve from 678,500 to 640,000 — a cut of 38,500 men

Because it involves National Guard units, which are in effect state militia until called to federal service, the plan was expected to touch off controversy across the nation.

About The M16

THE M16 is called the "little black rifle" by the Viet Cong and all sorts of names by some U.S. Marines.

Controversy surrounds the rifle, for two years the standard firearm in the U.S. Army in Vietnam but adopted by the Marines only three months ago.

"I'd rather have an air rifle."

"We'd be better off with the M14."

So say some of the Marines whose lives may depend on the M16.

Others praise it as excellent.

Marine sergeants, lieutenants and generals — and even many in the ranks—agree the problem will wither away with proper care of the rifle, more training time, and just plain living with it.

The M16 is four pounds lighter than the 11-pound M14. Thus a soldier can carry more ammunition. It is fired singly or automatically, giving every rifleman the increased fire of a light machine gun.

But sometimes a cartridge gets stuck in the chamber, making it impossible to fire the next round.

After the vicious fight near Khe Sanh early last month several Marines complained their M16s jammed at critical moments.

The M16 will jam, Marine experts say, if corrosion on the sides of a cartridge glues a shell in the chamber. Too much cleaning oil, or a little dust, also are bad.

When a shell is jammed the extractor hook which grabs the cartridge rim will not pull the shell out. The only way the barrel can be cleared is to assemble a cleaning rod, shelve it down the muzzle, and ram the cartridge out — an unnerving sequence in combat.

Marine spokesmen, including the outgoing Marine commander in Vietnam, Lt. Gen. Lewis W. Walt, says the problem would be solved if Marines would clean their M16s properly. A jammed gun is most often the result of a Marine "not doing what he is supposed to do," Walt told reporters.

FROM time to time sergeants can be seen imspecting Marine's weapon and sometimes dressing him down. One veteran, who says he has had no trouble, adds that the Leathernecks had only one or two days to learn the M16 in Vietnam whereas they trained for months as recruits with the M14.

Gen. Wallace M. Greene Jr., the Marine commandant, says principles involving the older rifles apply also to the M16 and that Marines get 10½ hours of training the M16 before they come to Vietnam.

Greene told Washington reporters recently that the M16 has proved to be reliable and hard-hitting. He described as faulty any impression that the Marine Corps is dissatisfied with it.

The Week's Twin Cities-Area News In Review

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Out west, the story goes, the wide open spaces are so vast a traveller may drive for hours, walk for days to reach an object seeming but a hoot-and-a-holler away.

Perhaps. Natural law is not subject to repeal, however, and departures beget arrivals. As every Western driver knows, perserverance pays.

Northeast Louisiana drivers, in a sense, know it too, for in less than a week they will have reached the end of one of those long roads, a road travelled steadily for over a year. Indeed, by the time these lines appear again, they will have voted on the Fifth District sales tax.

The one-cent levy to boost school, parish and municipal pay and provide various other improvements, at last in final form, will meet its test next Saturday. It was obvious last week the election was imminent. The tax, for one reason or another, was in spotlight frequently.

The glare was hottest, however, on Monday, as Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard, Mayor Bert Hatten of West Monroe, school leaders and other supporters of the measure assembled at City Hall to a cross section of local businessmen.

"ISSUE DISTORTED"

The session suddenly turned into a rip-snorting attack on opposition which had appeared over the weekend in the form of circulars suggesting, at least by implication, the closure of public schools. Howard, branding the material, signed only "Citizens of Ouachita Parish," a "distortion of the issue," said it made the coming election appear as a case of "segregation and integration."

The circular, placed on a number of cars, had said of the fact that by fall most Fifth District schools will have been desegregated, "The only choice we may have now is to remove our children from the public school system." It asked, "Do you want to support an integrated school system or put your money into private schools that will keep our children white and safe from the hands of illiterate Negroes and communists?"

Howard read the worst into the sheet and, to applause, issued an early warning that, "We will not tolerate rough stuff and interference with the operation of our schools." He called on everyone present to "use all your influence so that peace and good order can be maintained," adding, "If our people will keep their shirts on their back and their feet on the ground, we will have peace.

"In my opinion," he said, "the answer is not putting the schools in the hands of a bunch of radicals who are just as extreme on their side as integrationists are on theirs."

Howard, Hatten and the school officials took turns at the meeting in listing most critical needs which they said success of the tax would answer. Meanwhile, backers of the tax were diagnosing the best chance for passage June 10 than at any time since the long road began in May, 1966.

Certainly, strong voter interest in the election was a foregone conclusion. Absentee balloting, underway for two weeks, closed at noon Saturday and by Friday, when these notes were inscribed, appeared almost sure to set a record. Over 200 registered voters in Ouachita Parish, expecting to be away on June 10, had wended to the courthouse and marked an opinion, this despite rainfall during the week conservatively called "heavy."

Thirty-six votes were cast Wednesday alone, the briskest single day.

Interest in another form was being shown as Ouachita Parish Police Jury President T. W. Humphries surprised many observers by calling a special Friday meeting to "discuss and take appropriate action" on the sales tax. Best earlier indications had been clearly that the jury would not take a stand, though some among them, such as Ward 3's Curtis Joiner, were being explicit that it should.

Results of the meeting doubtless were in Saturday's Morning World in a story written after this one, which is limited by a weekend overlap. Conversations during the week, however, anticipated a vote ranging from 15-4 to 18-1, a range indicating strong support for the tax. One member, M. W. Montgomery, Ward 3, due to be out of town Friday evening, expressed his "100 per cent" approval before the session started.

The tax, during the week, also received the endorsement of the Richland Parish Police Jury.

WOEFUL WEATHER

The weatherman last week was a woeful figure, or at least his stock-in-trade was a gloomy commodity. In the period covered here, Sunday was alright; was Friday; but, in between was no bowl of cherries — they would have drowned on the vine.

The Twin Cities could knock on wood, or the levee, that there was no heavy damage amid the swirl of thunderstorms which clouded the skies and dashed 2.34 inches of rain to earth — half the usual total for the entire month of May — in a three-day period. And this during a period in which the rain fell generally only in the mornings.

The whole Morning World coverage area found itself under tornado alert on more than one occasion, though again, fate to thank, really severe damage and loss of life was spared. Some crop losses were expected, however, on the final balance sheet, and one large section of Shreveport felt with particular effect a siege of flooding. That city, by the way, took four and one-half inches of rain in 12 hours Tuesday.

Back in Monroe, residents were watching a creeping rise on the Ouachita River which already has made cardboard-sliding down the levee grass a moist proposition. By Friday, her level stood at 29.2 — 10.8 feet under flood stage. Though the Ouachita has gone beyond previous crest estimates by some two feet, engineers see no cause for anxiety in a Twin City area that cut its teeth on floods. Present readings have been reported eight to 10 feet below usual expectations.

LOCALS HONORED

Home folks were doing well by themselves last week in the honors department, led by the example of the Monroe Police Department pistol team which would up fourth in a field of 17. The competition, at the Louisiana Peace Officers Association convention in Bossier City, found one of the Monroe team members, Jerry Roden, a nine-year officer, as individual quick draw champion. Shooting but two and one-half points short of a maximum possible score, he racked up what was believed the first individual first place ever earned by a Monroe shooter.

Monroe Jaycees, meantime, were honoring their own when, at the annual Awards Night Banquet, John Wray Young III was named Jaycee of the Year, cited by President Tom Lee and the organization for "an exceptional job this year in youth, sports, publicity and public relations. Young, chapter vice president, was recently appointed executive director of the annual Jaycee-sponsored Miss Louisiana Pageant, due to run this year June 28-July 1.

(A) separate announcement during the week named 1959 Miss America Mary Ann Mobley of Brandon, Miss., now a nationally known movie and television performer, as the pageant Mistress of Ceremonies. The program is scheduled again for the auditorium of Neville High School.)

Other top awards went to Cliff Lawrence as Director of the Year, and to J. D. Cascio as Chairman of the Year. Lawrence is general chairman for the Jaycees' upcoming first annual Air Show at Monroe Municipal Airport, set for June 11.

Jerry Ainsworth won a "Speak Up, Jaycee" award, amid a number of presentations for first-year and long-time service. Featured speaker was lifetime member Pete Dowd of Monroe.

Meeting Friday night for its awards and recognition dinner, the Ouachita Parish Heart Association installed Frank McDermott of Monroe as president, succeeding Jerry Braud. Speaker was Dr. William M. Luikart of Baton Rouge, president of the Louisiana Heart Association, while awards were made to various fund leaders and news media representatives.

Also during the week, the Ouachita Association for Retarded Children filled the unexpired terms of B. R. Bond and Howard Smith Jr., naming Mrs. Francis Garner as administrative secretary and Mrs. Elaine Zirkle as treasurer. Elected to directorships were Mrs. Lois Taylor and Mrs. Betty Smith.

In ceremonies elsewhere, the impending retirement of Monroe Sewer Supt. John B. Renaud was marked by a banquet in his honor. A city employee since May, 1934, the former superintendent of both the water and sewer departments will retire officially June 30. From the city he received a watch, from his department a transistor radio and from local plumbers a six-day trip with Mrs. Renaud to Galveston, Tex.

IN THE AREA

Counting Baton Rouge as the area, the Legislature, clanking to the close of its last full week in a 30-day fiscal session, was making news of note.

Perhaps of keenest political interest was the disclosure that multi-office senatorial districts will not be cut into divisions —at least, not yet. Sen. Jamar Adcock, of Monroe, whose idea it was, indicated he would not press the matter, earlier called an emergency justifying consideration at a fiscal session. The thought was to further sectionalize districts in such a way as to narrow fields of candidates. In the local district, for example, candidates might have run in a Ouachita - Morehouse Parish division, while others ran in an East Carroll-West Carroll division.

Also of local interest was a House-passed bill to charge college students a maximum $30 "building use" fee on which construction bonds would be issued. Monroe's Adcock again was author, with Louisiana Tech President Dr. F. Jay Taylor active in support.

Another measure getting plenty of scrutiny also was Adcock's — a resolution introduced Thursday to suspend legislatively - approved pay raises for district attorneys, judges and others. Gov. John McKeithen, holding a teetering budget, made a surprise visit to back the resolution, which probably would save him the necessity of having to veto the raises are funds to the state's 32 district attorneys and for judges. McKeithen's urging, reports said, had some solons grumbling and doubtful the resolution will pass Tuesday on the session's last day.

In matters more strictly in the area, Newellton voters defeated a 2.5 mill tax for creation of a recreation district, while okaying a $480,000 bond issue for a sewage district. Though the first got popular approval, the assesement majority went against it. It was enough.

Uncle Sam also had words for the area, good or bad, depending on where one stood. From Washington came the report that the Civil Rights Commission will open a voter registration office in Tallulah. It wasn't said when, but it doesn't usually take long.

In Lake Providence, at this time, for some reason the pursestrings were showing signs of tightening. The poverty warriors at least temporarily have rejected Head Start money for the East Carroll Parish Community Action Association. A 14-hour hearing on the appeal was held in Lake Providence Monday, with the decision due back in a couple of weeks.

OTHER NEWS

With what remains of our space and the reader's patience, here's a count of the week's other key news events:

Mrs. Alma Jordan, 56, of Pineville, formerly of Tallulah, died in an automobile crash five miles west of Ferriday on U.S. 84.

Registration for Northeast Louisiana State College's two six-week summer sessions was held Thursday. Classes got underway Friday.

The name of the Ouachita Valley Vocational - Technical School in West Monroe was changed by the Legislature to Ouachita Valley Technical Institute.

West Monroe Negro Willie Earl Burton, 17, of 134 Copley St., was charged with aggravated burglary after the slashing of 21-year-old Mrs. Darlene Adams in her home at 1907 Trenton St., West Monroe. Mrs. Adams, who officers said woke to find an intruder in the home, was reported recuperating satisfactorily. Burton will be arraigned Monday.

A $720,000 annual reduction in rates charged by Southern Bell for intrastate toll calls went into effect Thursday, in accord with a Louisiana Public Service Commission order of April 21. It will bring to nearly $2.5 million, the total reduction in intrastate long distance charges over the past three years.

The first summer production of Monroe Little Theatre's Children's Theatre started Thursday a four-day run. Called "Androcles and the Lion," the production goes on the boards for the last time at 2:30 p.m. today.

Complications Slow Global Communications Progress

The bright dream envisioned a new era of communications, transmitting information to all parts of the world faster, more efficiently and cheaper, and bringing education to the dark places of the globe. But four years after the first communications satellite was launched, the dream still is largely unfulfilled. Legal snarls, corporate power struggles, outdated government regulations, and desire for quick profits have combined to keep the new age from being born. The following article tells why, until the issues are settled, the new voice will be retarded. The article is of particular interest to those concerned with communicating with the public.

By DAVE SMITH

NEW YORK (AP) — It was the dawning of a new era that February day in 1963, when a new kind of communications satellite soared into space.

True, an electronic mishap muted the satellite's ability to message back its own significance. But all the same, it had achieved an orbit 22,300 miles from earth, where they said it couldn't be done yet, so it was the dawn of a new era.

Distance, the major technical hurdle and cost factor in any communication between two points, was rendered almost negligible by the development known as the synchronous satellite.

Orbiting the earth in the same time as the earth turns on its own axis, it appeared stationary in space, just as a point on a turning wheel rim remains fixed above a point on the hub. Three such satellites, equally spaced around the equator, could blanket all the earth but the poles, receiving and relaying communications signals with roughly the same simplicity as a mountaintop transmitter.

More to the point, they offered enormously greater capacity for telephone, telegraph, television and data transmission at much smaller cost than the many earth-bound transmitters and long-distance cables in use. The first commercial synchronous satellite alone raised telephone capacity across the Atlantic by more than a third.

More sophisticated satellites will multiply this capacity many times and transmit facsimile mail or even the daily newspaper, direct from outer space to individual breakfast tables. They could also have enormous impact on the growth of underdeveloped nations, beaming education to parts of the world where it might never be economical to string cables.

Truly, the dawn of a new era. But perhaps the world may be forgiven for not having noticed.

Four years and several launches later, the communications satellite era is well beyond that foggy dawn but not yet into daylight. From what promised to be an ocean of riches, only about a puddleful has been extracted.

While the satellite, far from earth, speaks with a clear voice of revolutionary economy and efficiency in communication among peoples, down here somebody was asleep at the switchboard.

Today the voice still is all but drowned in a legal cacophony of crossed wires and dangling lines. Like an atomic-powered oceanliner launched in a world still legislating paddlewheeler traffic, the synchronous satellite soared onto a scene of legal unpreparedness. It has literally created an embarrassment of riches. But there is a lack of legal ways to use the wealth.

In regulating a rapidly growing and changing communications technology, the United States still depends on the Federal Communications Act of 1934 and the Communications Satellite Act of 1962, passed before the Synchronous satellite was even thought possible.

Experts in the field believe it may be years before the cumbersome process of government action ultimately produces legal machinery as efficient as the satellites.

The thought of the dollar impact on the communications industry — a skyrocketing bundle of enterprises in this information — and entertainment-hungry world — has propelled industry leaders into a gold rush.

The combatants include as impressive an array of pressure groups as any corporate power play in American history, among them American Telephone & Telegraph, Communications Satellite Corp. — Comsat, the Ford Foundation, the Carnegie Commission, the National Broadcasting Co., the American Broadcasting Co., Columbia Broadcasting System, and the news industry.

Among them all is a bewildering series of alliances and antagonisms that shift as official attention turns from topic to topic.

Another major contender in the legal snarl is the U.S. government which, declaring satellite communications a national objective, provided the bulk of research and development on them. The usefulness of highspeed, massive communications facilities to international relations and national security would be hard to overestimate.

A fiscal tug of war among many corporate giants for control of a sophisticated new science is a complex prospect in itself, further complicated by the pressures government exerts on its own behalf. But the complexities are multiplied many times over when viewed through the perspective of the major question underlying the current debate over the future of satellite communications — that of the public interest.

Who speaks for the public - the individual television viewer and telephone user - in an arena where proven champions maneuver for slices of this pie in the sky and it isn't even clear yet who is entitled to buy and sell the slices?

The government, nominal guardian of the public interest, is also committed to nurturing American private enterprise. This is a dual responsibliity that troubles government at those points, usually financial, where public and private interests conflict and suspicions arise that profits aren't balancing out at a reasonable rate to all parties.

The Federal Communications Commission is the watchdog over the communications utilities whose business is by its very nature rooted in the public interest. The FCC is having particularly heavy sledding these days in its relations with AT&T, an area long administered in an atmosphere of good will, informality and easy give and take.

The main event is on television.

Last August, the Ford Foundation thrust its way into the satellite debate, insisting that the major stake in satellite technology and its benefits rightfully belonged to the public.

The Ford Foundation argued that part of the savings resulting from television transmission via satellite should be declared a "social dividend" in the shape of a nonprofit corporation for public, noncommercial TV.

Dispute over how this should be done, and who should do it, has allied AT&T and Comsat, both quasi monopolies, in a struggle with Ford, the nation's largest philanthrophy. The FCC, which as a government body is also accountable to the public interest, has the task of judging the debate.

What intensifies the FCC's problem is the arrival of a new tool that not only leapfrogged beyond present technology but beyond present law as well. It is clear now that the lawmakers of 1934 and 1962 were unequal - as perhaps anyone would be - to the task of framing laws broad enough to cover future developments without at the same time being so ambiguous that no one can agree on what the law allows.

The net result of this legislative failure is that the FCC is forced into a game of "What To Do Until the Doctor Comes." It must regulate a brawling industry as adequately as the old laws allow until new laws come along to take the heat off.

From its beginnings in 1934, the FCC examined AT&T earnings only on an informal basis, concerning itself chiefly with the Bell System's over-all profits rather than the earnings of its many separate operations. From time to time it suggested rate changes, but since changes could be ordered only after formal hearings, these suggestions weren't binding.

In this informal way, the FCC and AT&T evolved a mutually acceptable system of bargaining and compromise that enabled them to get on to other things. To the FCC, the informality was justified by AT&T's usually willing acceptence of suggestions, by voluntary rate reductions when developments warranted and by Bell's obviously excellent management of a communications empire that is the world's leader in complexity, efficiency and economy.

To AT&T, this informality gave management comparative freedom to set its own rates, decide how savings should be divided up and use profits from its blue chip enterprise — like its telephone network — to bolster development of smaller operations.

One such was Telpak, a bundle of economical circuits for voice, teletype, photograph and other written record communications. AT&T began leasing Telpak in 1961, in four sizes and at substantial discount rates, to users of bulk communications lines. News services and more than 900 businesses found Telpak ideally tailored to their needs and purse.

But Western Union Telegraph Co., a common carrier which is restricted to written communications, protested that AT&T was underpricing them and letting its $4.6 billion reserves from its noncompetitive long-distance telephone service carry the competitive Telpak at little or no profit.

In March 1964, the FCC suggested that Bell's Telpak rates discriminated illegally by charging bulk users lower rates than regular private line subscribers. Bell and its customers answered that the volume discount principle was expressly permitted by the 1934 Communications Act for the sake of the public interest.

In October 1965, the FCC announced, for the first time in its history, that it would hold formal hearings on the Bell System's rate structure, piece by piece.

A year later it ordered, rather than suggested, a revision of Telpak rates. AT&T, after more than two years of opposition, now not only agreed but even argued against discount rates in subsequent appeals by the dispossessed Telpak users. The users ultimately lost, when the U.S. Supreme Court last March refused to review the case.

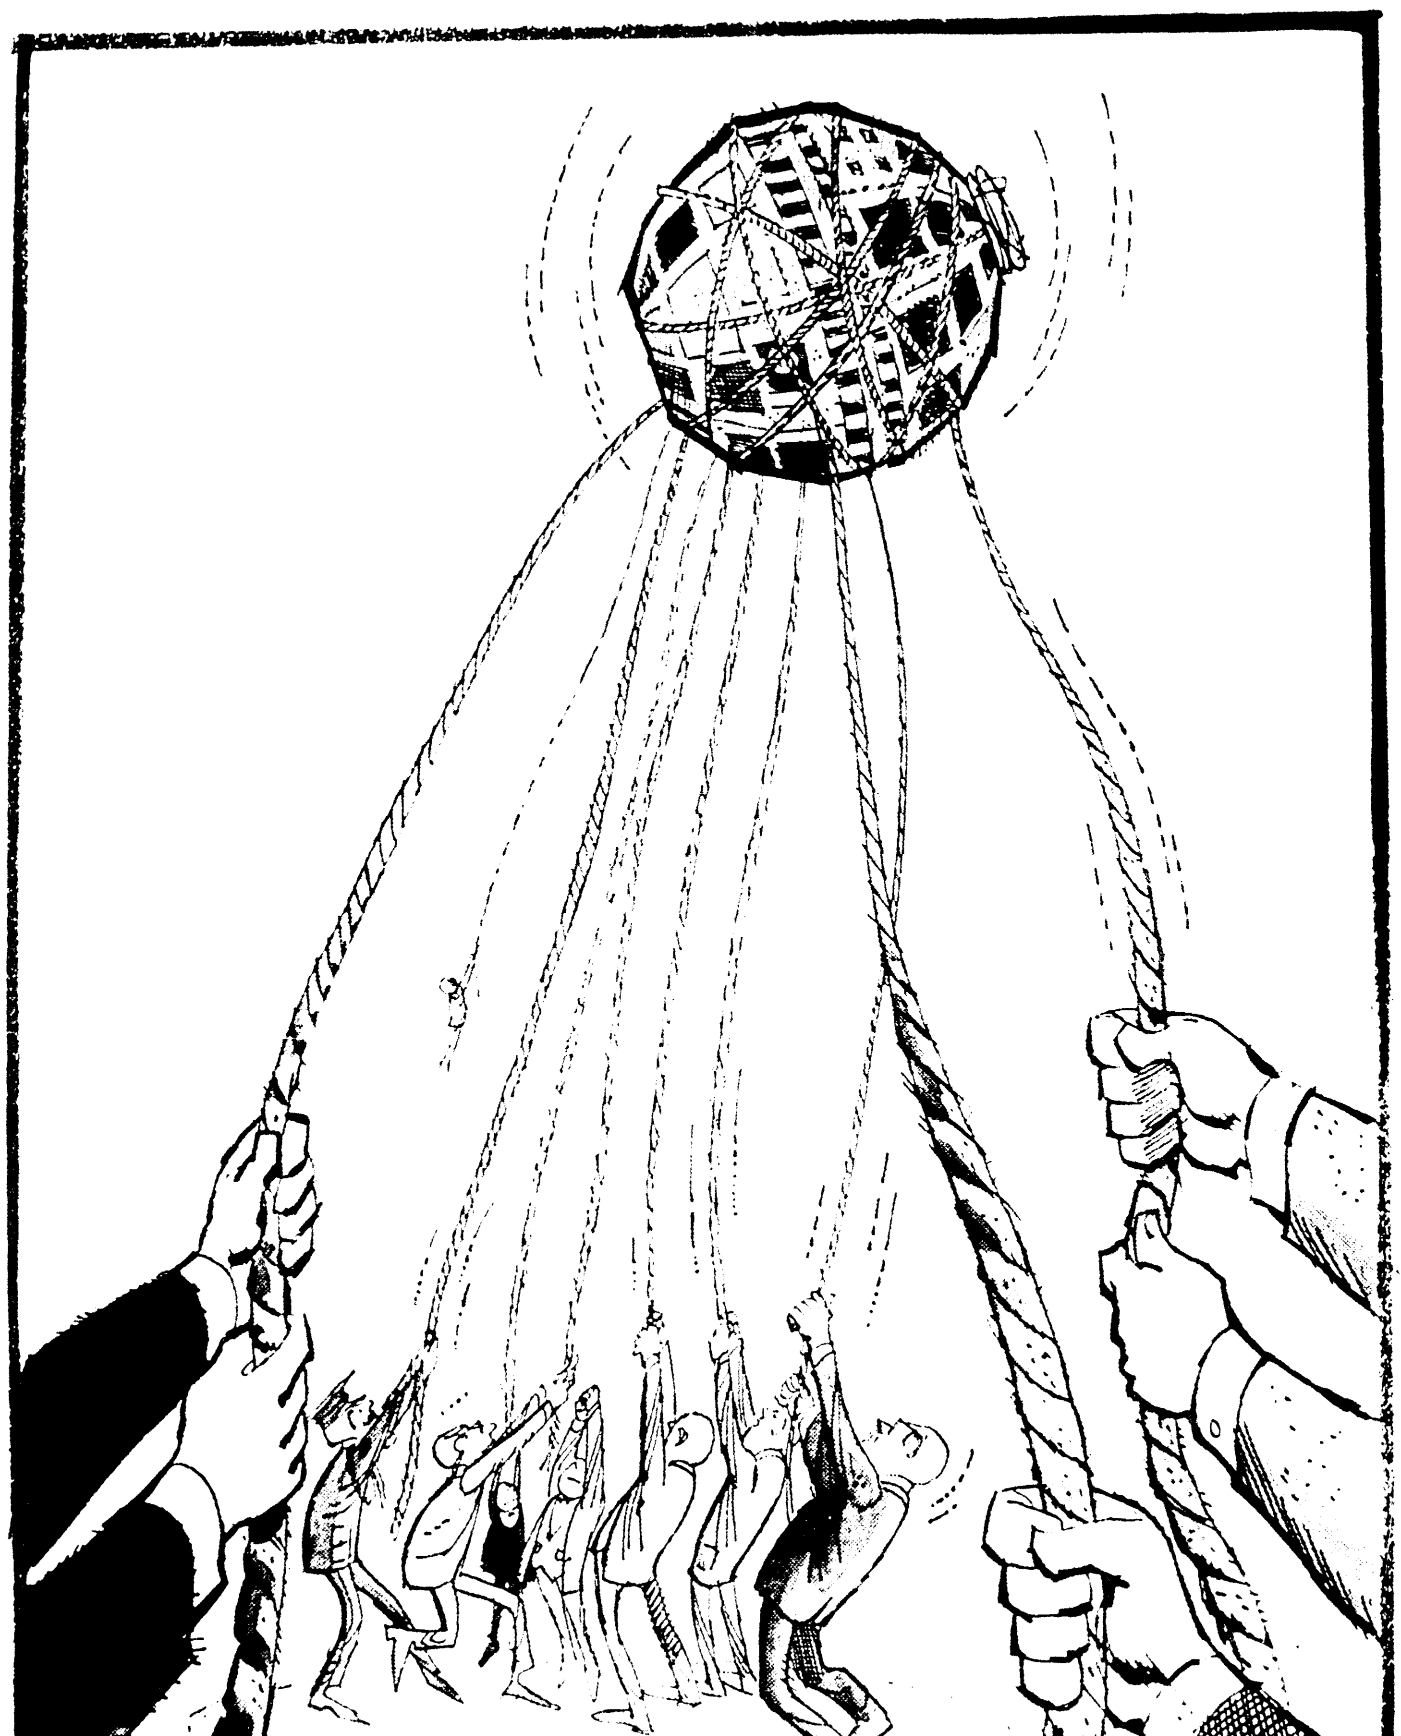
In total magnitude, the Telpak case in itself bulked rather small, but it brought AT&T's entire anatomy under careful scrutiny at a delicate time. Bell saw no profit in haggling over a minnow like Telpak, not while it had to defend, and hopefully increase, its overall rate structure, and not while it had to keep a competitive eye on developments in space.

By this time, other nagging problems created by the new technology had converged on the FCC, and at the heart of the uproar revolved the synchronous satellite, appropriately nicknamed Early Bird.

Much of the bitterness and confusion of the present free - for - all is residue from the 1962 act that created Comsat. Distrust of a possible communications monopoly, either private or governmental, engendered angry congressional dialogue — even a Senate filibuster — and when Comsat's birth was accomplished, it emerged a strange bird indeed.

Carpentered together out of mismatched compromises, Comsat was designated the government's "chosen instrument" with exclusive rights to operate this country's share of an international communication satellite system. If that sounds monopolistic, Congress evidently felt that bugaboo was laid to rest by the compromise by which Comsat's board of directors was chosen.

Of a 15 - man board, three are presidential appointees, six are elected from private stockholders and six represent the four established common carriers. They recognized Comsat's potential early and bought $100 million of a $196 - million share offering. Bell alone owns 29 per cent of Comsat's stock and has three seats on its board.



THERE ARE MANY GROUPS with conflicting ideas about how a global communications system should be operated. (AP Newsfeatures Drawing)

This compromise illustrates the dilemma that has hounded Comsat since birth. Comsat management and its private stockholders naturally want the widest possible market in which to invest their $196 - million capital. But management also must avoid treading on the toes of the established carriers who, while representing potential competition, are nonetheless Comsat's major stockholders.

The knife slices both ways for the carrier stockholders as well: as Comsat investors they gain if Comsat flourishes, and they also lose, because they're its competitors.

The effect of these opposed interests was not immediately apparent, however, because at that time, notions of satellite communications were based only on the low - or medium-or-bit "random" satellites like Bell's Telstar.

These satellites were never thought feasible for a domestic communications system because they weren't stationary; they traversed the globe, never remaining in sight of linked transmission and reception facilities for more than a few hours. A prohibitively expensive number would have been required to give one nation continuous coverage by these wanderers, so they were considered useful only for intermittent, international use.

But just a year later came the first synchronous satellite- the mute Syncom I and the successful Syncoms II and III 8 years ahead of expectations. With Comsat's commercial Early Bird, suddenly the satellites had leapfrogged ahead of cables.

Early Bird's high test score soon pointed up two glaring ambiguities in the Comsat Act in areas where Congress preferred to pass authority - one is tempted to say "the buck" - to the FCC. One was the "authorized user" questions: Who would be entitled to deal with Comsat directly in leasing satellite channels? The other question was : Who should develop a domestic satellite program, now that it was proved feasible?

Last summer the Department of Defense asked for bids for 30 transpacific channels on a forthcoming satellite. The three international common carriers- RCA Communications, ITT World Communications and Western Union International - quoted charges of $10,000 to $12,500 a month per half circuit.

Comsat offered to lease them directly for $4,000 a month - a fraction more than the fee the carriers would have paid to Comsat if one of them had received the contract.

The carriers counterproposed dropping all Pacific circuit leases by 40 per cent if the contract was assigned to them. The Department of Defense, naturally wanting to eliminate the middleman, signed with Comsat.

But the FCC disapproved the Comsat Pentagon contract. Earlier it had ruled directly with government agencies only when "unique or exceptional circumstances" warranted classifying that agency as an authorized user. Otherwise, it must continue to distribute its business among the established carriers. The Pentagon has disputed the FCC ruling and the squabble probably will wind up in court.

Meanwhile, the newspaper industry also tried to climb aboard a satellite. The FCC order on Telpak will bring the wholesale press communication rate to an end on Aug. 1 -which, without alternative means, would hike news service wire costs by as much as 300 per cent per year.

The news industry felt that the role of a free press in American tradition unquestionably identified it as devoted to the public interest and should qualify it as an authorized user of the inexpensive satellite communication rates.

But again, the FCC disagreed with the news media view and disapproved the petitions.

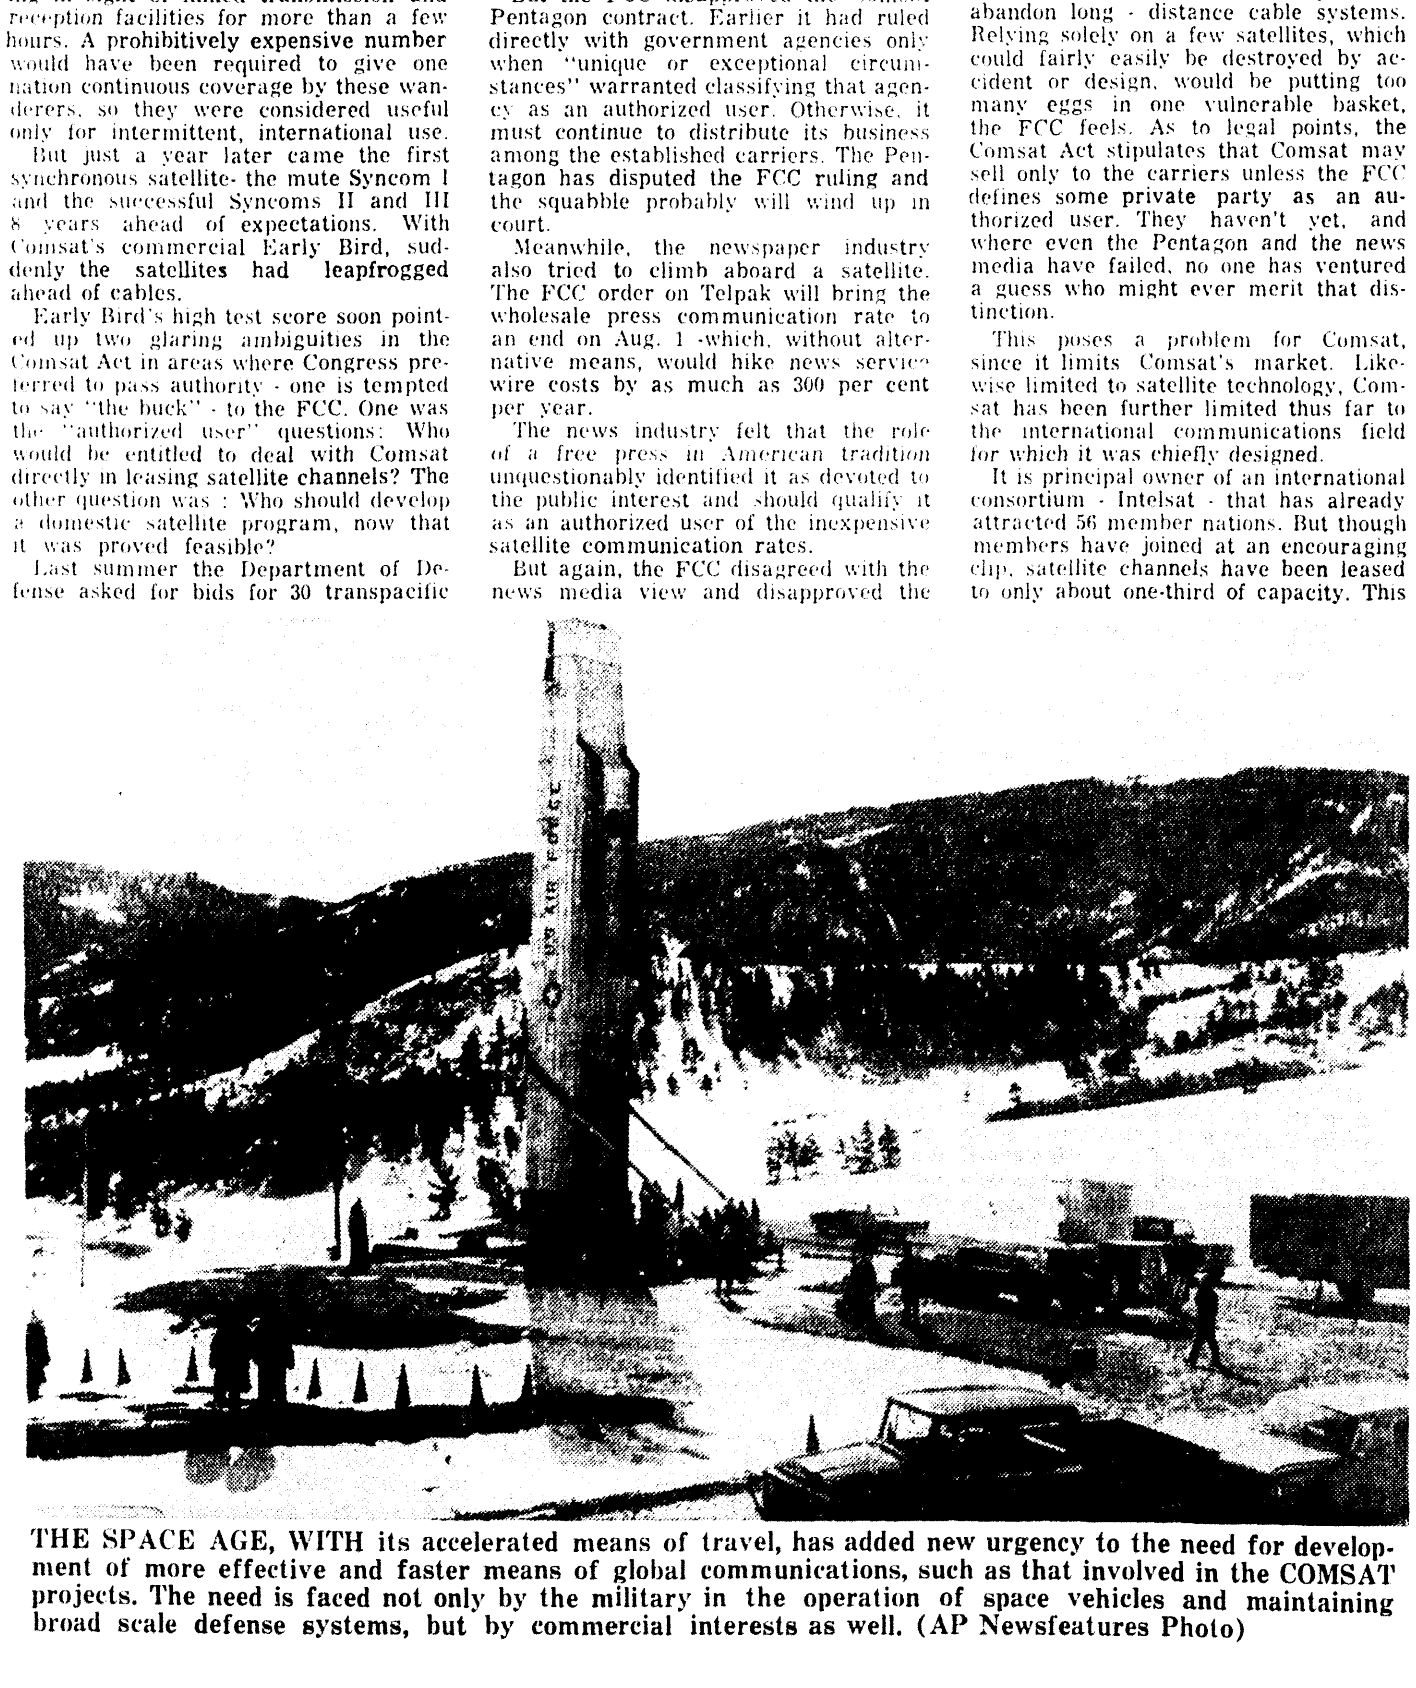
Both cases revolve around the fundamental question of whether Comsat may deal directly with customers or whether it is a "carriers' carrier," a wholesaler bound always to deal with middlemen who make a hefty profit in retail.

The common carriers - AT&T preeminent among them - contend that the law is clear: Comsat is a carriers' carrier. They, naturally, want to absorb Comsat's profitable technology, to average out the losses they will inevitably incur as satellites gain firmer dominance over the long - distance cables.

Their view enjoys strong support from the FCC, which also feels it would be unwise from a security standpoint to abandon long - distance cable systems. Relying solely on a few satellites, which could fairly easily be destroyed by accident or design, would be putting too many eggs in one vulnerable basket, the FCC feels. As to legal points, the Comsat Act stipulates that Comsat may sell only to the carriers unless the FCC defines some private party as an authorized user. They haven't yet, and where even the Pentagon and the news media have failed, no one has ventured a guess who might ever merit that distinction.

This poses a problem for Comsat, since it limits Comsat's market. Likewise limited to satellite technology, Comsat has been further limited thus far to the international communications field for which it was chiefly designed.

It is principal owner of an international consortium - Intelsat - that has already attracted 56 member nations. But though members have joined at an encouraging clip, satellite channels have been leased to only about one-third of capacity. This is attributable chiefly to slow foreign development of ground facilities or foreign nations' desire to protect their big investment in existing cables.



THE SPACE AGE, WITH its accelerated means of travel, has added new urgency to the need for development of more effective and faster means of global communications, such as that involved in the COMSAT projects. The need is faced not only by the military in the operation of space vehicles and maintaining broad scale defense systems, but by commercial interests as well. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Because Comsat was designed with the expensive, low - orbit satellite concept in mind and quickly raised $200 million to finance such a system, it is now drastically overcapitalized. Only three synchronous satellites now constitute the system once expected to require many, and Comsat has about $150 million in unused cash on its hands. Comsat officials are eager to find other uses for their sole product, so as to broaden their investment, which is the earnings base on which the FCC regulates the rate of return.

This desire has naturally led them to campaign heavily for a franchise on a domestic satellite system. Although the Comsat Act pointedly avoids delegating such a system to anyone by name, Comsat feels its role as the government's "chosen instrument" in international communications, even the fact of its creation by an act of Congress, is implicit evidence that a domestic franchise is rightfully Comsat's.

When the FCC rejected a plan by American Broadcasting Co. last year to develop its own satellite system to handle its television transmissions, Comsat took it as an encouraging precedent.

Then the FCC invited comment on the ABC case and the domestic satellite question generally. This was where the Ford Foundation muddied the fiscal waters with its assertion that the public had the strongest claim on a technology which, after all, the taxpayers had paid for.

Ford estimated that the $65 million a year the three commercial networks — NBC, CBS and ABC — now pay to AT&T for transmissions would be cut by as much as $30 million. Ford proposed that about two-thirds of this be diverted to support a noncommercial TV network devoted to the cultural and educational public service broadcasting for which commercial TV cannot find sponsors.

As a concept, Ford's social dividend proposal enjoys no opposition and significant support — by a message to Congress from President Johnson, by Senate Bill S. 1160 proposing a corporation for public television, by a similar report from the Carnegie Commission and by the commercial networks.

But Ford's suggestions on how to bring that concept onto the nation's TV screens are another matter.

Ford proposed that a domestic satellite system be dedicated solely to TV distribution. Satellites tailored specifically to TV uses, uncluttered by instruments for other common-carrier operations, would offer commercial broadcasters improved, expanded service as well as a cost reduction and even more savings for noncommercial programming. A dedicated system also could provide free channels to link schools and educational TV stations now spotted around the country into a loose national network.

This is where Comsat and AT&T part company with Ford. They argue that Ford's proposed "economies of specialization" would be more than offset by "economies of scale" if TV distribution and common-carrier operations were handled in one multipurpose system.

They also are opposed to a specialized system in which savings on TV are reserved for that system's users. This they call a violation of the common-carrier concept by which all savings from a new technology are shared across the board with all users of any form of the new communications technology. This, by the way, is the reverse of Comsat's view on the ill-fated 30-channel Pentagon contract.

Ford counters that the economy-of-scale argument is exaggerated for the sake of getting the most mileage out of the present investment in multipurpose satellites, and that heavy traffic in peak periods aboard a multipurpose satellite could impair TV broadcast quality.

Ford also argues that the common-carrier concept not only calls for across-the-board sharing of savings but losses as well. Savings would be negligible by the time they reached the public pocket, Ford claims, if private companies first used them to average off losses to some operations. A dedicated TV system would avoid this problem and give the public the most for its tax dollars, culturally if not financially, Ford adds.

"Not all the parties to this proceeding," Ford told the FCC last month "are equally interested in the rapid adaptation of the communications satellite to domestic uses. Except for those of us who seek a broadcast satellite service, Comsat is almost alone in its desire to move forward with a domestic satellite system as quickly as possible, but even Comsat must be sensitive to the interests of the carriers. The carriers, including AT&T, are understandably concerned to insure the most economic use of their existing microwave and other ground facilities and are naturally inclined to relegate the satellite to a supplementary role."

In its first public attack on Comsat, Ford sharply criticized the structure of Comsat's board and warned that it would become a world monopoly without parallel if the FCC gave it a domestic franchise.

Instead, Ford asked at least a one-year moratorium before any domestic system be authorized. In the interim, it urged that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration be assigned a test program for TV. Award of such a test program to Comsat, Ford claimed, would carry the implication of a permanent arrangement.

In reply, Comsat board chairman James McCormack said it is "nonsense" to fear that Comsat would become a "baleful monopoly." Instead, McCormack said, it is a struggling young company, hedged about with restraints, that's just trying to do what Congress and the President have told it to do.

There the matter rests for the present, awaiting disposition along with a welter of other issues before the beleaguered FCC.

Fred Friendly, former president of CBS News and now adviser on public TV to the Ford Foundation, says the multiplicity of issues and the confusion tend to work in favor of the big private interests.

"The FCC is just refereeing all the pressure groups," he says. "We need to have someone planning the future of the communications industry as a whole right now. As long as the issues come up one at a time, AT&T can pick them off, one by one. That's what happened to the news services."

"Remember this," he adds, "AT&T has the biggest bonanza in largesse that the government ever gave anybody. I'm a stockholder, but still I say it."

But Western Union Telegraph Co., a common carrier which is restricted to written communications, protested that AT&T was underpricing them and letting its $4.6 billion reserves from its noncompetitive long-distance telephone service carry the competitive Telpak at little or no profit.

In March 1964, the FCC suggested that Bell's Telpak rates discriminated illegally by charging bulk users lower rates than regular private line subscribers. Bell and its customers answered that the volume discount principle was expressly permitted by the 1934 Communications Act for the sake of the public interest.

In October 1965, the FCC announced, for the first time in its history, that it would hold formal hearings on the Bell System's rate structure, piece by piece.

A year later it ordered, rather than suggested, a revision of Telpak rates. AT&T, after more than two years of opposition, now not only agreed but even argued against discount rates in subsequent appeals by the dispossessed Telpak users. The users ultimately lost, when the U.S. Supreme Court last March refused to review the case.

In total magnitude, the Telpak case in itself bulked rather small, but it brought AT&T's entire anatomy under careful scrutiny at a delicate time. Bell saw no profit in haggling over a minnow like Telpak, not while it had to defend, and hopefully increase, its overall rate structure, and not while it had to keep a competitive eye on developments in space.

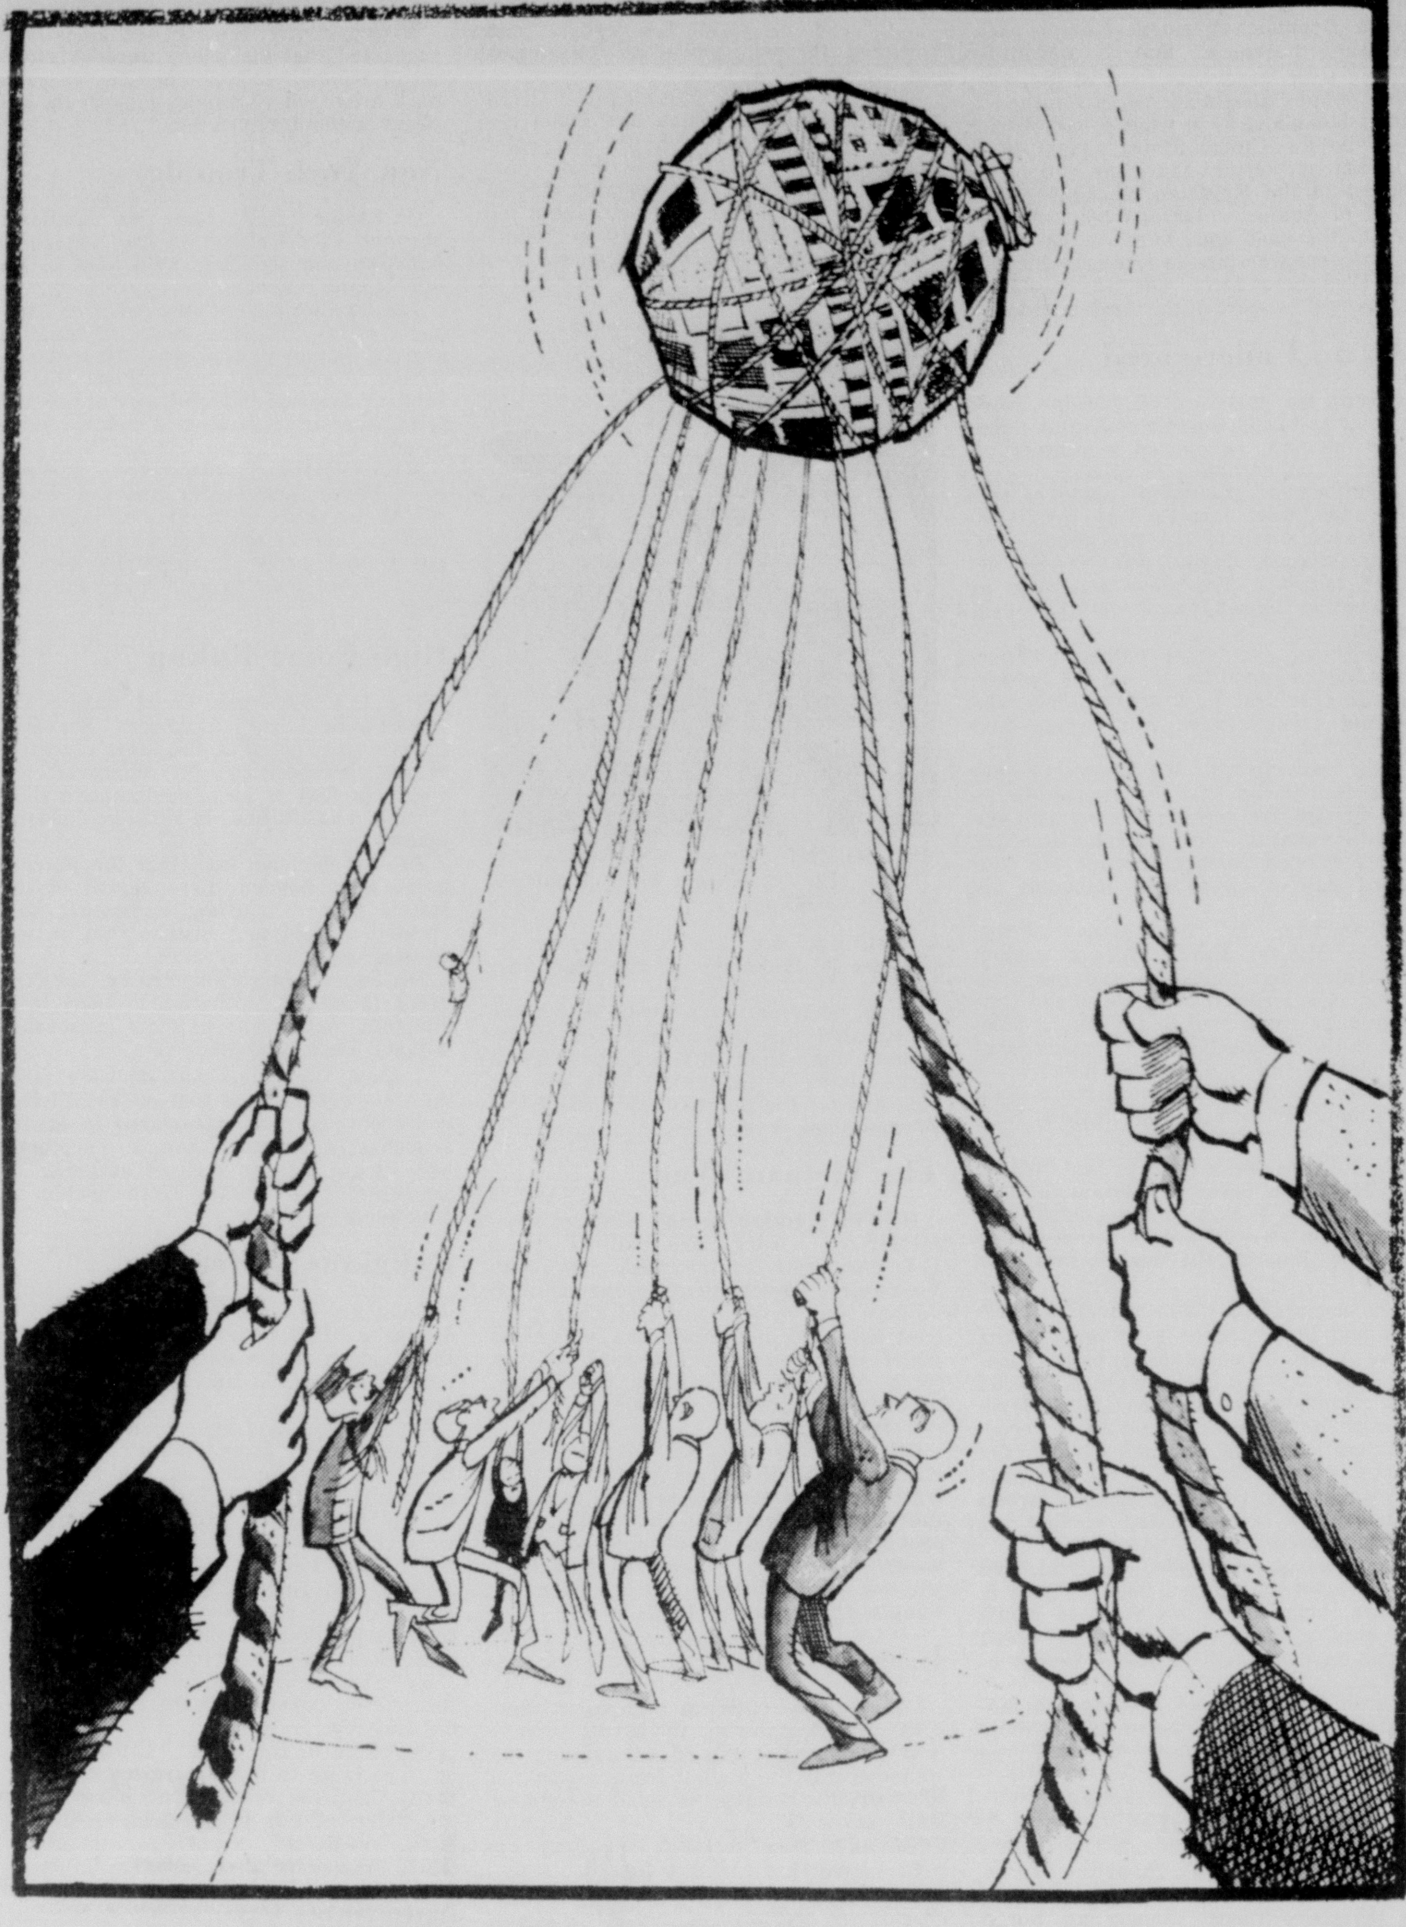
By this time, other nagging problems created by the new technology had converged on the FCC, and at the heart of the uproar revolved the synchronous satellite, appropriately nicknamed Early Bird.

Much of the bitterness and confusion of the present free - for - all is residue from the 1962 act that created Comsat. Distrust of a possible communications monopoly, either private or governmental, engendered angry congressional dialogue — even a Senate filibuster — and when Comsat's birth was accomplished, it emerged a strange bird indeed.

Carpentered together out of mismatched compromises, Comsat was designated the government's "chosen instrument" with exclusive rights to operate this country's share of an international communication satellite system. If that sounds monopolistic, Congress evidently felt that bugaboo was laid to rest by the compromise by which Comsat's board of directors was chosen.

Of a 15 - man board, three are presidential appointees, six are elected from private stockholders and six represent the four established common carriers. They recognized Comsat's potential early and bought $100 million of a $196 - million share offering. Bell alone owns 29 per cent of Comsat's stock and has three seats on its board.

This compromise illustrates the dilemma that has hounded Comsat since birth. Comsat management and its private stockholders naturally want the widest possible market in which to invest their $196 - million capital. But management also must avoid treading on the toes of the established carriers who, while representing potential competition, are nonetheless Comsat's major stockholders.



THERE ARE MANY GROUPS with conflicting ideas about how a global communications system should be operated. (AP Newsfeatures Drawing)

The knife slices both ways for the carrier stockholders as well: as Comsat investors they gain if Comsat flourishes, and they also lose, because they're its competitors.

The effect of these opposed interests was not immediately apparent, however, because at that time, notions of satellite communications were based only on the low - or medium-or-bit "random" satellites like Bell's Telstar.

These satellites were never thought feasible for a domestic communications system because they weren't stationary; they traversed the globe, never remaining in sight of linked transmission and reception facilities for more than a few hours. A prohibitively expensive number would have been required to give one nation continuous coverage by these wanderers, so they were considered useful only for intermittent, international use.

But just a year later came the first synchronous satellite- the mute Syncom I and the successful Syncoms II and III 8 years ahead of expectations. With Comsat's commercial Early Bird, suddenly the satellites had leapfrogged ahead of cables.

Early Bird's high test score soon pointed up two glaring ambiguities in the Comsat Act in areas where Congress preferred to pass authority - one is tempted to say "the buck" - to the FCC. One was the "authorized user" questions: Who would be entitled to deal with Comsat directly in leasing satellite channels? The other question was : Who should develop a domestic satellite program, now that it was proved feasible?

Last summer the Department of Defense asked for bids for 30 transpacific channels on a forthcoming satellite. The three international common carriers- RCA Communications, ITT World Communications and Western Union International - quoted charges of $10,000 to $12,500 a month per half circuit.

Comsat offered to lease them directly for $4,000 a month - a fraction more than the fee the carriers would have paid to Comsat if one of them had received the contract.

The carriers counterproposed dropping all Pacific circuit leases by 40 per cent if the contract was assigned to them. The Department of Defense, naturally wanting to eliminate the middleman, signed with Comsat.

But the FCC disapproved the Comsat Pentagon contract. Earlier it had ruled directly with government agencies only when "unique or exceptional circumstances" warranted classifying that agency as an authorized user. Otherwise, it must continue to distribute its business among the established carriers. The Pentagon has disputed the FCC ruling and the squabble probably will wind up in court.

Meanwhile, the newspaper industry also tried to climb aboard a satellite. The FCC order on Telpak will bring the wholesale press communication rate to an end on Aug. 1 -which, without alternative means, would hike news service wire costs by as much as 300 per cent per year.

The news industry felt that the role of a free press in American tradition unquestionably identified it as devoted to the public interest and should qualify it as an authorized user of the inexpensive satellite communication rates.

But again, the FCC disagreed with the news media view and disapproved the petitions.

Both cases revolve around the fundamental question of whether Comsat may deal directly with customers or whether it is a "carriers' carrier," a wholesaler bound always to deal with middlemen who make a hefty profit in retail.

The common carriers - AT&T preeminent among them - contend that the law is clear: Comsat is a carriers' carrier. They, naturally, want to absorb Comsat's profitable technology, to average out the losses they will inevitably incur as satellites gain firmer dominance over the long - distance cables.

Their view enjoys strong support from the FCC, which also feels it would be unwise from a security standpoint to abandon long - distance cable systems. Relying solely on a few satellites, which could fairly easily be destroyed by accident or design, would be putting too many eggs in one vulnerable basket, the FCC feels. As to legal points, the Comsat Act stipulates that Comsat may sell only to the carriers unless the FCC defines some private party as an authorized user. They haven't yet, and where even the Pentagon and the news media have failed, no one has ventured a guess who might ever merit that distinction.

This poses a problem for Comsat, since it limits Comsat's market. Likewise limited to satellite technology, Comsat has been further limited thus far to the international communications field for which it was chiefly designed.

It is principal owner of an international consortium - Intelsat - that has already attracted 56 member nations. But though members have joined at an encouraging clip, satellite channels have been leased to only about one-third of capacity. This is attributable chiefly to slow foreign development of ground facilities or foreign nations' desire to protect their big investment in existing cables.

Because Comsat was designed with the expensive, low - orbit satellite concept in mind and quickly raised $200 million to finance such a system, it is now drastically overcapitalized. Only three synchronous satellites now constitute the system once expected to require many, and Comsat has about $150 million in unused cash on its hands. Comsat officials are eager to find other uses for their sole product, so as to broaden their investment, which is the earnings base on which the FCC regulates the rate of return.

This desire has naturally led them to campaign heavily for a franchise on a domestic satellite system. Although the Comsat Act pointedly avoids delegating such a system to anyone by name, Comsat feels its role as the government's "chosen instrument" in international communications, even the fact of its creation by an act of Congress, is implicit evidence that a domestic franchise is rightfully Comsat's.

When the FCC rejected a plan by American Broadcasting Co. last year to develop its own satellite system to handle its television transmissions, Comsat took it as an encouraging precedent.

Then the FCC invited comment on the ABC case and the domestic satellite question generally. This was where the Ford Foundation muddied the fiscal waters with its assertion that the public had the strongest claim on a technology which, after all, the taxpayers had paid for.

Ford estimated that the $65 million a year the three commercial networks — NBC, CBS and ABC — now pay to AT&T for transmissions would be cut by as much as $30 million. Ford proposed that about two-thirds of this be diverted to support a noncommercial TV network devoted to the cultural and educational public service broadcasting for which commercial TV cannot find sponsors.

As a concept, Ford's social dividend proposal enjoys no opposition and significant support — by a message to Congress from President Johnson, by Senate Bill S. 1160 proposing a corporation for public television, by a similar report from the Carnegie Commission and by the commercial networks.

But Ford's suggestions on how to bring that concept onto the nation's TV screens are another matter.

Ford proposed that a domestic satellite system be dedicated solely to TV distribution. Satellites tailored specifically to TV uses, uncluttered by instruments for other common-carrier operations, would offer commercial broadcasters improved, expanded service as well as a cost reduction and even more savings for noncommercial programming. A dedicated system also could provide free channels to link schools and educational TV stations now spotted around the country into a loose national network.

This is where Comsat and AT&T part company with Ford. They argue that Ford's proposed "economies of specialization" would be more than offset by "economies of scale" if TV distribution and common-carrier operations were handled in one multipurpose system.

They also are opposed to a specialized system in which savings on TV are reserved for that system's users. This they call a violation of the common-carrier concept by which all savings from a new technology are shared across the board with all users of any form of the new communications technology. This, by the way, is the reverse of Comsat's view on the ill-fated 30-channel Pentagon contract.

Ford counters that the economy-of-scale argument is exaggerated for the sake of getting the most mileage out of the present investment in multipurpose satellites, and that heavy traffic in peak periods aboard a multipurpose satellite could impair TV broadcast quality.

Ford also argues that the common-carrier concept not only calls for across-the-board sharing of savings but losses as well. Savings would be negligible by the time they reached the public pocket, Ford claims, if private companies first used them to average off losses to some operations. A dedicated TV system would avoid this problem and give the public the most for its tax dollars, culturally if not financially, Ford adds.

"Not all the parties to this proceeding," Ford told the FCC last month "are equally interested in the rapid adaptation of the communications satellite to domestic uses. Except for those of us who seek a broadcast satellite service, Comsat is almost alone in its desire to move forward with a domestic satellite system as quickly as possible, but even Comsat must be sensitive to the interests of the carriers. The carriers, including AT&T, are understandably concerned to insure the most economic use of their existing microwave and other ground facilities and are naturally inclined to relegate the satellite to a supplementary role."

In its first public attack on Comsat, Ford sharply criticized the structure of Comsat's board and warned that it would become a world monopoly without parallel if the FCC gave it a domestic franchise.

Instead, Ford asked at least a one-year moratorium before any domestic system be authorized. In the interim, it urged that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration be assigned a test program for TV. Award of such a test program to Comsat, Ford claimed, would carry the implication of a permanent arrangement.

In reply, Comsat board chairman James McCormack said it is "nonsense" to fear that Comsat would become a "baleful monopoly." Instead, McCormack said, it is a struggling young company, hedged about with restraints, that's just trying to do what Congress and the President have told it to do.

There the matter rests for the present, awaiting disposition along with a welter of other issues before the beleaguered FCC.

Fred Friendly, former president of CBS News and now adviser on public TV to the Ford Foundation, says the multiplicity of issues and the confusion tend to work in favor of the big private interests.

"The FCC is just refereeing all the pressure groups," he says. "We need to have someone planning the future of the communications industry as a whole right now. As long as the issues come up one at a time, AT&T can pick them off, one by one. That's what happened to the news services."

"Remember this," he adds, "AT&T has the biggest bonanza in largesse that the government ever gave anybody. I'm a stockholder, but still I say it."

US AIR FORCE

THE SPACE AGE, WITH its accelerated means of travel, has added new urgency to the need for development of more effective and faster means of global communications, such as that involved in the COMSAT projects. The need is faced not only by the military in the operation of space vehicles and maintaining broad scale defense systems, but by commercial interests as well. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

CURTAIN CALL

If you haven't seen the Children's Theatre production "Androcles and the Lion" call the box office today between 10 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. and reserve your tickets. The last performance begins at 2:30 p.m. today.

Members of the cast are all familiar to Twin Cities theatre patrons, and under Murray Burfford's direction, they really put their best collective feet forward.

Cast in the leading role of Androcles is Chuck Abbott, whose characterization is quite convincing.

Ronn Robinson's lion talk is uproarious, and Bill Chandler's portrayal of the out-foxed arrogant captain is especially funny. The young lovers, Linda Lawrence and Allen Graves, compliment each other beautifully, and Pantalone, Philip Manescalco, is properly nasty.

Mrs. Clyde Bales' colorful costumes and the unusual and clever sets add to the enjoyment of this show and convey the distinct message that this is no place for squares — that's because the sets are composed of life - sized triangles, you see.

PROJECT ENDS

With the closing of "Androcles" there will be no Children's Theatre such as we have enjoyed for the past two years in Monroe. The Theatre School has been disbanded and our good and talented friend, Murray Burfford, will soon take over as director of the Maxwell Playhouse, Maxwell Air Force Base, in Montgomery, Ala.

Those of us who have worked with Murray and whose children have benefitted by her ability, patience and quiet confidence will truly miss her, but are cheered to know that she has such a wonderful opportunity to demonstrate her talents. Murray will direct both adult and children's plays at Maxwell.

Auditions for the summer musical, "Half A Sixpence" will be held Monday and Tuesday, June 5 and 6, at 7:30 p.m. at the theatre on Lamy Lane.

"Sixpence," the story of an apprentice draper in a London emporium who goes from rags to riches to rags, is full of fun, frolic and energy.

There are roles for 15 men and 15 women, ages 16 to 60. Each role is important, each role promises fun. Everyone is welcome at the auditions.

The play is based on the novel, "Kipps," by H. G. Wells.

"Barefoot in the Park" closed Tuesday night after a most rewarding and successful run. Our audiences were large and quite responsive and came from miles around.

As proof of that last statement we'll name names: Mr. and Mrs. Doug Chapman, Cowfold, England; Mr. and Mrs. Tightmeyer, New York; T. W. Hunter, St. Louis; Clark Wood, Lubbock, Texas; and members of the El Dorado, Ark., and Greenville, Miss. Little Theatres. Our Mississippi friends tell us that their next production will be "Gypsy."

One of our staunchest supporters, Mrs. C. H. McHenry, journeyed to Orlando, Fla. over the weekend to attend her grandson's graduation from the Sanford Naval Academy.

Officers for the Little Theatre for 1967-1968 have been announced. They are president, William T. Blythe; vice-president for administration, Russell M. Kettenring; vice - president for production, Julius Cahn Jr.; vice - president for membership, Mrs. L. H. Carter; treasurer, Mrs. Thomas R. Houghton; secretary, Mrs. William A. Mahaffey.

Members attending the final production of the season were enthusiastic about the new improvements donated by Lallage and Shady Wall — the new shrubbery in front of the theatre and the lighting system for our "standing room" section of the auditorium.

Would you believe? — While you're slipping into a sweater because of our efficient air-conditioning system, there are crew members sweltering on the pin-rail and in the light booth. They tell us there's a logical explanation — something about heat rising, the boiler room, etc., but the upshot is that we need a couple of small oscillating electric fans. Anyone who cares to make such a contribution to the Little Theatre will literally be a life - saver. Just call Bill Haddad at 323-1235.

HELPERS

Last week we mentioned some of the people who helped to make "Barefoot in the Park" as well as the rest of the season an enormous success. The list is long, and we would like to continue thanking our friends such as Floyd Southwell and Betty Rose Shelton who did the painting for "Barefoot." They also decorated the set and gave many hours to the theatre. Dr. George Brian and Dr. Joe Barry Mullins have helped us immensely this year, and Dean Sigler of NLSC has come to our aid on several occasions.

BOB HOPE and his baby-sitter Phyllis Diller look forward to spending a wad of dough which he found outside a supermarket. But there's a catch. An amount equal to what he found is missing from the bank where he works as a teller. "Eight on the Lam" starts Thursday at the Rialto Theatre in West Monroe.

Members of the cast are all familiar to Twin Cities theatre patrons, and under Murray Burfford's direction, they really put their best collective feet forward.

Cast in the leading role of Androcles is Chuck Abbott, whose characterization is quite convincing.

Ronn Robinson's lion talk is uproarious, and Bill Chandler's portrayal of the out-foxed arrogant captain is especially funny. The young lovers, Linda Lawrence and Allen Graves, compliment each other beautifully, and Pantalone, Philip Manescalco, is properly nasty.

Mrs. Clyde Bales' colorful costumes and the unusual and clever sets add to the enjoyment of this show and convey the distinct message that this is no place for squares — that's because the sets are composed of life - sized triangles, you see.

PROJECT ENDS

With the closing of "Androcles" there will be no Children's Theatre such as we have enjoyed for the past two years in Monroe. The Theatre School has been disbanded and our good and talented friend, Murray Burfford, will soon take over as director of the Maxwell Playhouse, Maxwell Air Force Base, in Montgomery, Ala.

Those of us who have worked with Murray and whose children have benefitted by her ability, patience and quiet confidence will truly miss her, but are cheered to know that she has such a wonderful opportunity to demonstrate her talents. Murray will direct both adult and children's plays at Maxwell.

Auditions for the summer musical, "Half A Sixpence" will be held Monday and Tuesday, June 5 and 6, at 7:30 p.m. at the theatre on Lamy Lane.

"Sixpence," the story of an apprentice draper in a London emporium who goes from rags to riches to rags, is full of fun, frolic and energy.

There are roles for 15 men and 15 women, ages 16 to 60. Each role is important, each role promises fun. Everyone is welcome at the auditions.

The play is based on the novel, "Kipps," by H. G. Wells.

"Barefoot in the Park" closed Tuesday night after a most rewarding and successful run. Our audiences were large and quite responsive and came from miles around.

As proof of that last statement we'll name names: Mr. and Mrs. Doug Chapman, Cowfold, England; Mr. and Mrs. Tightmeyer, New York; T. W. Hunter, St. Louis; Clark Wood, Lubbock, Texas; and members of the El Dorado, Ark., and Greenville, Miss. Little Theatres. Our Mississippi friends tell us that their next production will be "Gypsy."

One of our staunchest supporters, Mrs. C. H. McHenry, journeyed to Orlando, Fla. over the weekend to attend her grandson's graduation from the Sanford Naval Academy.

Officers for the Little Theatre for 1967-1968 have been announced. They are president, William T. Blythe; vice-president for administration, Russell M. Kettenring; vice - president for production, Julius Cahn Jr.; vice - president for membership, Mrs. L. H. Carter; treasurer, Mrs. Thomas R. Houghton; secretary, Mrs. William A. Mahaffey.

Members attending the final production of the season were enthusiastic about the new improvements donated by Lallage and Shady Wall — the new shrubbery in front of the theatre and the lighting system for our "standing room" section of the auditorium.

Would you believe? — While you're slipping into a sweater because of our efficient air-conditioning system, there are crew members sweltering on the pinrail and in the light booth. They tell us there's a logical explanation — something about heat rising, the boiler room, etc., but the upshot is that we need a couple of small oscillating electric fans. Anyone who cares to make such a contribution to the Little Theatre will literally be a life - saver. Just call Bill Haddad at 323-1235.

HELPERS

Last week we mentioned some of the people who helped to make "Barefoot in the Park" as well as the rest of the season an enormous success. The list is long, and we would like to continue thanking our friends such as Floyd Southwell and Betty Rose Shelton who did the painting for "Barefoot." They also decorated the set and gave many hours to the theatre. Dr. George Brian and Dr. Joe Barry Mullins have helped us immensely this year, and Dean Sigler of NLSC has come to our aid on several occasions.

BOB HOPE and his baby-sitter Phyllis Diller look forward to spending a wad of dough which he found outside a supermarket. But there's a catch. An amount equal to what he found is missing from the bank where he works as a teller. "Eight on the Lam" starts Thursday at the Rialto Theatre in West Monroe.

Pennzoil Income Is Announced

HOUSTON (Special) — Consolidated income from Pennzoil Company operations during the first thre months of 1967 was $3,155,983, or 78 cents per share, compared with 77 cents per share for the same period last year, it was reported t shareholders by William C. Liedtke, Jr., president.

Liedtke said that total consolidated income, including Pennzoil's net interest in the earnings of United Gas Corporation for the first quarter, was $5,539,594, or $1.36 per share, a reduction of 12 cents per share from the same period last year.

Liedtke pointed out that "the operations f Pennzoil Company continued to show profit increases. Profits from the sale of branded motor oils increased very substantially over the same period last year. The company's refinery marketing department showed a modest increase in profit, principally due to elimination of non-profitable sales and reduction of low margin items. Crude oil prduction for the first three months of 1967 averaged 10,642 barrels per day, an increase of 887 barrels per day over the same period last year."

Area Persons On Committee

Martin said that in addition to the state central group, area committees have been organized in seven district of the state as a means of expediting the program.

Members for the Monroe-Ruston area are: S. W. Jackson, director, Ouachita Valley Vocational - Technical School; Arthur C. Thigpen, director of administrative affairs, Louisiana Tech; Fred Lindsay, assistant superintendent, Louisiana Training Institute; and Morris Rubin, administrative assistant, Ruston State School.

Rep. Passman Talks About Compromise

WINNSBORO (Special) — Fifth District U. S. Rep. Otto E. Passman told members of the Northeast Louisiana Power Cooperative Saturday night that "compromise is the whole cloth of the legislative process" and that failure of rural cooperatives to support the "Poage Bill" now pending in the House of Representatives just because it does not contain all that they want would be a grave mistake.

Speaking at the annual Membership Meeting of the co - op in Winnsboro Passman went on to say that he found the bill, introduced by Congressman W. R. (Bob) Poage of Texas to provide a new supplemental non-federal source of capital for rural electric and telephone systems, basically sound, and that "the bill is vital to the continued successful operation of the rural cooperatives of our Nation."

"It is estimated that during the next 15 years nine and one-half billion dollars in new capital will be needed for the rural electrification program," he said, and "if the rural electric systems have to depend entirely on the Federal government for financing this growth will be seriously curtailed. The end result would be that electric service in rural areas will suffer."

Passman also told the group that "the turning toward the private money market is your first step toward financial independence."

The legislation will create two new government - sponsored financial institutions — a Rural Electric Bank and a Rural Telephone Bank — and is intended to bring funds from the private money market into the rural electrification and telephone programs to augment the present Rural Electrification Administration two per cent loans.

The main objection of the co-ops to the bill as it now stands seems to be that the bill as amended by the Congressional Committee places certain restrictions upon loans for the building of electric generating plants by the rural electric systems.

Passman pointed out that the co-ops are not prohibited from borrowing funds to generate their own electricity, but that before such an application could be considered by the bank, it would have to be publicly advertised giving the number of kilowatts needed and the approximate period of time.

The applicant would have to accept bids and if the amount of power could be supplied by a private producer at a cost below what it would cost the co-op to generate their own then it would be expected that the co-op would wish to accept the bid. If the co-op for some other reason does not wish to accept the bid the final decision would be made by the board of directors of the Rural Electric Bank.

Passman also pointed out that even if the bill is passed by the house with the amendment, the co-ops might still get what they want when the bill reaches the senate.

Finally Passman said a few words about one of his favorite topics, flood control, stating that the money spent on flood control in this country can not be regarded as an expenditure but as a profitable investment. He said, "the Lower Mississippi Valley flood - control program is one of the most advanced and most profitable undertakings of its kind anywhere in the world."

He said, "the investments for flood control in the Fifth Congressional District since 1946, when it was my good fortune to become your Member of Congress, have exceeded $200 million. This work has resulted in economic benefits of more than $1 billion."

Arkansas Sets Atomic Power For Generator

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller and Reeves Ritchie, president of Arkansas Power & Light Company, announced Saturday that a $140 million nuclear electric power generating station would be built in Arkansas.

Ritchie said three sites for the the plant are being considered. Ritchie said the plant is the first of its kind to be built in the Middle South and Southwest.

The plant will be the state's largest single industrial plant investment.

"We are proud that Arkansas possesses the natural resources and other necessary facilities for a modern nuclear power plant," Rockefeller said. "These include: (1) availability of large amounts of water required for cooling purposes; (2) space — large tracts of land; and (3) adequate transportation facilities."

Plant construction is scheduled to begin in mid-1968, with completion set for late in 1972.

Damascus Owns Belmont Stakes

By ORLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Damascus struck with familiar quickness Saturday and went on to a convincing triumph in the Belmont Stakes — but the honors for courage and determination went to Canada's Cool Reception, the runner-up who finished with a broken bone in his right front leg.

As Bill Shoemaker, booting home his fourth Belmont winner, sent Damascus across the finish line 2½ lengths in front in the 1½-mile of the Triple Crown, Cool Reception pulled up lame. He had taken the lead midway on the backstretch and yielded in the last eighth of a mile.

"He ran the last sixteenth on guts," said jockey Johnny Sellers as he quickly dismounted and led Cool Reception, a chestnut colt, back to the unsaddling ring.

Dr. Manuel Gilman, a veterinarian, said Cool Reception suffered a broken right cannon bone and the leg was put in a cast. The cannon bone was described as the main bone between the knee and the ankle.

Trainer Lou Cavallris, Jr. ordered X rays taken of the colt, owned by Mrs. William J. Seitz and Mrs. Vincent Reid, Toronto sisters.

However, it is doubtful that Cool Reception would have beaten the flying Damascus on this warm, sunshiny day before a crowd of 52,120 at Aqueduct, watching the 99th running of the $148,700 Belmont.

Experts saw Cool Reception start to weave about one sixteenth of a mile from home and Sellers said, "He was really lumb after the race."

Gentleman James came up from far back to take third, one-half length behind Cool Reception as Kentucky Derby winner, Proud Clarion, failed to show his usual stretch kick and wound up fourth.

Trainer Frank Whiteley, Jr. called Damascus a calm horse, as he was two weeks ago when he won the Preakness after a case of nerves had led to his downfall in the role of Derby favorite.

Shoemaker, however, said the son of Sword Dancer-Kerala, owned by Mrs. Edith Bancroft, was a little nervous going to the post and also during the early part of the race.

"It took a little bit to get him to just run," said Shoemaker. "But by the time we passed the finish line the first time he had settled down and was relaxed.

"I couldn't have planned it better. I had him in perfect position on the first turn with Proud Clarion in front and Reason to Hail just back of me. When Proud Clarion started to move inside I followed him to the outside. I dug into him at about the three eighths pole because he seemed to want to relax too much."

"In the stretch he seemed to lug in a bit so I hit him left-handed to straighten him out. That did it."

Bill Shoemaker sent Damascus over the trying distance in 2:28 4-5 to pick up the winners' purse of $104,950 and send the Kentucky-bred's bank account to $365,410 for 1967.

The time compared to the track record of 2:26 1-5.

The victory was the fifth in seven starts for the Frank Whiteley, Jr.-trained colt this year. He was second in one and third in another race.

As the odds-on favorite, Damascus paid $3.60, $2.60 and $2.40. Cool Reception, ridden by Johnny Sellers, paid $4.20 and $3.60 while Gentleman James with Jimmy Nichols aboard, returned $7.00 to show.

Cool Reception, who had bypassed the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, carried the silks of two Toronto sisters, Mrs. William J. Seitz and Mrs. Vincent Reid.

The heavily campaigned Gentleman James, who could do no better than seventh in the Derby and didn't start in the Preakness, represented two national polo players of note — owner Michael Phipps and trainer Del Carroll.

Back of the first four, in order, came Favorable Turn; Reason to Hail, failing to get a piece of the purse for the first time in eight straight races; Gaylord's Feather; Blasting Charge; and Prinkiko.

Nehoc's Bullet was scratched earlier in the day. Each of the 3-year-olds carried 126 pounds.

In coming within two-fifths of a second of the time clocked by his sire in winning the 1959 Belmont, Damascus ran a well calculated race under the guidance of Shoemaker, who posted his fourth Belmont triumph. He won on Gallant Man in 1957, Sword Dancer in 1959 and on Jaipur in 1962.

In contrast to the Derby when he was very nervous prior to the start, Damascus was cool as a hunk of ice as he stood in his saddling paddock and paraded to the post while the band played "The Sidewalks of New York."

"He's perfectly relaxed, isn't he?," said Whiteley as he tightened the saddle girth.

Down the long straightaway leading to the starting gate Damascus peacefully followed his lead pony. Then when he came out of the gate he broke fifth and Ernie Cardone quickly sent Prinkipo to the front with a clocking of 23 1-5 for the first quarter and 47 flat for the half mile.

At that point Proud Clarion, under Braulio Baeza, was much closer to the pace than he was in either the Derby or Preakness but right behind him was Damascus with Shoe watching every move of the horse he feared most.

With less than a mile to go, Cool Reception shot to the front and held a narrow margin to the top of the home stretch. He gave up the lead at the eighth pole as Damascus went on to victory. Sellers said the Canadian colt pulled up lame.

Proud Clarion made his move at the same time as Damascus but he was unable to unleash his expected stretch kick.

"He got tired in the last eighth," said Baeza.

Gentleman James, far, far back in the early running, made a serious charge in the stretch but it wasn't enough.

A crowd of 52,120 saw what probably will be the last Belmont at Aqueduct. The race is due to be returned next year to Belmont Park which is under construction. It was sunny and hot and the track was fast.

Damascus, in hand and saving ground to the mile moved up fast on the outside leaving the upper turn, was set down hard in the early stretch, and after taking command from Cool Reception, drew clear while under mild urging. Cool Reception, away alertly, took command from Pinkipo after three-quarters mile, held on gamely until inside the stretch but was unable to witstand Damascus, then came back decidedly lame. Reason to Hail, steadied when caught in tight quarters after a mile, dropped out of serious contention during the stretch run. Blasting Charge, never prominent had no mishap. Prinkipo began alertly but stopped before going a mile.

Auburn Gains NCAA Finals

GASTONIA, N. C. (AP) — Shortstop Scotty Long drove in five runs with two homers to lead a 16-hit attack as Auburn routed Florida State 13-3 Saturday night to gain the finals of the NCAA District 3 baseball tournament.

The loss evened Florida State's tournament record at 1-1 and sent the Seminoles against Clemson in Saturday night's final game for the right to play Auburn for the title Monday night. Auburn beat West Virginia in its tournament opener Friday night.

Clemson eliminated West Virginia 5-0 in Saturday's first game behind the six-hit pitching of Laval Johnson, who fanned 12.

Rain Plagues Ruston Slate

RUSTON (Special) — After a very wet week, the north central league hopes to get to play today, which would be at least one jump ahead of the other teams in the Ruston area.

A scheduled game between the Ruston Ramblers and the T. L. James Contractors, Ruston's American Legion Team was rained out Monday night, The contractors and Cobb's Barbecue of Shreveport were washed out Tuesday night, again disappointed Wednesday when those rolling water wagons kept Coach Billy Henderson's team from playing El Dorado. Then, as if that were not enough, the Contractor - Airline tilt set for Friday night was postponed by Jupiter Pluvious.

Simsboro, of the NCL had set Thursday night aside to play a previously rained out game with Downsville. But the makeup tilt was again washed out.

So weather notwithstanding, the Ruston Ramblers will host Downsville Sunday at legion field. The Ramblers will be seeing their third straight league game, and fourth in a row overall.

In other games, W. S. Young, another Ruston entry will journey to Simsboro for one of the top billed games of the week, and defending league champion Arcadia treks to Hodge.

The Ramblers toppled Simsboro from the unbeaten ranks last week by banging out a 7-1 decision behind the home run performances of Curt Barham, Rennie Howard, and Bill Duncan who had one circuit blast each. Barham's and Duncan's were two run shots while Howard's was a solo rap.

Reg Cassibry will probably draw starting mound duty today against Downsville with hard throwing Bill Duncan ready for his relief role.

Duncan has an impressive collection of credentials so far this year. He has pitched ten innings or relief, winning one and losing none. He is credited with one save in his relief work.

He leads the Rambler team in the strikeout department with 20 whiffs. The West Monroe flash has yet to give up a run or a hit in his ten frames. "Dunk" has walked four men.

In going six innings recently, he struck out sixteen batters and picked a runner off second. At Simsboro last week, he retired twelve men in a row while facing the minimum number of batters. He walked one batter but promptly picked him off first.

His stats don't stop there. In batting, he has a home run five RBI, three doubles, and has scored six runs. In his overall performance he is hitting a heavy .556, and has a .428 average in league play.

FORMBY, England (AP) — Bob Dickson, playing his last round of golf before beginning a six-month hitch in the U.S. Army, broke open a tight match in the last eight holes Saturday and edged Walker Cup teammate Ron Cerrudo 2 and 1 for the British Amateur Golf CHampionship.

Playing in the first all-American final since Deane Beman defeated Bill Hyndman in 1959, Dickson and Cerrudo battled evently through the first 27 holes at Formby's course.

But Dickson, who lost the U.S. National Amateur crown two years ago because he had an extra club in his bag, suddenly exploded with a rash of birdies, winning the 28th, 29th and 30th holes of the 36-hole final and taking what proved to be an insurmountable lead.

The 23-year-old Oklahoman, however, won't have much time to sit around and savor his victory in a fast and friendly match played before a sparse crowd of about 500.

"Just when I'm playing the best golf of my life and just as I've had the most important victory of my life, I've got to hang up my clubs," said Dickson, who must report to the Army at El Paso, Tex., Monday.

'For at least the next six months, it'll be rifles and boots instead of birdies and eagles."

Dickson had one eagle in the final, but it was his string of birdies near the end that prevented Cerrudo from winning.

After squaring the match at the 27th hole of the 6,854-yard course, the 22-year-old Cerrudo three-putted on the 28th while Dickson started his birdie string with a 4 for a one-hole lead.

Dickson, from Muskogee, Okla., then dropped a 30-footer on the 29th and a four-foot putt on the 30th for two more birdies and a three-hole lead.

But Cerrudo, a public relations man from San Rafael, Calif., rallied and won the next two holes with birdies of his own.

With the skies overcast as they were when the match began, the American youngsters halved the 33rd before Dickson broke loose for another birdie, on an eight-foot putt, at the 34th and went 2-up. That left it up to Cerrudo, who had to win the next hole to keep the match going. But the best he could do was match Dickson's par 4, making the 36th and final hole superfluous.

It was a fitting victory for Dickson, known to his Walker Cup teammates as the Hawk, over Cerrudo, who is called the Pigeon.

It also was a very satisfying triumph for the Oklahoma State University graduate, who still vividly remembers his experience at the U.S. National Amateur in 1965.

In that tournament Dickson had an extra club in his bag at the start of the second round and he was penalized four strokes. He finished the torunament one stroke behind the winner, Bob Murphy of Nichols, Fla.

In his latest tournament, Dickson was confident after recording relatively easy victories over, four Englishmen, a Scot and a Welshman. He said he had a few thoughtful moments in the morning round when Cerrudo wouldn't let him take the lead but added:

"I wasn't too worried because when I was beaten on a hole I was beaten by birdies. If I'd been beaten by pars, it would have been a different matter."

Cerrudo, who chatted amiably with Dickson between holes, became aware of the tough battle he faced as the day grew shorter.

"I tried all I knew," he said, "but Bob was unbeatable. When he started putting the long ones, I knew that was it for me."

Dickson will leave London by plane Sunday and will have only about three hours with his family before heading for Texas and the Army.

"I guess 30 hours wouldn't be enough to tell them all I feel," he said.

Athletes To Air Views On Draft

CLEVELAND (AP) — Whether or not they succeed in talking Cassius Clay into changing his mind about going into the Armed Forces, a group of America's outstanding Negro athletes apparently will issue a statement Sunday on military obligations.

The athletes will meet here with Clay Sunday under the auspices of the Negro Industrial and Economic Union.

Jim Brown, former fullback for the Cleveland Browns and president of the NIEU, is flying home from London and will be at the meeting, an spokesman said. Brown is a friend of Clay.

Others expected to attend include Lew Alcindor of UCLA, Bobby Mitchell of the Washington Redskins, Willie Davis of the Green Bay Packers, Curtis McClinton of the Kansas City Chiefs, Bill Russell of the Boston Celtics and John Wooten of the Cleveland Browns.

Damascus Owns Belmont Stakes

By ORLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Damascus struck with familiar quickness Saturday and went on to a convincing triumph in the Belmont Stakes — but the honors for courage and determination went to Canada's Cool Reception, the runner-up who finished with a broken bone in his right front leg.

As Bill Shoemaker, booting home his fourth Belmont winner, sent Damascus across the finish line 2½ lengths in front in the 1½-mile of the Triple Crown, Cool Reception pulled up lame. He had taken the lead midway on the backstretch and yielded in the last eighth of a mile.

"He ran the last sixteenth on guts," said jockey Johnny Sellers as he quickly dismounted and led Cool Reception, a chestnut colt, back to the unsaddling ring.

Dr. Manuel Gilman, a veterinarian, said Cool Reception suffered a broken right cannon bone and the leg was put in a cast. The cannon bone was described as the main bone between the knee and the ankle.

Trainer Lou Cavallris, Jr. ordered X rays taken of the colt, owned by Mrs. William J. Seitz and Mrs. Vincent Reid, Toronto sisters.

However, it is doubtful that Cool Reception would have beaten the flying Damascus on this warm, sunshiny day before a crowd of 52,120 at Aqueduct, watching the 99th running of the $148,700 Belmont.

Experts saw Cool Reception start to weave about one sixteenth of a mile from home and Sellers said, "He was really dumb after the race."

Gentleman James came up from far back to take third, one-half length behind Cool Reception as Kentucky Derby winner, Proud Clarion, failed to show his usual stretch kick and wound up fourth.

Trainer Frank Whiteley, Jr. called Damascus a calm horse, as he was two weeks ago when he won the Preakness after a case of nerves had led to his downfall in the role of Derby favorite.

Shoemaker, however, said the son of Sword Dancer-Kerala, owned by Mrs. Edith Bancroft, was a little nervous going to the post and also during the early part of the race.

"It took a little bit to get him to just run," said Shoemaker. "But by the time we passed the finish line the first time he had settled down and was relaxed.

"I couldn't have planned it better. I had him in perfect position on the first turn with Proud Clarion in front and Reason to Hail just back of me. When Proud Clarion started to move inside I followed him to the outside. I dug into him at about the three eighths pole because he seemed to want to relax too much."

"In the stretch he seemed to lug in a bit so I hit him left-handed to straighten him out. That did it."

Bill Shoemaker sent Damascus over the trying distance in 2:28 4-5 to pick up the winners' purse of $104,950 and send the Kentucky-bred's bank account to $365,410 for 1967.

The time compared to the track record of 2:26 1-5.

The victory was the fifth in seven starts for the Frank Whiteley, Jr.-trained colt this year. He was second in one and third in another race.

As the odds-on favorite, Damascus paid $3.60, $2.60 and $2.40. Cool Reception, ridden by Johnny Sellers, paid $4.20 and $3.60 while Gentleman James with Jimmy Nichols aboard, returned $7.00 to show.

Cool Reception, who had bypassed the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, carried the silks of two Toronto sisters, Mrs. William J. Seitz and Mrs. Vincent Reid.

The heavily campaigned Gentleman James, who could do no better than seventh in the Derby and didn't start in the Preakness, represented two national polo players of note — owner Michael Phipps and trainer Del Carroll.

Back of the first four, in order, came Favorable Turn; Reason to Hail, failing to get a piece of the purse for the first time in eight straight races; Gaylord's Feather; Blasting Charge; and Prinkiko.

Nehoc's Bullet was scratched earlier in the day. Each of the 3-year-olds carried 126 pounds.

In coming within two-fifths of a second of the time clocked by his sire in winning the 1959 Belmont, Damascus ran a well calculated race under the guidance of Shoemaker, who posted his fourth Belmont triumph. He won on Gallant Man in 1957, Sword Dancer in 1959 and on Jaipur in 1962.

In contrast to the Derby when he was very nervous prior to the start, Damascus was cool as a hunk of ice as he stood in his saddling paddock and paraded to the post while the band played "The Sidewalks of New York."

"He's perfectly relaxed, isn't he?," said Whiteley as he tightened the saddle girth.

Down the long straightaway leading to the starting gate Damascus peacefully followed his lead pony. Then when he came out of the gate he broke fifth and Ernie Cardone quickly sent Prinkipo to the front with a clocking of 23 1-5 for the first quarter and 47 flat for the half mile.

At that point Proud Clarion, under Braulio Baeza, was much closer to the pace than he was in either the Derby or Preakness but right behind him was Damascus with Shoe watching every move of the horse he feared most.

With less than a mile to go, Cool Reception shot to the front and held a narrow margin to the top of the home stretch. He gave up the lead at the eighth pole as Damascus went on to victory. Sellers said the Canadian colt pulled up lame.

Proud Clarion made his move at the same time as Damascus but he was unable to unleash his expected stretch kick.

"He got tired in the last eighth," said Baeza.

Gentleman James, far, far back in the early running, made a serious charge in the stretch but it wasn't enough.

A crowd of 52,120 saw what probably will be the last Belmont at Aqueduct. The race is due to be returned next year to Belmont Park which is under construction. It was sunny and hot and the track was fast.

In gate 5:30. Off 5:30 Eastern Daylight Saving Time. Stard Good. Won handily. Damascus, in hand and saving ground to the mile moved up fast on the outside leaving the upper turn, was set down hard in the early stretch, and after taking command from Cool Reception, drew clear while under mild urging. Cool Reception, away alertly, took command from Pinkipo after three-quarters mile, held on gamely until inside the stretch but was unable to withstand Damascus, then came back decidedly lame. The result of a broken right cannon bone ,Gentleman James, far back until near the stretch finished determinedly in a courageous performance. Proud Clarion, reserved and saving ground while racing within striking distance of the leaders to the mile, moved up boldly approaching the stretch but faltered during the drive. Favorable Turn had early speed but failed to stay. Gaylord's Feather lacked early foot and was never dangerous. Reason to Hail, steadied when caught in tight quarters after a mile, dropped out of serious contention during the stretch run. Blasting Charge, never prominent had no mishap. Prinkipo began alertly but stopped before going a mile.

Auburn Gains NCAA Finals

GASTONIA, N. C. (AP) — Shortstop Scotty Long drove in five runs with two homers to lead a 16-hit attack as Auburn routed Florida State 13-3 Saturday night to gain the finals of the NCAA District 3 baseball tournament.

The loss evened Florida State's tournament record at 1-1 and sent the Seminoles against Clemson in Saturday night's final game for the right to play Auburn for the title Monday night. Auburn beat West Virginia in its tournament opener Friday night.

Clemson eliminated West Virginia 5-0 in Saturday's first game behind the six-hit pitching of Laval Johnson, who fanned 13.

Rain Plagues Ruston Slate

RUSTON (Special) — After a very wet week, the north central league hopes to get to play today, which would be at least one jump ahead of the other teams in the Ruston area.

A scheduled game between the Ruston Ramblers and the T. L. James Contractors, Ruston's American Legion Team was rained out Monday night, The contractors and Cobb's Barbecue of Shreveport were washed out Tuesday night, again disappointed Wednesday when those rolling water wagons kept Coach Billy Henderson's team from playing El Dorado. Then, as if that were not enough, the Conrtactor - Airline tilt set for Friday night was postponed by Jupiter Pluvious.

Simsboro, of the NCL had set Thursday night aside to play a previously rained out game with Downsville. But the makeup tilt was again washed out.

So weather notwithstanding, the Ruston Ramblers will host Downsville Sunday at legion field. The Ramblers will be seeing their third straight league game, and fourth in a row overall.

In other games, W. S. Young, another Ruston entry will journey to Simsboro for one of the top billed games of the week, and defending league champion Arcadia treks to Hodge.

The Ramblers toppled Simsboro from the unbeaten ranks last week by banging out a 7-1 decision behind the home run performances of Curt Barham, Rennie Howard, and Bill Duncan who had one circuit blast each. Barham's and Duncan's were two run shots while Howard's was a solo rap.

Reg Cassibry will probably draw starting mound duty today against Downsville with hard throwing Bill Duncan ready for his relief role.

Duncan has an impressive collection of credentials so far this year. He has pitched ten innings or relief, winning one and losing none. He is credited with one save in his relief work.

He leads the Rambler team in the strikeout department with 20 whiffs. The West Monroe flash has yet to give up a run or a hit in his ten frames. "Dunk" has walked four men.

In going six innings recently, he struck out sixteen batters and picked a runner off second. At Simsboro last week, he retired twelve men in a row, while facing the minimum number of batters. He walked one batter but promptly picked him off first.

His stats don't stop there. In batting, he has a home run, five RBI, three doubles, and has scored six runs. In his overall performance he is hitting a heavy .556, and has a .428 average in league play.

Dickson Nips Teammate For British Amateur Golf Title

By JOHN FARROW
Associated Press Sports Writer

FORMBY, England (AP) — Bob Dickson, playing his last round of golf before beginning a six-month hitch in the U.S. Army, broke open a tight match in the last eight holes Saturday and edged Walker Cup teammate Ron Cerrudo 2 and 1 for the British Amateur Golf CHampionship.

Playing in the first all-American final since Deane Beman defeated Bill Hyndman in 1959, Dickson and Cerrudo battled evently through the first 27 holes at Formby's course.

But Dickson, who lost the U.S. National Amateur crown two years ago because he had an extra club in his bag, suddenly exploded with a rash of birdies, winning the 28th, 29th and 30th holes of the 36-hole final and taking what proved to be an insurmountable lead.

The 23-year-old Oklahoman, however, won't have much time to sit around and savor his victory in a fast and friendly match played before a sparse crowd of about 500.

"Just when I'm playing the best golf of my life and just as I've had the most important victory of my life, I've got to hang up my clubs," said Dickson, who must report to the Army at El Paso, Tex., Monday.

'For at least the next six months, it'll be rifles and boots instead of birdies and eagles."

Dickson had one eagle in the final, but it was his string of birdies near the end that prevented Cerrudo from winning.

After squaring the match at the 27th hole of the 6,854-yard course, the 22-year-old Cerrudo three-putted on the 28th while Dickson started his birdie string with a 4 for a one-hole lead.

Dickson, from Muskogee, Okla., then dropped a 30-footer on the 29th and a four-foot putt on the 30th for two more birdies and a three-hole lead.

But Cerrudo, a public relations man from San Rafael, Calif., rallied and won the next two holes with birdies of his own.

With the skies overcast as they were when the match began, the American youngsters halved the 33rd before Dickson broke loose for another birdie, on an eight-foot putt, at the 34th and went 2-up. That left it up to Cerrudo, who had to win the next hole to keep the match going. But the best he could do was match Dickson's par 4, making the 36th and final hole superfluous.

It was a fitting victory for Dickson, known to his Walker Cup teammates as the Hawk, over Cerrudo, who is called the Pigeon.

It also was a very satisfying triumph for the Oklahoma State University graduate, who still vividly remembers his experience at the U.S. National Amateur in 1965.

In that tournament Dickson had an extra club in his bag at the start of the second round and he was penalized four strokes. He finished the torunament one stroke behind the winner, Bob Murphy of Nichols, Fla.

In his latest tournament, Dickson was confident after recording relatively easy victories over, four Englishmen, a Scot and a Welshman. He said he had a few thoughtful moments in the morning round when Cerrudo wouldn't let him take the lead but added:

"I wasn't too worried because when I was beaten on a hole I was beaten by birdies. If I'd been beaten by pars, it would have been a different matter."

Cerrudo, who chatted amiably with Dickson between holes, became aware of the tough battle he faced as the day grew shorter.

"I tried all I knew," he said, "but Bob was unbcatable. When he started putting the long ones, I knew that was it for me."

Dickson will leave London by plane Sunday and will have only about three hours with his family before heading for Texas and the Army.

"I guess 30 hours wouldn't be enough to tell them all I feel," he said.

Athletes To Air Views On Draft

CLEVELAND (AP) — Whether or not they succeed in talking Cassius Clay into changing his mind about going into the Armed Forces, a group of America's outstanding Negro athletes apparently will issue a statement Sunday on military obligations.

The athletes will meet here with Clay Sunday under the auspices of the Negro Industrial and Economic Union.

Jim Brown, former fullback for the Cleveland Browns and president of the NIEU, is flying home from London and will be at the meeting, an spokesman said. Brown is a friend of Clay.

Others expected to attend include Lew Alcindor of UCLA, Bobby Mitchell of the Washington Redskins, Willie Davis of the Green Bay Packers, Curtis McClinton of the Kansas City Chiefs, Bill Russell of the Boston Celtics and John Wooten of the Cleveland Browns.

Bristol Dislikes Insurance

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pitcher Mel Queen beat Denis Menke's throw to the plate on a bases-loaded grounder by Pete Rose in the ninth inning, lifting the National League-leading Cincinnati Reds to an 8-7 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday.

It was the 13th one-run contest for the Reds in their last 14 starts.

Queen, who pitched the final 6 1-3 innings in relief, led off the ninth with a single and beat the throw to second on a sacrifice bunt by pinch hitter Chico Ruiz.

Vada Pinson's single filled the bases before Rose bounded to shortstop Menke, whose throw to the plate hit Queen and gave the Reds their fifth victory in the last six games. It also gave Queen a 6-1 record.

Clete Boyer's two-out homer in the ninth lifted the Braves into a 7-7 deadlock.

The Reds took a 7-4 lead in the fifth on Floyd Robinson's bases-empty homer and a two-run blast by Tony Perez. But Atlanta closed the gap in the sixth on run-scoring singles by Rico Carty and Joe Torre.

Carty and Hank Aaron hammered successive home runs off Reds starter Billy McCool in the first inning.

Carty's homer, his fourth of the year, came as he returned to the lineup after being benched for what Manager Billy Hitchcock said was a lack of hustle.

Aaron's blast was his 14th homer of the season, and his third in as many games.

All three have been wasted, however, with the Braves dropping their last three games by one-run margins.

The loss left the Braves 8½ games off Cincinnati's pace as a disastrous road trip continued to send Atlanta skidding in the standings.

The Redlegs' biggest outburst was in the second inning, when they erased a 2-0 deficit with a four-run explosion in which Cincinnati pounded out a air of doubles and three singles.

The Braves battled back, tying the score 4-4 in the third, when Aaron doubled and scored on Joe Torre's single and Torre scored on Menke's single which got past Pinson for a two-base error.

Phils Capture Fifth Straight

HOUSTON (AP) — Rich Allen doubled in a run and then stole home in the first inning as the Philadelphia Phillies won their fifth straight game with a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros here Saturday night.

Jim Bunning, squaring his record at 5-5, held the Astros to seven hits, fanned six and walked only one.

Larry Dierker, the loser and now 5-3, gave up only one hit after the first. Tony Gonzalez opened the game with a triple and John Briggs and Allen followed with doubles for two runs before Allen, taking third on an infield out, stole home. The Phillies added an unearned run in the eighth.

The Astros got a run in the second on Jim Landis' single and Bob Aspromonte's triple.

Orioles Nip Solons In 11th

BALTIMORE (AP) — Paul Blair's infield hit with two out in the 11th inning scored pinch runner Mark Belanger from third, giving the Baltimore Orioles a 3-2 victory over Washington Saturday night.

Andy Etchebarren reached second on Knowles' error and took third on the passed ball. One out later, Belanger ran for Etchebarren and Luis Aparicio drew an intentional walk, then stole second. After Boog Powell struck out, Priddy replaced Knowles and gave up the tie-breaking hit.

A's Repeat Win Over Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Run-scoring singles by Ramon Webster and Joe Nossek broke a tie in the seventh inning and lifted the Kansas City Athletics to a 3-1 victory over Chicago and Gary Peters Saturday.

Pitcher Chuck Dobson, who hurled a five-hitter, opened the seventh with a single and moved to third on Bert Campaneris' single. Webster followed with his hit, scoring Dobson, but Campaneris was thrown out at the plate. That was all for Peters, 6-3.

After reliever Don McMahon hit Mike Hershberger with a pitch, Nossek singled Webster across.

The game was scoreless until Mike Hershberger doubled, setting up an unearned run that scored in the sixth on Dick Green's sacrifice fly. A single by Tommie Agee and double by Tom McCraw enabled the White Sox to tie it in their half of the sixth.

Rick Monday, Kansas City's 21-year-old rookie standout, was struck in the face by a pitch in the first inning and was carried off the field bleeding from inside the mouth. X rays revealed no fractures, and he is expected to be ready to return to action immediately.

Giants, Mets Split Twinbill

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Run-scoring doubles by Johnny Lewis and Tommy Davis in the 11th inning and the three-hit pitching of Bob Shaw gave the New York Mets a 2-1 victory over San Francisco Saturday after the Giants won the doubleheader opener 11-2 behind Juan Marichal.

In the nightcap, Shaw snapped the Mets' six-game losing string and posted his first victory in six decisions, holding the Giants to one hit — Tom Haller's 11th inning homer — after the fifth.

Cleon Jones singled off Bob Bolin with two out in the 11th and stole second before Lewis and Davis lashed successive doubles, giving New York a 2-0 margin. Bolin had allowed only four hits over the first 10 innings.

Haller hit his sixth homer with two out in the bottom of the 11th.

The second-game duel was in sharp contrast to the opener, in which each club collected 13 hits.

Willie Mays' 548th career homer keyed a seven-run Giant rally in the fifth inning, helping Marichal coast to his 19th lifetime victory over the Mets without a loss. Marichal, 9-4, struck out eight and was helped by three double plays.

Killebrew Slaps Super Blast

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Harmon Kellebrew smashed a three-run tape measure home run that carried the Minnesota Twins to a 8-6 victory over the California Angels Saturday.

Reliever Jim Perry put down a sixth-inning uprising by the Angels who rallied for four runs against starter Dave Boswell and reliever Jim Ollom.

Former Twin Don Mincher started the sixth inning with a double, and closed it by popping out with the bases loaded. In between, Rick Reichardt lined a three-run shot to left off Boswell, and Tom Satriano followed with a homer to left off Ollom.

Rod Carew lined a single to right in the Twins' big fourth inning, scoring Boswell. Rich Rollins was hit by a pitch from Lou Burdette, who relieved starter George Brunet. Then Killebrew's 430-foot-blast sailed into the second deck of the left field pavilion which was added to Met Stadium two years ago. It was the first ball ever hit into that deck.

Grier Likes Rams Chances

MEMPHIS, Tenn (AP) — Roosevelt Grier, mamonth tackle for the Los Angeles Rams, said Saturday he likes his team's chances of winning the division title in the National Football League next season.

But Grier said there's one big question mark to the Rams' title hopes—the status of quarterback Roman Gabriel. Gabriel, Los Angeles signal caller, has signed a contract to play with Oakland of the American Football League.

"That is going to have to be settled in the courts," Rosie said "Roman says he's going to play for Oakland. To him, it's money. The clubs don't worry about you. It's up to the player to negotiate for the best money he can get."

Grier, an entertainer in the off season, was here for a recording session at a Memphis studio. He sings and plays the guitar.

Yank Reliefers Bug Detroit

NEW YORK (AP) — Relief pitchers Steve Hamilton and Dooley Womack worked out of late-inning jams Saturday, preserving a victory for Joe Verbanic in his first major league start as the New York Yankees defeated Detroit 3-1.

Hamilton replaced Verbanic in the seventh inning after singles by Norm Cash and Bill Freehan plus a sacrifice put Tigers at second and third with two out. The lanky Yankee reliever promptly ended the inning by getting pinch hitter Mickey Stanley on a line drive.

But Hamilton himself got into trouble in the ninth inning and left after Jim Northrup and Cash singled with one out. Womack wasted even less time, getting Freehan to ground into a game-ending double play on the first pitch.

The Yankees took a 3-0 lead before Detroit scored in the sixth on a single by Dick McAuliffe and Al Kaline's double.

New York scored all of its runs in the fourth against Earl Wilson, now 7-4. Mickey Mantle walked and scored on Steve Whitaker's triple. Tom Tresh then unloaded his fifth homer into the upper deck in right field.

Scott Paces Bosox Attack

CLEVELAND (AP) — George Scott drove in two runs with a homer and single, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 6-2 victory over Cleveland Saturday.

Scott whacked a bases-empty homer leading off the second inning and drove in Mike Andrews with a single in the third, starting a three-run rally.

Winning pitcher Dennis Bennett scored Joe Foy on a sacrifice fly in the second after Scott's fourth homer.

Andrews opened the third with a single, moved up when Indians' starter Gary Bell hit Tony Conigliaro with a pitch and scored on Scott's single to left.

Conigliaro and Scott scored when Chuck Hinton misjudged Rico Petrocelli's liner to center. Petrocelli got credit for an RBI on a sacrifice fly.

Reggie Smith singled across the last Boston run in the ninth.

The Indians picked up one run in the third on a walk and Rocky Colavito's double. They scored another in the fourth on singles by Pedro Gonzalez and Larry Brown, and an error by Foy.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pitcher Mel Queen beat Denis Menke's throw to the plate on a bases-loaded grounder by Pete Rose in the ninth inning, lifting the National League-leading Cincinnati Reds to an 8-7 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday.

It was the 13th one-run contest for the Reds in their last 14 starts.

Queen, who pitched the final 6 1-3 innings in relief, led off the ninth with a single and beat the throw to second on a sacrifice bunt by pinch hitter Chico Ruiz.

Vada Pinson's single filled the bases before Rose bounded to shortstop Menke, whose throw to the plate hit Queen and gave the Reds their fifth victory in the last six games. It also gave Queen a 6-1 record.

Clete Boyer's two-out homer in the ninth lifted the Braves into a 7-7 deadlock.

The Reds took a 7-4 lead in the fifth on Floyd Robinson's bases-empty homer and a two-run blast by Tony Perez. But Atlanta closed the gap in the sixth on run-scoring singles by Rico Carty and Joe Torre.

Carty and Hank Aaron hammered successive home runs off Reds starter Billy McCool in the first inning.

Carty's homer, his fourth of the year, came as he returned to the lineup after being benched for what Manager Billy Hitchcock said was a lack of hustle.

Aaron's blast was his 14th homer of the season, and his third in as many games.

All three have been wasted, however, with the Braves dropping their last three games by one - run margins.

The loss left the Braves 8½ games off Cincinnati's pace as a disastrous road trip continued to send Atlanta skidding in the standings.

The Redlegs' biggest outburst was in the second inning, when they erased a 2-0 deficit with a four-run explosion in which Cincinnati pounded out a air of doubles and three singles.

The Braves battled back, tying the score 4-4 in the third, when Aaron doubled and scored on Joe Torre's single and Torre scored on Menke's single which got past Pinson for a two-base error.

Phils Capture Fifth Straight

HOUSTON (AP) — Rich Allen doubled in a run and then stole home in the first inning as the Philadelphia Phillies won their fifth straight game with a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros here Saturday night.

Jim Bunning, squaring his record at 5-5, held the Astros to seven hits, fanned six and walked only one.

Larry Dierker, the loser and now 5-3, gave up only one hit after the first. Tony Gonzalez opened the game with a triple and John Briggs and Allen followed with doubles for two runs before Allen, taking third on an infield out, stole home. The Phillies added an unearned run in the eighth.

The Astros got a run in the second on Jim Landis' single and Bob Aspromonte's triple.

Landis' single drove home Ed Mathews from second with the final Houston run in the sixth.

A's Repeat Win Over Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) —Run-scoring singles by Ramon Webster and Joe Nossek broke a tie in the seventh inning and lifted the Kansas City Athletics to a 3-1 victory over Chicago and Gary Peters Saturday.

Pitcher Chuck Dobson, who hurled a five-hitter, opened the seventh with a single and moved to third on Bert Campaneris' single. Webster followed with his hit, scoring Dobson, but Campaneris was thrown out at the plate. That was all for Peters, 6-3.

After reliever Don McMahon hit Mike Hershberger with a pitch, Nossek singled Webster across.

The game was scoreless until Mike Hershberger doubled, setting up an unearned run that scored in the sixth on Dick Green's sacrifice fly. A single by Tommie Agee and double by Tom McCraw enabled the White Sox to tie it in their half of the sixth.

Rick Monday, Kansas City's 21-year-old rookies standout, was struck in the face by a pitch in the first inning and was carried off the field bleeding from inside the mouth. X rays revealed no fractures, and he is expected to be ready to return to action immediately.

Giants, Mets Split Twinbill

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Run-scoring doubles by Johnny Lewis and Tommy Davis in the 11th inning and the three-hit pitching of Bob Shaw gave the New York Mets a 2-1 victory over San Francisco Saturday after the Giants won the doubleheader opener 11-2 behind Juan Marichal.

In the nightcap, Shaw snapped the Mets' six-game losing string and posted his first victory in six decisions, holding the Giants to one hit — Tom Haller's 11th inning homer — after the fifth.

Cleon Jones singled off Bob Bolin with two out in the 11th and stole second before Lewis and Davis lashed successive doubles, giving New York a 2-0 margin. Bolin had allowed only four hits over the first 10 innings.

Haller hit his sixth homer with two out in the bottom of the 11th.

The second-game duel was in sharp contrast to the opener, in which each club collected 13 hits.

Willie Mays' 548th career homer keyed a seven-run Giant rally in the fifth inning, helping Marichal coast to his 19th lifetime victory over the Mets without a loss. Marichal, 9-4, struck out eight and was helped by three double plays.

Killebrew Slaps Super Blast

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Harmon Kellebrew smashed a three-run tape measure home run that carried the Minnesota Twins to a 8-6 victory over the California Angels Saturday.

Reliever Jim Perry put down a sixth-inning uprising by the Angels who rallied for four runs against starter Dave Boswell and reliever Jim Ollom.

Former Twin Don Mincher started the sixth inning with a double, and closed it by popping out with the bases loaded. In between, Rick Reichardt lined a three-run shot to left off Boswell, and Tom Satriano followed with a homer to left off Ollom.

Rod Carew lined a single to right in the Twins' big fourth inning, scoring Boswell. Rich Rollins was hit by a pitch from Lou Burdette, who relieved starter George Brunet. Then Killebrew's 430-foot-blast sailed into the second deck of the left field pavilion which was added to Met Stadium two years ago. It was the first ball ever hit into that deck.

Grier Likes Rams Chances

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Roosevelt Grier, mamonth tackle for the Los Angeles Rams, said Saturday he likes his team's chances of winning the division title in the National Football League next season.

But Grier said there's one big question mark to the Rams' title hopes—the status of quarterback Roman Gabriel. Gabriel, Los Angeles signal caller, has signed a contract to play with Oakland of the American Football League.

"That is going to have to be settled in the courts," Rosie said. "Roman says he's going to play for Oakland. To him, it's money. The clubs don't worry about you. It's up to the player to negotiate for the best money he can get."

Grier, an entertainer in the off season, was here for a recording session at a Memphis studio. He sings and plays the guitar.

Yank Reliefers Bug Detroit

NEW YORK (AP) — Relief pitchers Steve Hamilton and Dooley Womack worked out of late-inning jams Saturday, preserving a victory for Joe Verbanic in his first major league start as the New York Yankees defeated Detroit 3-1.

Hamilton replaced Verbanic in the seventh inning after singles by Norm Cash and Bill Freehan plus a sacrifice put Tigers at second and third with two out. The lanky Yankee reliever promptly ended the inning by getting pinch hitter Mickey Stanley on a line drive.

But Hamilton himself got into trouble in the ninth inning and left after Jim Northrup and Cash singled with one out. Womack wasted even less time, getting Freehan to ground into a game-ending double play on the first pitch.

The Yankees took a 3-0 lead before Detroit scored in the sixth on a single by Dick McAuliffe and Al Kaline's double.

New York scored all of its runs in the fourth against Earl Wilson, now 7-4. Mickey Mantle walked and scored on Steve Whitaker's triple. Tom Tresh then unloaded his fifth homer into the upper deck in right field.

Scott Paces Bosox Attack

CLEVELAND (AP) — George Scott drove in two runs with a homer and single, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 6-2 victory over Cleveland Saturday.

Scott whacked a bases-empty homer leading off the second inning and drove in Mike Andrews with a single in the third, starting a three-run rally.

Winning pitcher Dennis Bennett scored Joe Foy on a sacrifice fly in the second after Scott's fourth homer.

Andrews opened the third with a single, moved up when Indians' starter Gary Bell hit Tony Conigliaro with a pitch and scored on Scott's single to left.

Conigliaro and Scott scored when Chuck Hinton misjudged Rico Petrocelli's liner to center. Petrocelli got credit for an RBI on a sacrifice fly.

Reggie Smith singled across the last Boston run in the ninth.

The Indians picked up one run in the third on a walk and Rocky Colavito's double. They scored another in the fourth on singles by Pedro Gonzalez and Larry Brown, and an error by Foy.

Cards Bombed On Bat Night

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Billy Williams capped a five-run uprising with a three-run homer in the fifth inning helping the Chicago Cubs to a 7-5 victory over the second-place St. Louis Cardinals Saturday night before a crowd of 46,670 on Bat Night.

The setback dropped the Cardinals three games fehind the Cincinnati Reds in the National League standings.

Tim McCarver double home two runs off winner Ferguson Jenkins in the first and the Cards added three more in the ninth including Lou Brook's 12th home run.

The Cubs jumped on Cardinal ace Bob Gibson for six hits and knocked him out in the fifth.

Snead, 535 More Attempt National Open Qualifying

NEW YORK (AP) —Three former Open champions—Carry Middlecoff, Tommy Bolt and Ed Furgol—and the inevitable Sam Snead will be among the 536 players who will attempt to qualify Monday and Tuesday for the 67th National Open Golf Championship.

The Open is scheduled June 15-18 over the Baltusrol course in Springfield, N.J. Trials will be held at 14 centers to fill the 123 remaining spots in the 150-man championship field.

Twenty-seven are exempt from qualifying, including the past five champions, Jack Nicklaus; Julius Boros, Ken Venturi, Gary Player and Bill Casper; the PGA titleholder, Al Geiberger; top finishers in the 1966 Open and leaders in the PGA money winning list.

Ben Hogan, Arnold Palmer, Gay Brewer, Frank Beard and Gene Littler are among the better known golfers who get free entry into the starting field.

Ed Furgol, the lame-armed wonder who won the Open at Baltusrol in 1954, will be among those attempting to qualify in the New York Metropolitan district Monday. Trials will be held at Whiteley Hills and Meadow Brook on Long Island.

One hundred sixteen players—including 26 amateurs—will try for 21 places in the New York tests. Also in the field will be former PGA champions Doug Ford and Jim Turnesa; Walker Cup players Ron Cerrudo, Marty Fleckman and Jim Grant and such well known tour performers as Tom Nieporte, Jerry Pittman, Paul Harney and Billy Farrell.

The heaviest action will be at Memphis, Tenn., where most of the tour golfers competed this weekend, and at Detroit, where a large group of top professionals will seek berths. Twenty-three places are available for 47 competitors at Memphis Monday, 24 for 68 at Detroit on Tuesday.

Middlecoff and Bolt are among those playing at Memphis, along with former PG champions Lionel and Jay Hebert; former British Open king Bob Charles and tourists Dave Ragan, Charles Coody, Lou Graham, Randy Glover, Tommy Jacobs, Tommy Aaron, Dan Sikes and Johnny Pott.

Snead, who has been a runner-up four times but never a winner of the Open, will try at Detroit. Kel Nagle of Australia, 1960 British Open winner and runner-up to Gary Player in the U.S. Open two years ago, is also in the Detroit field, as are ex-PGA winners Walter Burkemo and Bob Rosburg and tour regulars Tom Weiskopf, Cobie LeGrange and Rex Baxter.

The 36-hole trials Monday will be staged at Denver, Colo., Chicago, Kansas City, New York, Cincinnati, Portland, Ore., and Memphis. On Tuesday, the tests will be staged at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Washington, Atlanta, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Dallas, Tex.

Ryun Blazes Second Fastest Mile

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Miler Jim Ryun of Kansas and sprinter Jimmy Hines of Texas Southern divided honors Saturday in post-meet review of the Coliseum - Compton Invitational Track and Field Meet.

Ryun, threatened by no one except himself and the timers, reeled off the second fastest mile of all time, 3:53.2.

Ryun, of course, owns the fastest mile in track history, 3:51.3.

Hines, after winning the 100 meters in 10.2 seconds, came back to beat world record holder Tommie Smith at 220 yards in 20.5. Smith, of San Jose State, has run 20 flat.

Hines got off the starting blocks in good fashion, Smith not too quickly.

"I feel I beat Tommie on the turn. I feel I can run 20 flat or under before the season is over. And I'm nearing that point now. On a real fast track, on a good day with strong opposition, I think, I'm sure, in fact, I can do it."

"I have no excuses," said Smith. "I just got beat. My start wasn't especially good, but not that bad. But Hines did get away from me on the curve. Don't forget, Hines is quite a runner. No matter how good you are, we're all beatable."

Australia's Ron Clarke fiddled around for two miles in the 5,000 meters, cranked out a comfortable lead and then, eased up, won in 13:39.8.

It hardly threatened his world standard of 13:16.6.

Bob Beamon, the Jamaican running for the El Paso, Tex., Track Club, defeated world champion Ralph Boston for the long jump. His best was 26 3¾, Boston's 26-1.

"I must say I'm disappointed in my race," said the Aussies' Clarke. "I felt fine, especially when I took off with two laps to go. But then I went sort of dead. I didn't have the usual lift. But I was satisfied just to win."

There was joy also with the U.S. weightman. Veteran Rink Babka, 198-11, and Jay Silvester, 198-3, defeated the world record holder, Ludvik Danek of Czechoslovakia, 198-2, in the discus.

Coming up: Ryun is to run in the U.S. Track and Field Federation meet in Albuquerque, N.M. next week. Clarke will run in the San Diego Invitational.

NAIA Names Wayne Causey To Baseball Hall Of Fame

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Three men, including a former college coach, a major league manager and Chicago White Sox infielder, Wayne Causey of Monroe, have been elected to the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) Baseball Hall of Fame.

The three will be honored at the NAIA Hall of Fame banquet, tonight, in St. Joseph, Mo., where the 11th annual NAIA Baseball Tournament is scheduled to begin Monday.

The coach is Bob Lee of Southern University, Baton Rouge, La., whose teams compiled a record of 209 victories and 52 losses for an .819 percentage. The player who is being inducted into the Hall of Fame is Wayne Causey, Chicago White Sox infielder, and the manager is Dave Bristol, who currently has his Cincinnati Reds on top in the National League pennant race.

Causey is a graduate of Northeast Louisiana State, Monroe, La., and Bristol is a graduate of Western Carolina College, Cullowhee, N.C

A veteran of 33 years of coaching baseball, basketball and football, Lee ranks as one of the most successful men in his profession. In 1959, his Southern University team won the NAIA National Baseball Tournament and two years later he was elected NAIA Baseball Coach of the Year.

Lee's baseball teams won eight Southwestern Athletic Conference championships and his basketball teams won five titles. One of his star players on the 1959 baseball team was Lou Brock, now with the St. Louis Cardinals. Although he relinquished his job as head coach two years ago, Lee still remains active as an assistant.

Causey from Monroe has become one of the most steady and reliable infielders in the American League. He has been with the White Sox for one year, but he was with the Athletics six years and was team captain when he was traded last summer.

His lifetime batting average is .261 and his fielding average is .966. He batted .324 for the first two months of the 1967 season. Wayne's best year in the majors was 1964 when he collected 170 hits to finish with a .281 average, with 31 doubles, 4 triples and 8 home runs. He can play second, third or shortstop with equal ability.

At mid-season last year, Bristol was named as Cincinnati manager after serving as a manager eight years in the Reds' farm system and one year as a coach with the parent club. Twice his teams won minor league pennants and in 1961 he was named Three I Manager of the Year after his Topeka team won the flag as he managed and also batted .281.

Although he managed the Reds only half a season in 1966, he has rebuilt a seventh - place team into a solid contender that currently is leading the National League race.

The player who is being inducted into the Hall of Fame is Wayne Causey, Chicago White Sox infielder, and the manager is Dave Bristol, who currently has his Cincinnati Reds on top in the National League pennant race.

Causey is a graduate of Northeast Louisiana State, Monroe, La., and Bristol is a graduate of Western Carolina College, Cullowhee, N.C

A veteran of 33 years of coaching baseball, basketball and football, Lee ranks as one of the most successful men in his profession. In 1959, his Southern University team won the NAIA National Baseball Tournament and two years later he was elected NAIA Baseball Coach of the Year.

Lee's baseball teams won eight Southwestern Athletic Conference championships and his basketball teams won five titles. One of his star players on the 1959 baseball team was Lou Brock, now with the St. Louis Cardinals. Although he relinquished his job as head coach two years ago, Lee still remains active as an assistant.

Causey from Monroe has become one of the most steady and reliable infielders in the American League. He has been with the White Sox for one year, but he was with the Athletics six years and was team captain when he was traded last summer.

His lifetime batting average is .261 and his fielding average is .966. He batted .324 for the first two months of the 1967 season. Wayne's best year in the majors was 1964 when he collected 170 hits to finish with a .281 average, with 31 doubles, 4 triples and 8 home runs. He can play second, third or shortstop with equal ability.

At mid-season last year, Bristol was named as Cincinnati manager after serving as a manager eight years in the Reds' farm system and one year as a coach with the parent club. Twice his teams won minor league pennants and in 1961 he was named Three I Manager of the Year after his Topeka team won the flag as he managed and also batted .281.

Although he managed the Reds only half a season in 1966, he has rebuilt a seventh - place team into a solid contender that currently is leading the National League race.

Jaycee Junior Golf Meet Set

The Annual Monroe Jaycees Junior Golf tournament will be held this week for players 11-17 years of age.

The first 36 holes of the 54-hole affair will be held at Monroe's Municipal Course with the last 18 of the medal play tournament coming on the Bayou DeSiard layout.

Prospective players may sign up for the tourney at their local clubs.

The top four finishers in the tourney will be sent to Alexandria in July for the State Jaycee tourney.

The tourney will be played Wednesday through Friday.

Jaycees Cliff Lawrence and Chip Lyman are directing the play.

Ryun Blazes Second Fastest Mile

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Miler Jim Ryun of Kansas and sprinter Jimmy Hines of Texas Southern divided honors Saturday in post - meet review of the Coliseum - Compton Invitational Track and Field Meet.

Ryun, threatened by no one except himself and the timers, reeled off the second fastest mile of all time, 3:53.2.

Ryun, of course, owns the fastest mile in track history, 3:51.3.

Hines, after winning the 100 meters in 10.2 seconds, came back to beat world record holder Tommie Smith at 220 yards in 20.5. Smith, of San Jose State, has run 20 flat.

Hines got off the starting blocks in good fashion, Smith not too quickly.

"I feel I beat Tommie on the turn. I feel I can run 20 flat or under before the season is over. And I'm nearing that point now. On a real fast track, on a good day with strong opposition, I think, I'm sure, in fact, I can do it."

"I have no excuses," said Smith. "I just got beat. My start wasn't especially good, but not that bad. But Hines did get away from me on the curve. Don't forget, Hines is quite a runner. No matter how good you are, we're all beatable."

Australia's Ron Clarke fiddled around for two miles in the 5,000 meters, cranked out a comfortable lead and then, eased up, won in 13:39.8.

It hardly threatened his world standard of 13:16.6.

Bob Beamon, the Jamaican running for the El Paso, Tex., Track Club, defeated world champion Ralph Boston for the long jump. His best was 26 3¾, Boston's 26-1.

"I must say I'm disappointed in my race," said the Aussies' Clarke. "I felt fine, especially when I took off with two laps to go. But then I went sort of dead. I didn't have the usual lift. But I was satisfied just to win."

There was joy also with the U.S. weightman. Veteran Rink Babka, 198-11, and Jay Silvester, 198-3, defeated the world record holder, Ludvik Danek of Czechoslovakia, 198-2, in the discus.

Coming up: Ryun is to run in the U.S. Track and Field Federation meet in Albuquerque, N.M. next week. Clarke will run in the San Diego Invitational.

Brown Resigns Post

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Larry Brown, a former star guard for the University of North Carolina basketball team and now a Tar Hell assistant coach, will leave Aug. 1 to play pro ball.

Patterson Predicts 'Interesting Fight'

LOS ANGELES (AP) —Former world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson perhaps expressed it best when he said:

"It should be an interesting fight."

He referred to his 10-round bout Friday night in Memorial Coliseum with young Jerry Quarry of suburban Bellflower.

The engagement, which will not be televised, is set for the huge, 90,000-plus stadium.

The reason for such ample accommodations was explained by Los Angeles lady fight promoter, Mrs. Aileen Eaton.

"We think it's too big an attraction for our own 10,000-seat Olympic Auditorium and the 15,000 in the Sports Arena," she said, adding, "We are aiming at 30,000 attendance."

Most boxing people think the thing could end with whoever gets in the first solid punch.

Quarry, only 21, has scored 13 knockouts, most of them with his left hook, in winning 23 engagements. He has lost but one. Last year old Eddie Machen taught him the rudiments of boxing and won a one-sided decision.

Patterson, of course, is no stranger to the mat of a ring. But in all his years he has lost but four fights, all by knockout —to Ingemar Johansson, twice to Sonny Liston and once to cassius Clay.

Patterson is 32 but says, "I feel better, even stronger than when I was, say, 28. Fighting is my business. It is also about the only hobby I have, aside from flying my airplane."

"This is, of course, the biggest fight in my life. Patterson is the best I will have met, maybe ever meet," said crew-cropped Quarry. "This is my big chance, and I'll be ready when we get into the ring. There'll be no excuses."

"Mr. Patterson," he continued with uncommon politeness for a fighter, "is an excellent boxer and can punch. But I think I can punch, too. So—we'll see."

Quarry is now the 10th ranked fighter in the heavyweight division. Patterson is No. 4.

This is Patterson's first fight in Los Angeles since he stopped Roy Harris in 12 round in August, 1958.

Terrell May Regain Ranking

SYLVANIA, Ohio (AP) — Ernie Terrell, the former WBA heavyweight champion, may regain a place in the World Boxing Association's heavyweight rankings on June 10.

The WBA dropped the towering fighter from the top 10 after he suffered an injury to his left eye in his losing title bout with Cassius Clay at Houston last Feb. 6. Since then, the WBA has declared the heavyweight title vacant.

Terrell, who has been declared fit by his own medical experts, will be examined by the WBA's medical advisor at a June 10 meeting of the WBA's executive committee in Louisville, Ky.

Hughes, Nolan, Carew, Seaver-Top 1967 Rookie Contenders

NEW YORK (AP) —Rod Carew, the Minnesota Twins' second baseman and pitchers Gary Nolan of Cincinnati and Tom Seaver of the New York Mets are among the leading candidates in the Rookie of the Year race after the first quarter of the major league season.

Perhaps the ultimate winner still is to move up from the minors like Jim Nash in 1966. At this time a year ago, Nash still was toiling on the Kansas City A's farm at Mobile, where his 7-4 record gave little hint of a 12-1 performance in the majors.

Crew, only 21, has jumped to the Twins from Wilson, N.C. of the Class A Carolina League to become a regular in his fourth year of pro ball. Born in Gatun, Panama, Carew now calls Brooklyn his home.

Going into June, Crew was fifth among the American League batters at .320 and only 27 points behild Al Kaline of Detroit, the leader. The 6-foot, 170-pounder already has 49 hits.

Nolan was 4-1 and Seaver 4-2 through May. Nolan is the 19-year-old right-hander who forced his way onto the Cincinnati roster by a sensational performance in the exhibition games.

Seaver, the poised 22-year-old from Southern California, is the man Commissioner William Eckert picked out of a hat for the Mets after three clubs bid $50,000 for his services.

St. Louis has a candidate in 29-year-old Dick Hughes, who pitched a perfect game for seven innings May 30 at Cincinnati, only to lose the game 2-1. The experienced right-hander had pitched a two-hitter against Atlanta in his last previous start.

No rookies are playing regularly in the National League although Gary Sutherland, a shortstop by trade, has been used both at that post and in left field by the Phillies against left-handed pitchers.

In addition to Carew, starting rookies in the American League include Mike Andrews, Boston second baseman; Reggie Smith, Boston center fielder; Rick Monday, Kansas City center FIELDER, AND Tim Cullen, Washington second baseman.

Baltimore's Larry Haney has been doing a great deal of the catching for the world champs. Gus Gil started out as Cleveland's regular second baseman but Pedro Gonzalez has taken over.

Kansas City shuffles the lineup so often that few are regulars. Monday, who has four homers, is a fixture in center field. Ramon Webster plays both first base and left field more or less regularly and Sal Bando, recently recalled from Vancouver, is the third baseman against some pitching.

The New York Yankees use Bill Robinson, who came to them in the Clete Boyer deal with Atlanta, as the right fielder against southpaws. Hank Allen patrols center on a part time basis at Washington. Minnesota gave Ron Clark a shot at third base while Rick Rollins was injured.

Tom Phoebus of Baltimore American League pitching rookies with a 3-1 record through May. Relief man Bill Dillman of the Orioles, who got a start Wednesday, had a 2-0 record. Bill Rohr of the Boston Red Sox has not matched that one-hitter of opening day at Yankee Stadium but was 2-2 with great promise.

Rickey Clark has been a regular starter for California and Bill Kelso is a relief man. Joe Coleman of Washington has won two and takes his regular turh for the Senators.

Among the relief pitchers who rate as rookies are Steve Bailey and George Culver of Cleveland. Tony Pierce of Kansas City, Thad Tillotson of the Yanks and Dave Baldwin of Washington among American Leaguers. Tillotson came through with a 1-0 victory over Kansas City Wednesday when he got his first chance to start.

In addition to Nolan, Hughes and Seaver in the National League, rookies who are starters include Rich Nye of the Chicago Cubs, Don Wilson of Houston, Grant Jackson of Philadelphia and Bill Singer of Los Angeles.

The bullpen contingent also lists Joe Niekro of the Cubs who has been starting lately, Darrell Osteen of Cincinnati, Bill Denehy and Don Shaw of the Mets and Ron Willis of St. Louis.

The Cubs have a part time infielder in Paul Popovich and Cincinnati has a potential slugger in first baseman Lee May, who played regularly for a time. Norm Miller occasionally fills in as a Houston left fielder, and George Spriggs takes a turn in the outfield for Pittsburgh when Harry Walker rests a regular.

San Francisco has been getting help from catcher Dickie Dietz. The Mets' Don Bosch sees little action in center field although the brass still has high hopes for him.

Utah Assumes Track Capital Role

OGDEN, Utah (AP)—Utah takes the role of national track and field capital Friday, staging the small and major college championships on successive weekends.

More than 300 athletes, representing some 80 schools, will compete Friday and Saturday in the NCAA college division meet at Ogden.

The following Thursday, an even larger field goes after university division titles in a three-day meet at Brigham Young University in Provo. Among the competitors in Provo will be the top six finishers in each event of the Ogden meet.

Although this has been a year of fast times, records may be elusive in both meets. The altitude of 4,500 feet will be no help to runners used to lower elevations.

In the small school meet at Weber State College, San Diego State will be trying for its third consecutive team championship. The California school has entered 16 men and is represented in 12 of the 20 events.

Based on this year's entry list, and taking the altitude into consideration, most college division records appear safe. However, new marks are likely in the discus and pole vault, where defending champions who set records last year are returning against strong competition.

Stan McDonald of Lincoln University, Mo., will be seeking his third straight discus title. He already has surpassed by more than a foot his meet mark of 177-7½, set last year.

In the pole vault, defending champion Peter Chen of American University, Washington, D.C., has cleared 16-2 to top his meet mark of 15-7 last year. However, he ranks only second best. The top effort this season has been 16-3¾ by Mike Hanna of Indiana State.

Chen has an unusual build for a pole vaulter. He stands only 5-6 and weighs 140.

Rick Herrmann of San Diego State, who set a meet mark of 1:49.3 in the one-half mile last year and clocked 1:48.3 for second in the university division, has not been up to form this year. His best is 1:55.0, which puts him back in the field.

Other defending champions on the entry list are Walt Clements, Long Beach State, Calif., high hurdles; Jerry Durfee, Santa Barbara State, Calif., long jump; Bob Fitts, Cortland State, N.Y., six-mile run, and Gale Drennan, Arlington State, Tex., steeplechase.

Americana Golf Meet Set

Charmingdale will host the 4th annual Americana Four-Ball medal play golf tournament June 11, with qualifying rounds to run June 6-10.

Each player will be charged a $10 entrance fee. A 96 player limit with 48 teams has been set for the 27 hole contest.

All flights will have a shot gun start at 9 a.m. sharp. "Large, beautiful trophies and merchandise will be awarded in each flight, and a special medalist trophy will be up for grabs," "according to host pro Carl Gallo.

A special trphy will be offered to anyone who breaks the course record, a 71, currently held by Bob Harquist of Monroe.

Ray Mulhearn and Wayne Peddy of Monroe are the defending champs and are exempt from qualifying. Players that cannot qualify at Charmingdale may call in their qualifying scores to Gallo at 387-0083.

Patterson Predicts 'Interesting Fight'

LOS ANGELES (AP) —Former world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson perhaps expressed it best when he said:

"It should be an interesting fight."

He referred to his 10-round bout Friday night in Memorial Coliseum with young Jerry Quarry of suburban Bellflower.

The engagement, which will not be televised, is set for the huge, 90,000-plus stadium.

The reason for such ample accommodations was explained by Los Angeles lady fight promoter, Mrs. Aileen Eaton.

"We think it's too big an attraction for our own 10,000-seat Olympic Auditorium and the 15,000 in the Sports Arena," she said, adding, "We are aiming at 30,000 attendance."

Most boxing people think the thing could end with whoever gets in the first solid punch.

Quarry, only 21, has scored 13 knockouts, most of them with his left hook, in winning 23 engagements. He has lost but one. Last year old Eddie Machen taught him the rudiments of boxing and won a one-sided decision.

Patterson, of course, is no stranger to the mat of a ring. But in all his years he has lost but four fights, all by knockout —to Ingemar Johansson, twice to Sonny Liston and once to cassius Clay.

Patterson is 32 but says, "I feel better, even stronger than when I was, say, 28. Fighting is my business. It is also about the only hobby I have, aside from flying my airplane."

"This is, of course, the biggest fight in my life. Patterson is the best I will have met, maybe ever meet," said crew-cropped Quarry. "This is my big chance, and I'll be ready when we get into the ring. There'll be no excuses."

"Mr. Patterson," he continued with uncommon politeness for a fighter, "is an excellent boxer and can punch. But I think I can punch, too. So—we'll see."

Quarry is now the 10th ranked fighter in the heavyweight division. Patterson is No. 4.

This is Patterson's first fight in Los Angeles since he stopped Roy Harris in 12 round in August, 1958.

Terrell May Regain Ranking

SYLVANIA, Ohio (AP) — Ernie Terrell, the former WBA heavyweight champion, may regain a place in the World Boxing Association's heavyweight rankings on June 10.

Terrell, who has been declared fit by his own medical experts, will be examined by the WBA's medical advisor at a June 10 meeting of the WBA's executive committee in Louisville, Ky.

Dirty You, Dirty Us

With Paul Martin

By RICHARD KNIGHT

From the time we enter this veil of tears, we are told to pick up this, put that away, don't mess up the joint. We heed this admonition by necessity when we are young; when we feel like it as we grow older. If the situation presents itself for us to be untidy, we become as sloppy as Pigpen in the Peanuts comic strip. What we are doing is in complete violation to every self-imposed law in the wild world . . . we are messing up our nest.

Not you, you say! Do you smoke? If so, what do you do with a cigarette butt when you finish with it? You chuck it away just like everyone . . . chuck it away with its cellulose, charcoal fiber filter still attached. One of the most indestructible substances known to man, a common cigarette filter will someday form drifts of refuse to inundate this nation.

In our affluent society, our per capita output of visual refuse averages 1600 pounds a year. In a lifetime, you, Mr. Tidy himself, will have to dispose of 56 tons of solid waste matter. This will take in some 250 cans, 135 jars and bottles and about 338 plastic caps and crowns, each and every untidy year of your life. Makes you think where it all must go, doesn't it?

Let's bypass the visual pollution for a second for one that is far less evident. You, Mrs. Housewife, are the keeper of the family clothing. Once a week, year in, year out, you wind up the family (or local laundromat) washer to cleanse your family's dirty garments. In doing this, you use what can best be described as the most vital of all subsidiary pollutants ever introduced to a society . . . detergent.

Regardless of what product you use, low or high sudser alike, you are releasing a never-ending, indestructible reagent into the water tables of this country.

Detergent never runs down; it sits there and keeps on doing the job it was built for, creating suds until the cows come home. It clogs sewers, plugs up septic tanks, and it has ruined more water than all the mine acids ever dumped, all of this in one lifetime!

Certainly, you have to wash clothes! We all know this. But does anyone who makes this genie in a bottle or box, have to keep turning out a product that cannot be neutralized before it is released? Tell me not that there is not a way if we plan on going to the moon and are smart enough to get there, we certainly must be able to solve a complex chemistry problem such as this. Detergents must be licked within the next two decades or we are going to drown in a sea of suds.

Solid waste has a very definite use, one that can create rather than destroy. Housing developments now sit on sites once occupied by garbage dumps; parks lay their green acres over piles of old tin cans and bottles. Archeologists in ages to come are going to shake their heads at our improvident approach to the use of space and resource. By then, the holding of land will be so valuable to man that space will be a major problem. We are going to be up to here in people at the rate we are licking disease, stopping wars and breeding kids.

You Are Polluting

But what of the other pollution, the one you cannot see? Every time you turn over the engine of the family car, you are polluting. Want a fire in the grate to ward off the growing chill of a winter eve, you're polluting. Put that pile of newspapers on the back porch in your handy trash burner and light a match, you're polluting. Light a cigarette, cigar, pipe and you're polluting. Push the button on a handy aerosol can and you're polluting. You are merely putting another substance into the air we breathe to be sucked into lungs long overdue for relief.

How about fossile fuels? You don't use them? Think again! Every time your oil burner, your coal furnace, your cleaner than anything natural gas heater goes on, you are messing up the atmosphere. And how did you think the power that runs your toaster, lights your home, brings you television every night gets there to begin with? It comes from coal, my friend, for coal is still the king of power producers, turning huge steam generators to bring you the electricity you have become so dependent upon. Think of that the next time you turn up your nose in disgust at a smoke-belching stack or a mining region. You put them there and you are keeping them there.

We entered the atomic age with two of the loudest, and most final bangs then known to history. In a split-second, we exterminated 100,000 people and crippled many more. We created our monster and then found it had other uses. But rather than put atomic power to the purpose for which we have created it, killing, we have held it in reserve as a threat, completely bypassing the fact that what can kill can also be our salvation.

Atomic power can create electricity. It is not entirely improbable that it can run cars as it does submarines. It could eliminate waste disposal in a fashion that many of us have overlooked to here. But what of that period while we retool, while we spend countless millions dragging our feet or chasing rainbows to a far horizon? How are we going to breathe or drink or eat in 50 years if we continue to pursue this heedless course we follow now?

Pollution is a problem we are all vitally concerned with, one which we look at daily and do very little about. We express concern, appoint commissions, render promises that resemble platitudes, almost sops, to a country of voters that should be rising up in wrath against not only their representatives, but themselves as well. This problem is immediate; this problem is now. Unless it is not solved, that golden utopian age we project as a future will be as dirty as a messed-up nest.

You can fight this menace but will you? Will you join a committee, write a letter, bug your elected representatives? Will you put your trash where it should be instead of littering up God's outdoors with it? Will you raise as much Cain for this as you did for suffrage, for the repeal of prohibition & Will you continue to protest until a curb is put on this monster as it was on casual warfare and on unscrupulous business dealings? Will you fight this danger with the same nerve that you put into the stopping of the price and wage spiral?

I doubt it . . . it's too intangible a foe to battle. We'll keep breathing ever-increasing poisoned air and drinking water so loused up even resemble potable fluid. We'll step over rubble and drive by miles of junk yards and say to ourselves that something should be done. We ought to know . . . we did it to ourselves!

Saints Add 2 Draft Choices

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Defensive back Gene Ross of Oklahoma and flanker Roosevelt Robertson of North Carolina College Saturday signed with the New Orleans Saints, bringing to 28 the number of draft choices signed by the newly formed team.

Ross, was an all-Big Eight safety in 1966, is 6-2 and weighs 189 pounds. He was a ninth round draft choice.

Robertson, 6-3 and 205 pounds, caught 21 passes for 292 yards and seven touchdowns for North Carolina last year. He has been timed in the 40-yard dash in 4.8 seconds and was a 10th round pick.

Kinchen Added To USL Staff

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Former Lousiana State star Gary Kinchen was named head baseball and assistant football coach at the University of Southwestern Lousiana Saturday.

Kinchen, head football coach and athletic director at Glen Oaks High School in Baton Rouge, will assume his duties at USL July 1.

He replaces Dan Roy as the Bulldogs' baseball coach. Roy will devote full time to football, taking on extra duties and retaining his defensive backfield coaching spot.

Kinchen, 26, won three football letters at LSU and played on the winning 1961 Orange Bowl and 1962 Cotton Bowl teams.

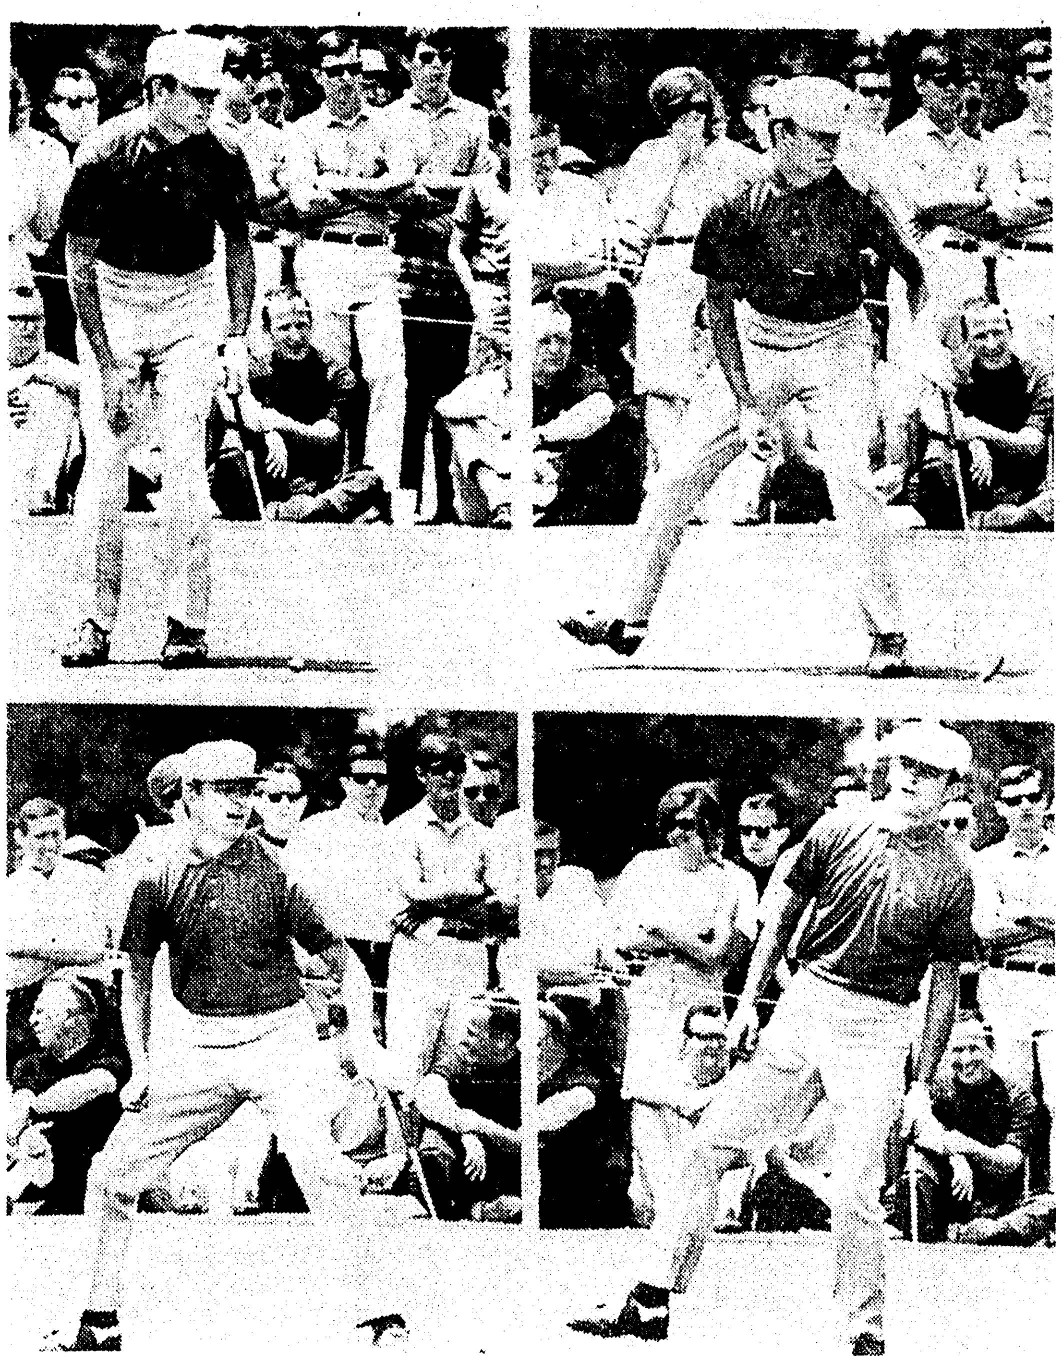
Whitworth Gets St. Louis Lead

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Kathy Whitworth took a two-stroke lead in the $13,500 St. Louis Women's Open Golf Tournament Saturday with a one-over par 70.

The defending champion has a 36-hole total of 138 over the 5,700-yard Norwood Hills Country Club course.

Carol Mann, with a 69 and Judy Kimball, on a 73 were tied for second with 140.

Louise Suggs had a 69 for 141 and the fourth spot.



DAVE HILL of Jackson, Mich., endures the opportunity for a birdie on the fifth hole of the third round of the Memphis Invitational Open golf tournament Saturday. Hill hopped from foot to foot as the ball rimmed the cup and missed. He still made the par as he continues to lead the tournament. When Hill makes a birdie, he just tips his hat. (AP Wirephoto)

Hill Widens Lead To 5 Strokes

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Dave Hill, a man trying to regain his confidence, widened his lead to five strokes in the third round of the $100,000 Memphis Open Golf Tournament Saturday.

Recovering from two consecutive bogeys on the front side, Hill shot a two-under-par 68 for a 56-hole total of 199.

He gained one stroke when Gary Player, who trailed by only four at the mid-way point, bogeyed the last hole after a bad drive and a third shot into a sand trap.

Player's 69 gave him a 204, one stroke ahead of Dan Sikes and two in front of Labron Harris and defending champion Bert Yancey. Sikes, off to a slow start Thursday, shot a 66. Harris had a 67 and Yancey a 68.

"I'm trying to regain my confidence," Hill said. "I couldn't get it all back if I won the next seven tournaments. But I feel better about my game because of my putting stroke and my finesse around the greens."

Hill, who last won a tournament in 1963, has led here all the way.

Hill grabbed the opening day lead with a 65.

"I've been beating my brains out for seven years (as a pro)," "and all I've got is a wife, three kids and a house," he said. "If I shot 75 tomorrow, it won't bother me because I'll win a big check anyway." Hill has won $12,569 in 16 previous tournaments this year.

He birdied the first hole Saturday, but hooked his drives on the 7th and 8th holes and took bogeys there. He rallied with birdies on the next two, one putting from 10 and four feet. He missed a birdie two when a 25-footer lipped th ecup.

"What made me feel good was that bogey putt on No. 7," he said. "I was tied for the lead here in 1961 on No. 6 and finished out of the money—and it started on No. 7. That could easily have been a double bogey."

Hill admitted glancing at the scoreboard twice to check on Player's progress, but added: "I'm not trying to think about who's doing what. I'm trying to shoot 70."

Chuck Courtney and Bruce Crampton were tied with Player going into th ethird round, but both shot overpar Saturday — Courtney's 73 dropping him nine strokes off the pace and Crampton falling ten strokes behind with a 72.

Tied with Crampton for sixth place at 207 are Don January, who fired a 65, Babe Hiskey and Harold Henning.

After the two bogeys, Hill reached the 9th green with his drive, then sank a 10-foot for a birdie. Non No. 10, he drove into a trap, chipped out and ran a four-footer for a birdie.

Going for an eagle on the 16th, he pulled up short on his first putt and sank the second for another birdie. A 15-foot putt on 18 hit the cup and he came back for a par.

Biggest Moving Day Ever Comes To Newest Pro Sport

MONTREAL (AP) — Six infant hockey clubs, whose multiple birth doubled the size of the once-staid old National League, start growing up in a hurry Tuesday....the biggest moving day in the history of professional sports.

Hockey's first expansion draft, to be conducted in conjunction with the NHL's 50th annual summer meeting, will uproot 120 players and shift them from the six established teams to the half dozen U.S. cities awarded major league franchises in February, 1966.

Another 30-40 players will move up to the NHL, filling roster vacancies on the old clubs and completing the massive transfer of talent.

"Preparations for this historic event have been going on for many months," said NHL President Clarence S. Campbell. "The formula for the draft itself required the full cooperation of all 12 teams.

"This speaks well for the member clubs and with the conclusion of the draft we will launch a new era in the history of the NHL. We are indeed highly optimistic about the future of the National Hockey League as an internationai sports organization."

The wholesale expansion marked the first change in the league's make-up since 1942, when the withdrawal of Brooklyn left six teams — Montreal, Toronto, Chicago, Detroit, Boston and New York — in the NHL family.

The expansion clubs — Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Minnesota, Los Angeles and California — each paid $2 million for a conditional franchise and draft rights to 20 skaters. Thei official acceptance as NHL members is expected to be announced after Monday's meeting of the board of governors.

Then, after they are stocked with a combination of NHL veterans and fringe players and minor league prospects, the six fledgling teams will make their competitive bow in October. They'll compete in a new Western Division and also play four games against each of the old clubs — two at home and two away.

"Baseball and football expanded within the framwork of existing divisions," an NHL spokesman said. "But the NHL is expanding 100 per cent and creating a new division."

"Whereas 10 or 12 rookies normally make the jump from the minor leagues to the NHL each year, there will be 120-150 new faces when the 1967-68 season opens."

The new teams expect to get a fair return on their investment during the two-day draft session, but they have no illusions that Bobby Hull, Stan Mikita or Bobby Orr will pop out of the big grab-bag.

Hull and Mikita, the scoring stars for Chicago's 1966-67 pennant winners, doubtless will be at the top of the Black Hawks' 12-man untouchable list. Orr, the 19-year-old Boston defenseman who captured Rookie of the Year honors last season, is among a handful of Junior-age pros who have played in the NHL but are exempt from the draft.

"Hull is worth $2 million himself," said the general manager Claude Provost of Montreal, one of the game's finest checking forwards; former penalty king Reg Fleming of New York and versatile Bill Hay of Chicago, Bobby Hull's pivotman on the Million Dollar Line, are other possible draftees.

Among the vulnerable goalies are Terry Sawchuck of Toronto, the league's 37-year-old shutout king, and 35-year-old Glenn Hall of Chicago, who retired last of one of the expansion clubs. "But we'll settle for the best players available to us."

The available talent will comprise some 325 players under contract to the holdover clubs. Each of the old teams will submit a protected list of 12 players, including one goaltender, to the league office Monday night. The lists will be passed on to the new clubs at 9 a.m., EST, Tuesday — one hour before the start of the draft.

After a separate draft of goalies — during which each established club will lose one goaltender, add another to its protected list and then lose a second man — the expansion teams will begin selecting forwards and defensemen.

The old clubs will protect an additional player after their first and second losses. Then, three more players will be claimed from each team before another can be placed on the safe list. Thereafter, the claim one-fill one sequence will continue until each new club has drafted 18 skaters.

Dodgers Snap Losing Streak

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Al Ferrara drove in two runs with a single and homer in support of Don Sutton's five-hit pitching Saturday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Pittsburgh 5-1 and broke a three-game losing streak.

Ron Hunt also hit a homer for Los Angeles, helping Sutton gain his third victory against six defeats.

Sutton was clipped for a run in the second inning when Gene Alley doubled to drive in Bill Mazeroski, who had singled.

By RICHARD KNIGHT

From the time we enter this veil of tears, we are told to pick up this, put that away, don't mess up the joint. We heed this admonition by necessity when we are young; when we feel like it as we grow older. If the situation presents itself for us to be untidy, we become as sloppy as Pigpen in the Peanuts comic strip. What we are doing is in complete violation to every self-imposed law in the wild world . . . we are messing up our nest.

Not you, you say! Do you smoke? If so, what do you do with a cigarette butt when you finish with it? You chuck it away just like everyone . . . chuck it away with its cellulose, charcoal fiber filter still attached. One of the most indestructible substances known to man, a common cigarette filter will someday form drifts of refuse to inundate this nation.

In our affluent society, our per capita output of visual refuse averages 1600 pounds a year. In a lifetime, you, Mr. Tidy himself, will have to dispose of 56 tons of solid waste matter. This will take in some 250 cans, 135 jars and bottles and about 338 plastic caps and crowns, each and every untidy year of your life. Makes you think where it all must go, doesn't it?

Let's bypass the visual pollution for a second for one that is far less evident. You, Mrs. Housewife, are the keeper of the family clothing. Once a week, year in, year out, you wind up the family (or local laundromat) washer to cleanse your family's dirty garments. In doing this, you use what can best be described as the most vital of all subsidiary pollutants ever introduced to a society . . . detergent.

Regardless of what product you use, low or high sudser alike, you are releasing a never-ending, indestructible reagent into the water tables of this country.

Detergent never runs down; it sits there and keeps on doing the job it was built for, creating suds until the cows come home. It clogs sewers, plugs up septic tanks, and it has ruined more water than all the mine acids ever dumped, all of this in one lifetime!

Certainly, you have to wash clothes! We all know this. But does anyone who makes this genie in a bottle or box, have to keep turning out a product that cannot be neutralized before it is released? Tell me not that there is not a way if we plan on going to the moon and are smart enough to get there, we certainly must be able to solve a complex chemistry problem such as this. Detergents must be licked within the next two decades or we are going to drown in a sea of suds.

Solid waste has a very definite use, one that can create rather than destroy. Housing developments now sit on sites once occupied by garbage dumps; parks lay their green acres over piles of old tin cans and bottles. Archeologists in ages to come are going to shake their heads at our improvident approach to the use of space and resource. By then, the holding of land will be so valuable to man that space will be a major problem. We are going to be up to here in people at the rate we are licking disease, stopping wars and breeding kids.

You Are Polluting

But what of the other pollution, the one you cannot see? Every time you turn over the engine of the family car, you are polluting. Want a fire in the grate to ward off the growing chill of a winter eve, you're polluting. Put that pile of newspapers on the back porch in your handy trash burner and light a match, you're polluting. Light a cigarette, cigar, pipe and you're polluting. Push the button on a handy aerosol can and you're polluting. You are merely putting another substance into the air we breathe to be sucked into lungs long overdue for relief.

How about fossile fuels? You don't use them? Think again! Every time your oil burner, your coal furnace, your cleaner than anything natural gas heater goes on, you are messing up the atmosphere. And how did you think the power that runs your toaster, lights your home, brings you television every night gets there to begin with? It comes from coal, my friend, for coal is still the king of power producers, turning huge steam generators to bring you the electricity you have become so dependent upon. Think of that the next time you turn up your nose in disgust at a smoke-belching stack or a mining region. You put them there and you are keeping them there.

We entered the atomic age with two of the loudest, and most final bangs then known to history. In a split-second, we exterminated 100,000 people and crippled many more. We created our monster and then found it had other uses. But rather than put atomic power to the purpose for which we have created it, killing, we have held it in reserve as a threat, completely bypassing the fact that what can kill can also be our salvation.

Atomic power can create electricity. It is not entirely improbable that it can run cars as it does submarines. It could eliminate waste disposal in a fashion that many of us have overlooked to here. But what of that period while we retool, while we spend countless millions dragging our feet or chasing rainbows to a far horizon? How are we going to breathe or drink or eat in 50 years if we continue to pursue this heedless course we follow now?

Pollution is a problem we are all vitally concerned with, one which we look at daily and do very little about. We express concern, appoint commissions, render promises that resemble platitudes, almost sops, to a country of voters that should be rising up in wrath against not only their representatives, but themselves as well. This problem is immediate; this problem is now. Unless it is not solved, that golden utopian age we project as a future will be as dirty as a messed-up nest.

You can fight this menace but will you? Will you join a committee, write a letter, bug your elected representatives? Will you put your trash where it should be instead of littering up God's outdoors with it? Will you raise as much Cain for this as you did for suffrage, for the repeal of prohibition & Will you continue to protest until a curb is put on this monster as it was on casual warfare and on unscrupulous business dealings? Will you fight this danger with the same nerve that you put into the stopping of the price and wage spiral?

I doubt it . . . it's too intangible a foe to battle. We'll keep breathing ever-increasing poisoned air and drinking water so loused up even resemble potable fluid. We'll step over rubble and drive by miles of junk yards and say to ourselves that something should be done. We ought to know . . . we did it to ourselves!

Saints Add 2 Draft Choices

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) —Defensive back Gene Ross of Oklahoma and flanker Roosevelt Robertson of North Carolina College Saturday signed with the New Orleans Saints, bringing to 28 the number of draft choices signed by the newly formed team.

Ross, was an all-Big Eight safety in 1966, is 6-2 and weighs 189 pounds. He was a ninth-round draft choice.

Robertson, 6-3 and 205 pounds, caught 21 passes for 292 yards and seven touchdowns for North Carolina last year. He has been timed in the 40-yard dash in 4.8 seconds and was a 10th round pick.

Kinchen Added To USL Staff

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Former Louisiana State star Gary Kinchen was named head baseball and assistant football coach at the University of Southwestern Louisiana Saturday.

Kinchen, head football coach and athletic director at Glen Oaks High School in Baton Rouge, will assume his duties at USL July 1.

He replaces Dan Roy as the Bulldogs' baseball coach. Roy will devote full time to football, taking on extra duties and retaining his defensive backfield coaching spot.

Kinchen, 26, won three football letters at LSU and played on the winning 1961 Orange Bowl and 1962 Cotton Bowl teams.

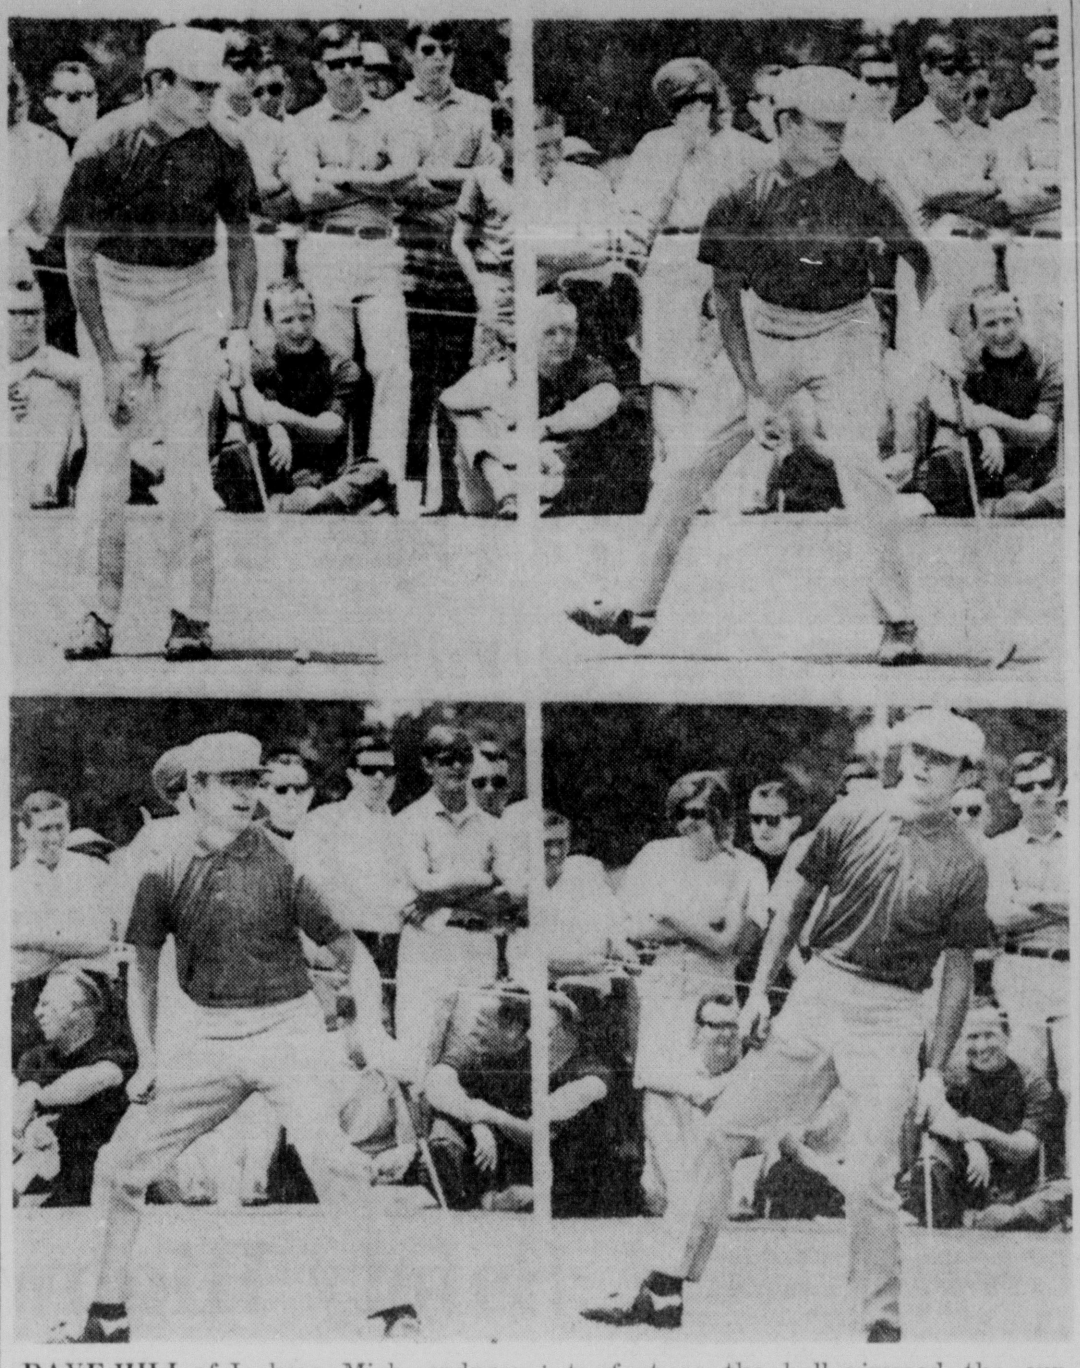
Whitworth Gets St. Louis Lead

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Kathy Whitworth took a two-stroke lead in the $13,500 St. Louis Women's Open Golf Tournament Saturday with a one over par 70.

The defending champion has a 36-hole total of 138 over the 5,700-yard Norwood Hills Country Club course.

Carol Mann, with a 69 and Judy Kimball, on a 73 were tied for second with 140.

Louise Suggs had a 69 for 141 and the fourth spot.



DAVE HILL of Jackson, Mich., endures the opportunity for a birdie on the fifth hole of the third round of the Memphis Invitational Open golf tournament Saturday. Hill hopped from foot to foot as the ball rimmed the cup and missed. He still made the par as he continues to lead the tournament. When Hill makes a birdie, he just tips his hat. (AP Wirephoto)

Hill Widens Lead To 5 Strokes

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Dave Hill, a man trying to regain his confidence, widened his lead to five strokes in the third round of the $100,000 Memphis Open Golf Tournament Saturday.

Recovering from two consecutive bogeys on the front side, Hill shot a two-under-par 68 for a 56-hole total of 199.

He gained one stroke when Gary Player, who trailed by only four at the mid-way point, bogeyed the last hole after a bad drive and a third shot into a sand trap.

Player's 69 gave him a 204, one stroke ahead of Dan Sikes and two in front of Labron Harris and defending champion Bert Yancey. Sikes, off to a slow start Thursday, shot a 66. Harris had a 67 and Yancey a 68.

"I'm trying to regain my confidence," Hill said. "I couldn't get it all back if I won the next seven tournaments. But I feel better about my game because of my putting stroke and my finesse around the greens."

Hill, who last won a tournament in 1963, has led here all the way.

Hill grabbed the opening day lead with a 65.

"I've been beating my brains out for seven years (as a pro)," "and all I've got is a wife, three kids and a house," he said. "If I shot 75 tomorrow, it won't bother me because I'll win a big check anyway." Hill has won $12,569 in 16 previous tournaments this year.

He birdied the first hole Saturday, but hooked his drives on the 7th and 8th holes and took bogeys there. He rallied with birdies on the next two, one putting from 10 and four feet. He missed a birdie two when a 25-footer lipped th ecup.

"What made me feel good was that bogey putt on No. 7," he said. "I was tied for the lead here in 1961 on No. 6 and finished out of the money—and it started on No. 7. That could easily have been a double bogey."

Hill admitted glancing at the scoreboard twice to check on Player's progress, but added: "I'm not trying to think about who's doing what. I'm trying to shoot 70."

Chuck Courtney and Bruce Crampton were tied with Player going into th ethird round, but both shot overpar Saturday — Courtney's 73 dropping him nine strokes off the pace and Crampton falling ten strokes behind with a 72.

Tied with Crampton for sixth place at 207 are Don January, who fired a 65, Babe Hiskey and Harold Henning.

After the two bogeys, Hill reached the 9th green with his drive, then sank a 10-foot for a birdie. Non No. 10, he drove into a trap, chipped out and ran a four-footer for a birdie.

Going for an eagle on the 16th, he pulled up short on his first putt and sank the second for another birdie. A 15-foot putt on 18 hit the cup and he came back for a par.

Biggest Moving Day Ever Comes To Newest Pro Sport

MONTREAL (AP) — Six infant hockey clubs, whose multiple birth doubled the size of the once-staid old National League, start growing up in a hurry Tuesday....the biggest moving day in the history of professional sports.

Hockey's first expansion draft, to be conducted in conjunction with the NHL's 50th annual summer meeting, will uproot 120 players and shift them from the six established teams to the half dozen U.S. cities awarded major league franchises in February, 1966.

Another 30-40 players will move up to the NHL, filling roster vacancies on the old clubs and completing the massive transfer of talent.

"Preparations for this historic event have been going on for many months," said NHL President Clarence S. Campbell. "The formula for the draft itself required the full cooperation of all 12 teams.

"This speaks well for the member clubs and with the conclusion of the draft we will launch a new era in the history of the NHL. We are indeed highly optimistic about the future of the National Hockey League as an international sports organization."

The wholesale expansion marked the first change in the league's make-up since 1942, when the withdrawal of Brooklyn left six teams — Montreal, Toronto, Chicago, Detroit, Boston and New York — in the NHL family.

The expansion clubs — Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Minnesota, Los Angeles and California — each paid $2 million for a conditional franchise and draft rights to 20 skaters. Thei official acceptance as NHL members is expected to be announced after Monday's meeting of the board of governors.

Then, after they are stocked with a combination of NHL veterans and fringe players and minor league prospects, the six fledgling teams will make their competitive bow in October. They'll compete in a new Western Division and also play four games against each of the old clubs — two at home and two away.

"Baseball and football expanded within the framwork of existing divisions," an NHL spokesman said. "But the NHL is expanding 100 per cent and creating a new division."

"Whereas 10 or 12 rookies normally make the jump from the minor leagues to the NHL each year, there will be 120-150 new faces when the 1967-68 season opens."

The new teams expect to get a fair return on their investment during the two-day draft session, but they have no illusions that Bobby Hull, Stan Mikita or Bobby Orr will pop out of the big grab-bag.

Hull and Mikita, the scoring stars for Chicago's 1966-67 pennant winners, doubtless will be at the top of the Black Hawks' 12-man untouchable list. Orr, the 19-year-old Boston defenseman who captured Rookie of the Year honors last season, is among a handful of Junior-age pros who have played in the NHL but are exempt from the draft.

"Hull is worth $2 million himself," said the general manager

Claude Provost of Montreal, one of the game's finest checking forwards; former penalty king Reg Fleming of New York and versatile Bill Hay of Chicago, Bobby Hull's pivotman on the Million Dollar Line, are other possible draftees.

Among the vulnerable goalies are Terry Sawchuck of Toronto, the league's 37-year-old shutout king, and 35-year-old Glenn Hall of Chicago, who retired last of one of the expansion clubs. "But we'll settle for the best players available to us."

The available talent will comprise some 325 players under contract to the holdover clubs. Each of the old teams will submit a protected list of 12 players, including one goaltender, to the league office Monday night. The lists will be passed on to the new clubs at 9 a.m., EST, Tuesday — one hour before the start of the draft.

After a separate draft of goalies — during which each established club will lose one goaltender, add another to its protected list and then lose a second man — the expansion teams will begin selecting forwards and defensemen.

The old clubs will protect an additional player after their first and second losses. Then, three more players will be claimed from each team before another can be placed on the safe list. Thereafter, the claim one-fill one sequence will continue until each new club has drafted 18 skaters.

Dodgers Snap Losing Streak

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Al Ferrara drove in two runs with a single and homer in support of Don Sutton's five-hit pitching Saturday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Pittsburgh 5-1 and broke a three-game losing streak.

Ron Hunt also hit a homer for Los Angeles, helping Sutton gain his third victory against six defeats.

Sutton was clipped for a run in the second inning when Gene Alley doubled to drive in Bill Mazeroski, who had singled.

The Light On Ludgate Hill

"Never, even when the storm - clouds appear blackest, have I been tempted to wish that I was other than an Englishman."

Rt. Rev. W. R. Inge, (late) Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral

Above London, out of the mists which many times soften the harshness of life, looms the dome of St. Paul's. Since the sixteen hundreds it has stood, throughout days of trial, empire, and during turbulent years when the empire became a commonwealth. On a September Sunday morning, the American travelers had stepped past the shattered but still beautiful church of St. Mary-le-Bow and come upon St. Paul's. Up the stone steps and through the dark, old doors, they walked and there came the thoughtful kinship many Americans feel to mother country, mother church.

". . . Almighty God, unto whom all hearts are open, all desires know, and from whom no secrets are hid; cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of thy Holy Spirit, that we may perfectly love thee, and worthily magnify thy Holy Name."

Inside there was a notice from the vestry, signed by the dean and the senior warden, which welcomed visitors to the cathedral. For members of the church, and the Anglican Communion across the world, it was Communion time at eleven o'clock. Though the priests, canons and curates were numerous in the manner of great cathedrals, there were many reminders of the small church on the hill at home. Separated from St. Paul's by an ocean, nearly two centuries, a revolution and a war, the church at home was tied to it by tradition, order of service, and that strongest bond of men, the love of Christ. The choir, of many red - cheeked boys who bravely wore heavy cassocks and high, starched, and ruffled collars, was something to be expected of England. But the boys sang, "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," and the message crossed oceans and years.

"Hear what our Lord Jesus Christ saith.

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and all thy soul, and all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment . . ."

From the chairs you could see the enormity of the cathedral. Light filtered in slowly, as if to avoid disturbing the service. High above, the dome reached to heaven, and you thought of Sir Christopher Wren and the Great Fire. Once, Ludgate's Hill overlooked London, the same area once guarded by Roman legions. The hill overlooked the Tower of London on the ramparts of which many distinguished Englishmen grasped their last minutes of life. Before the fire there was a smaller St. Paul's. All was swept away in the flames, and later Wren designed and built the cathedral, "The mightiest in Wren's mighty fleet."

" . . . Let us pray for the whole state of Christ's Church . . ."

St. Paul's is Renaissance, celebrating the perfection of God. But it has something of the Gothic, built in the form of a great cross. Its strength comes in the supporting columns which carry the weight of the roof and the great dome into the ground. At the head of the cross in front of the cathedral was the altar on which glowed the candles of Host and Trinity. Because it was the Sunday of St. Michael's and All Angels, in the Ember Days, purple vestments adorned altar and lectern. The choir stalls faced each other on the way to the altar. Across the arms of the cross toward the front, ran the communion rail. There was about the catherdal a feeling of years, men and events. But, more than that, the hand of the Carpenter of Nazareth was felt in every inch of Sir Christopher's design.

". . . The blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was shed for thee, preserve thy body and soul unto everlasting life. Drink this in remembrance that Christ's blood was shed for thee, and be thankful . . .

One wondered, at the communion rail, about the Englishmen who had knelt to those old stones in the passing years. The times and tides of men have washed across the beautiful island which is England and have changed it but little. And from the old walls seemed to jump thoughts and sounds of queens and kings, empire builders and one other son who looked across his ruined city and offered only blood, sweat and tears as the cost of victory.

". . . The peace of God which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord: And the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you, and remain with you always . . ."

Outside the mists were gone, and St. Paul's stood squarely, an island in the city. There were blue skies, and the sun caused the dome to shine, a light to guide the souls of men no matter who they are or from whence they come.

McKeithen Lashes Back D.A. Fears

NEW ORLEANS (AP) —Gov. John McKeithen lashed out Saturday at two of his recent critics — the district attorneys of Louisiana and Public Affairs Research Council.

The governor said he did not "make a promise" to fight for higher salaries for district attorneys, McKeithen said he had committed himself to signing a pay raise bill only if it "didn't upset the budget."

Speaking at a press conference following graduaton ceremonies of the Louisiana State University School of Medicine, the governor charged that some district attorneys are obviously out to "defeat McKeithen."

However, the governor added, "I'm not talking about Jim Garrison (of Orlaens Parish). I suspect he feels about like I do about it."

The governor said that Public Affairs Research Council, in noting that Louisiana has increased its number of state employes, "acted like it exposed the great train robbery."

McKeithen added, "Our administration is just as honest as PAR is."

Asked about a new move by the legislature to ban communistic and atheistic activity on state college campuses, McKeithen replied:

"I'm not at all happy about Communists making speeches on college campuses. Communists shouldn't be allowed to make speeches on the campuses.

"As far as atheists, if a fella wants to go to hell, let him."

Extradition Chance Slim For Novel

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—Gov. John J. McKeithen said Saturday there are "strong indications" that Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes will refuse to extradite Gordon Novel in connection with Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison's probe of the Kennedy assassination.

The Louisiana governor said "for reasons known only to them" Ohio authorities have indicated in conversations with him that Novel might not be returned to Louisiana.

Garrison wants Novel, a former New Orleans night club owner, who now lives in Columbus, Ohio, as a material witness in the investigation.

In another development, Jefferson Parish attorney Dean A. Andrews said he reserved the corporate name "Truth and consequences Inc." on May 19 with the office of the Louisiana Secretary of State in Baton Rouge for 90 days.

The name has been used by a group of New Orleans businessmen who are partially financing the Garrison investigation. However, the group was never incorporated.

Andrews, who has been indicted for perjury in connection with the case, has until Aug. 19 to make a formal charter request.

McKeithen told newsmen he has tried unsuccessfully to contact Gov. Rhodes, but was told the Ohio chief executive "is on an extended tour of the state."

Novel fled Louisiana just before Garrison tried to subpoena him to appear before the grand jury.

The Light On Ludgate Hill

"Never, even when the storm - clouds appear blackest, have I been tempted to wish that I was other than an Englishman."

Rt. Rev. W. R. Inge, (late) Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral

Above London, out of the mists which many times soften the harshness of life, looms the dome of St. Paul's. Since the sixteen hundreds it has stood, throughout days of trial, empire, and during turbulent years when the empire became a commonwealth. On a September Sunday morning, the American travelers had stepped past the shattered but still beautiful church of St. Mary-le-Bow and come upon St. Paul's. Up the stone steps and through the dark, old doors, they walked and there came the thoughtful kinship many Americans feel to mother country, mother church.

"... Almighty God, unto whom all hearts are open, all desires know, and from whom no secrets are hid; cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of thy Holy Spirit, that we may perfectly love thee, and worthily magnify thy Holy Name."

Inside there was a notice from the vestry, signed by the dean and the senior warden, which welcomed visitors to the cathedral. For members of the church, and the Anglican Communion across the world, it was Communion time at eleven o'clock. Though the priests, canons and curates were numerous in the manner of great cathedrals, there were many reminders of the small church on the hill at home. Separated from St. Paul's by an ocean, nearly two centuries, a revolution and a war, the church at home was tied to it by tradition, order of service, and that strongest bond of men, the love of Christ. The choir, of many red - cheeked boys who bravely wore heavy cassocks and high, starched, and ruffled collars, was something to be expected of England. But the boys sang, "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," and the message crossed oceans and years.

"Hear what our Lord Jesus Christ saith.

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and all thy soul, and all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment . . ."

From the chairs you could see the enormity of the cathedral. Light filtered in slowly, as if to avoid disturbing the service. High above, the dome reached to heaven, and you thought of Sir Christopher Wren and the Great Fire. Once, Ludgate's Hill overlooked London, the same area once guarded by Roman legions. The hill overlooked the Tower of London on the ramparts of which many distinguished Englishmen grasped their last minutes of life. Before the fire there was a smaller St. Paul's. All was swept away in the flames, and later Wren designed and built the cathedral, "The mightiest in Wren's mighty fleet."

" . . . Let us pray for the whole state of Christ's Church . . ."

St. Paul's is Renaissance, celebrating the perfection of God. But it has something of the Gothic, built in the form of a great cross. Its strength comes in the supporting columns which carry the weight of the roof and the great dome into the ground. At the head of the cross in front of the cathedral was the altar on which glowed the candles of Host and Trinity. Because it was the Sunday of St. Michael's and All Angels, in the Ember Days, purple vestments adorned altar and lectern. The choir stalls faced each other on the way to the altar. Across the arms of the cross toward the front, ran the communion rail. There was about the catherdal a feeling of years, men and events. But, more than that, the hand of the Carpenter of Nazareth was felt in every inch of Sir Christopher's design.

". . . The blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was shed for thee, preserve thy body and soul unto everlasting life. Drink this in remembrance that Christ's blood was shed for thee, and be thankful . . .

One wondered, at the communion rail, about the Englishmen who had knelt to those old stones in the passing years. The times and tides of men have washed across the beautiful island which is England and have changed it but little. And from the old walls seemed to jump thoughts and sounds of queens and kings, empire builders and one other son who looked across his ruined city and offered only blood, sweat and tears as the cost of victory.

". . . The peace of God which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord: And the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you, and remain with you always . . ."

Outside the mists were gone, and St. Paul's stood squarely, an island in the city. There were blue skies, and the sun caused the dome to shine, a light to guide the souls of men no matter who they are or from whence they come.

McKeithen Lashes Back D.A. Fears

NEW ORLEANS (AP) —Gov. John McKeithen lashed out Saturday at two of his recent critics — the district attorneys of Louisiana and Public Affairs Research Council.

The governor said he did not "make a promise" to fight for higher salaries for district attorneys, McKeithen said he had committed himself to signing a pay raise bill only if it "didn't upset the budget."

Speaking at a press conference following graduaton ceremonies of the Louisiana State University School of Medicine, the governor charged that some district attorneys are obviously out to "defeat McKeithen."

However, the governor added, "I'm not talking about Jim Garrison (of Orlaens Parish). I suspect he feels about like I do about it."

The governor said that Public Affairs Research Council, in noting that Louisiana has increased its number of state employes, "acted like it exposed the great train robbery."

McKeithen added, "Our administration is just as honest as PAR is."

Asked about a new move by the legislature to ban communistic and atheistic activity on state college campuses, McKeithen replied:

"I'm not at all happy about Communists making speeches on college campuses. Communists shouldn't be allowed to make speeches on the campuses.

"As far as atheists, if a fella wants to go to hell, let him."

Jerry Edward Torrans of Mobile, Ala., served Mr. Allen as best man and groomsmen-ushers were John Michael Holden Jr., brother of the bride; William Freeman Smith, Major William Calvin Stout, Ronald Robert Updegraff and Donald Ray Updegraff.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents were hosts at a reception in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Clifton Butler, in Shreveport. Mrs. Holden received her guests wearing a gown of pearl gray chiffon with empire bodice embroidered with gray tear drops and bugle beads and featuring floating back chiffon panels. A matching stole and hat completed her attire and she wore a white orchid corsage. Mrs. Allen, mother of the groom, was wearing a gown of aqua crepe with Chantilly lace bodice and long slim skirt. She wore a whimsey of matching organza petals, aqua shoes and white gloves and a corsage of cymbodium orchids.

Arrangements of summer flowers were used throughout the house. The tiered wedding cake, adorned with yellow roses and valley lilies, centered the refreshment table which was garlanded with smilax and summer flowers, which were also entwined through silver candelabra and extended to silver punch bowls at either end. The bride's book table was presided over by Mrs. Shove Holmes and Mrs. Richard Porter.

For travel when the couple departed on a wedding trip to Acapulco, Mexico the bride wore an imported yellow linen costume suit with matching accessories. Upon their return the couple will be at home at 407 F Main St., in Crossett, where Mr. Allen is employed.

MRS. CARL FRED ALLEN

Men's Sportswear Hits Peak In Color Style For Summer

NEW YORK — Pick a color — any color you wish.

Pick a pattern — a plaid, a print, a check, even a polka dot.

Blend the two together . . and you have the ultimate in men's sportswear fashion for spring and summer '67.

Slacks remain the No. 1 item — the cornerstone — of the sportswear wardrobe, and manufacturers are offering colors and patterns to suit the individual fancy of every man. They've discovered that the typical American male wants to express his own personality by the clothing he wears, and they're meeting his demands with the brightest, most diversified array of hues and patterns ever.

Colors to be seen most frequently in slacks this season include teal and French blue, burgundy and wine, honey and other golds, and various shades of green. All are bold and masculine, and can be easily mixed with other shades of the same color for a tasetful color scheme from tip to toe.

In regard to patterns in slacks, the most popular will be tattersall checks, large and small plaids, exotic African prints, vibrant batik prints, and bold stripes. "This wide variety in patterns and textures," says a men's sportswear executive, "will allow the American male to express his virility, his aggressiveness, and his own personality in a far more forceful manner."

Taking a look at the overall sportswear picture, shaped, double-breasted sport coats and blazers — representing the new "Riverboat look" — will be seen in rich colors of blues, greens, and browns, and in glen plaids, subtle stripes and checks. In a trend away from white shirts for business and dress wear, wide-track stripes on pastel grounds — blue especially — will continue to hold their populariy against up-and-coming tattersalls and window-pane patterns on white and colored grounds.

MISS GLENDA CAROLYN WILBANKS

Announcement Tea Reveals Pair's August Wedding Plans

The engagement of Miss Glenda Carolyn Wilbanks and Floyd Martin Chaney, being announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lee Wilbanks, 1501 Arkansas Road, West Monroe, was the inspiration for an announcement tea held Sunday, May 28 at Highland Park Country Club. Parents of the future groom are Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Ernest Chaney, 911 S. 6th, Monroe.

Hostesses for the announcement party were Mrs. Dallas Wilbanks, Mrs. J. D. Wilbanks, Mrs. Billy J. Ramsey, Mrs. Jack Battaglia Jr., Mrs. Sherley Fowler and Mrs. Claudia Pittman.

Mrs. Pittman and Mrs. Ramsey alternated at the door where guests were received by the honoree, her mother, the mother of her fiance and Mrs. A. C. Martin, grandmother of the future groom. A memory candle encircled with greenery was displayed on the guest book table which was draped with white satin, overlaid with silk organza. Alternating at the book were Mrs. Don Williams and Miss Wanda Wilbanks.

For her party Miss Wilbanks wore an accordion pleated white voile dress falling from a simple yoke, highlighted with pleated angel sleeves. Her corsage was of yellow carnations. Mrs. Wilbanks selected a robin's egg blue double dacron knit ensemble with back buttoned jacket and a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. Chaney was wearing a yellow sheath with ribbon trimmed jacket and a white carnation corsage, while Mrs. Martin chose a pastel blue linen dress for the occasion with a corsage of white carnations.

Also draped with a white satin cloth overlaid with silk organza, the refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of yellow Shasta daisies and white stock, flanked by yellow tapers in silver candelabra. At one end Mrs. A. E. Fowler and Mrs. Dallas Wilbanks alternated at the cut glass bowl of yellow punch while opposite Mrs. J. D. Wilbanks, Mrs. Battaglia and Mrs. Fowler alternated at the silver coffee service.

Tea girls were Misses Sandy Knobloch, Marjo Waiker, Dorothy Parra, Marjo Chaney, Nelwyn Wilbanks and Cheryl Foster. A large number of guests called during the appointed hours of 3 until 5 p.m.

Carl Fred Allen, Bride On Wedding Trip To Acapulo

Cathedral tapers in arched candelabra entwined with smilax and a mass arrangement of gladioli, yellow lilies, chrysanthemums, stock and Majestic daisies decorated the sanctuary of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Shreveport for the wedding Saturday, June 3 of Miss Mary Elizabeth Holden and Carl Fred Allen, Crossett, Ark.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John Michael Holden of Shreveport and Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Sexton Allen, 1815 North Fifth, Monroe.

Rev. W. Mead Brown, rector, performed the ceremony at 7 p.m. following an organ prelude by Mrs. Frank Kennedy.

Escorted by her father the bride wore a gown of ivory silk satin designed with bateau neckline and elbow sleeves of matching reembroidered lace. The Alencon lace formed the empire waistline and the scalloped hem extending into a deep point on the A - line skirt front. The detachable Watteau train was finished with a similar deep point border of the lace. Her veil of imported silk candlelight illusion fell from a sunburst shaped cap accented with sequins and crystal teardrops. She carried a cascade of bridal roses and stephanotis.

Mrs. James Lee Robinson II of McAllen, Texas, was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. Dennis Lee O'Connor and Miss Dicksey Lynn Gerlach. They wore formal length dresses of jonquil yellow dot - embroidered English net over sheaths of yellow linen. The empire line of the bodice featured low round necklines and the skirts formed a cage effect to the linen trimmed hem. Yellow linen daisies misted with tulle formed their headpieces and they carried bouquets of yellow Marguerite daisies and polished ivy.

Flower girl was Miss Marti Wheless, who wore a floor length dress of white imported organdy accented by yellow satin sash and Val lace trim. A circlet of yellow daisies for her head matched the flowers she carried in her basket. Ring bearer was James Lee Robinson III.

Jerry Edward Torrans of Mobile, Ala., served Mr. Allen as best man and groomsmen-ushers were John Michael Holden Jr., brother of the bride; William Freeman Smith, Major William Calvin Stout, Ronald Robert Updegraff and Donald Ray Updegraff.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents were hosts at a reception in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Clifton Butler, in Shreveport. MRS. WAYNE MARTIN FORD

Afternoon Ceremony Unites Sharon Graves, Wayne Ford

Miss Sharon Margaret Graves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Calvert Graves of Winnsboro, became the bride of Wayne Martin Ford, son of Mrs. John Robert Chambliss of Shreveport and the late William Ray Ford, Wednesday, May 31.

Rev. W. H. Bengston officiated at the 3 p.m. double ring ceremony in Winnsboro First Methodist Church. Nuptial music was presented by Miss Suzanne Walter, pianist and Mrs. Gene Emfinger, soloist.

White cathedral tapers in wrought iron candelabra arranged horizontally at the altar were centered with a massive design of white stock and blush pink gladioli. An asymetrical bouquet of the same flowers was placed at the base of the brass cross on the communion table.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a traditional gown of slipper satin designed on empire lines. The fitted bodice of Chantilly lace featured a Sabrina neckline. A flowing chapel train fell from the high rise waist defined by a flat bow. Her silk illusion veil was held in place by a crown of pearls. She carried a bouquet of a white hybrid orchid and stephanotis florets, garlanded with pink roses and miniature ivy.

Mrs. Larry Stephens of Crowville attended the bride as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Kay Enloe of Mansfield and Mrs. Michael Phillips of Baton Rouge and Mrs. Henry Roane of Monroe, both cousins of the bride. Their identical floor length gowns of pink shantung featured empire bodices with puffed sleeves and square neckline. Each wore a Dior bow headpiece and carried a cascade bouquet of pink glamellias and Red Delight roses with touches of Hahn's ivy.

John Robert Chambliss attended his stepson as best man. Groomsmen included James Barnwell of Shreveport; Forrest Ray Ford of New Ellenton, S. C. and Shelby Graves, Winnsboro and ushers were Sidney Boon, Shreveport and Patrick Mackey, Opelousas.

Mrs. Graves chose for her daughter's wedding a blue silk sheath with matching accessories and a pink cymbidium orchid corsage. Mrs. Chambliss, mother of the groom, was attired in an aqua model of silk and lace with matching accessories and a pink orchid.

A reception following the ceremony was held in Fellowship Hall of the church. Mrs. Richard Eberts of Monroe and Miss Alice Jane Gowan, Winnsboro, presided at the bride's book at a table covered with a floor length net cloth. A crystal container held an arrangement of pink roses and a single pink taper.

The bride's table was covered in pink overlaid with white net. Pink glamellias and roses around a silver candelabra formed the central decor between the punch bowl and pink and white wedding cake. Aunts of the bride assisting with courtesies were Mrs. Fred Donaldson, Waldo, Fla., Mrs. Jack Price, Monroe; Mrs. W. A. Butler Sr., Mrs. Jack Givens, Mrs. D. P. McDuff Jr., Mrs. I. Q. Robinson Jr., all of Winnsboro and a cousin, Mrs. Jack Gillison of Lake Village, Ark. Misses Delia Ann Butler and Jacqueline Price, cousins of the bride, were tea girls.

Miss Graves is a member of Phi Mu fraternity and Mr. Ford's fraternity is Kappa Alpha. After a wedding trip the couple will be at home in Ruston for the summer

Moranda Hamer, Rodney Wade Wed In Candlelight Setting

In a candlelight ceremony Tuesday, May 30 in the Chapel of First Baptist Church of West Monroe, Miss Moranda Carol Hamer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hamer, West Monroe, became the bride of Rodney Carlton Wade, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Carlton Wade, Monroe.

Magnolia foliage formed a bank of greenery for branched candelabra and baskets of white gladioli tied with blue ribbon formed the altar setting where Rev. Grant Clark of Simsboro performed the double ring vows.

Candles were lighted by Michael McVay and Kenneth Platt as prenuptial music was provided by George Miller, pianist and soloist, William Smith of Louisiana College.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length Empire gown of white peau de soie, topped with lace bodice featuring scalloped neckline and bell sleeves. A circular chapel train was attached at the back waist. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held in place by petals of illusion and seed pearls encrusted with aurora borealis crystals and drop pearls. She carried a yellow throated white orchid surrounded by stephanotis and satin streamers atop a white monogrammed Bible presented her by her attendants.

Miss Martha Elaine Farley attended the bride as maid of honor and bridesmaids were Misses Kay Pruett and Margaret Scale. They wore floor length models featuring empire bodices of peacock blue brocade banded over skirts of powder blue peau de soie with dyed to match satin shoes. Their headpieces were powder blue peau de soie petals with circlets of matching illusion, and their bouquets were nosegays of blue baby chrysanthemums.

Cousins of the bride, Miss Arhonda Allen and Randall Allen served as flower girl and ring bearer.

Mr. Wade was his son's best man and groomsmen were John Melvin Brady and Charles Richard Moore. The candle - lighters also served as ushers.

For the reception which followed in the educational building, Mrs. Hamer received her guests wearing a pastel blue bonded crepe with scalloped lace overblouse, bone accessories and a beige cymbidium orchid. The groom's mother, Mrs. Wade, wore a pale pink silk sheath with overlaid beige lace bodice and sleeves, matching accessories and a pink cymbidium orchid.

Draped in white satin the bride's table held an arrangement of white carnations and tiny blue chrysanthemums between silver candelabra. The

Miss Sharon Margaret Graves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Calvert Graves of Winnsboro, became the bride of Wayne Martin Ford, son of Mrs. John Robert Chambliss of Shreveport and the late William Ray Ford, Wednesday, May 31.

Rev. W. H. Bengston officiated at the 3 p.m. double ring ceremony in Winnsboro First Methodist Church. Nuptial music was presented by Miss Suzanne Walter, pianist and Mrs. Gene Emfinger, soloist.

White cathedral tapers in wrought iron candelabra arranged horizontally at the altar were centered with a massive design of white stock and blush pink gladioli. An asymetrical bouquet of the same flowers was placed at the base of the brass cross on the communion table.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a traditional gown of slipper satin designed on empire lines. The fitted bodice of Chantilly lace featured a Sabrina neckline. A flowing chapel train fell from the high rise waist defined by a flat bow. Her silk illusion veil was held in place by a crown of pearls. She carried a bouquet of a white hybrid orchid and stephanotis florets, garlanded with pink roses and miniature ivy.

Mrs. Larry Stephens of Crowville attended the bride as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Kay Enloe of Mansfield and Mrs. Michael Phillips of Baton Rouge and Mrs. Henry Roane of Monroe, both cousins of the bride. Their identical floor length gowns of pink shantung featured empire bodices with puffed sleeves and square neckline. John Robert Chambliss attended his stepson as best man. Groomsmen included James Barnwell of Shreveport; Forrest Ray Ford of New Ellenton, S. C. and Shelby Graves, Winnsboro and ushers were Sidney Boon, Shreveport and Patrick Mackey, Opelousas.

Mrs. Graves chose for her daughter's wedding a blue silk sheath with matching accessories and a pink cymbidium orchid corsage. Mrs. Chambliss, mother of the groom, was attired in an aqua model of silk and lace with matching accessories and a pink orchid.

A reception following the ceremony was held in Fellowship Hall of the church. Mrs. Richard Eberts of Monroe and Miss Alice Jane Gowan, Winnsboro, presided at the bride's book at a table covered with a floor length net cloth. A crystal container held an arrangement of pink roses and a single pink taper.

The bride's table was covered in pink overlaid with white net. Pink glamellias and roses around a silver candelabra formed the central decor between the punch bowl and pink and white wedding cake. Aunts of the bride assisting with courtesies were Mrs. Fred Donaldson, Waldo, Fla., Mrs. Jack Price, Monroe; Mrs. W. A. Butler Sr., Mrs. Jack Givens, Mrs. D. P. McDuff Jr., Mrs. I. Q. Robinson Jr., all of Winnsboro and a cousin, Mrs. Jack Gillison of Lake Village, Ark. Misses Delia Ann Butler and Jacqueline Price, cousins of the bride, were tea girls.

by Marillyn Taylor

This has been a sort of in-between week, catching the last flickers of end-of-school activities, and the first shadows-before of coming weeks of out of town visitors.

Last Friday PAT FUNDERBURK entertained at her home, 3802 Forsythe, complimentary to Max's mother, EVIE FUNDERBURK of Sterlington, who was retiring after 33 years in the teaching profession. Pat was assisted by her daughter, LYN and KIM, and son MINOR, who presented their grandmother with a silver tray engraved with the dates of her career.

Arriving guests noted on the credenza in the foyer a large arrangement of pink roses in an Oriental bowl, flanked by antique pink lustres. In the den, Pat used magnolia blossoms with natural foliage on the hearth, with a bouquet of daisies in the bookcase. Coral roses in a hand-painted bowl graced the living room.

The dining room table was centered with a silver platter holding two magnolia blossoms. White candles burned in silver holders at each side. Those present included Evie's sister, ROBERTA HERR, and another special guest, SALLIE RICHARDSON, also retiring this year.

The menu served to twelve included shrimp-stuffed tomato, asparagus with Hollandaise, congealed salad, crescent rolls, and for dessert, apple crisp a la mode with coffee.

Former Monroyans in town this week were EVA and FRED BECKETT and their daughter MARY EVE, of Norman, Oklahoma. They arrived Tuesday to be guests of MARY LEE and DOC MILAM until tomorrow. On Friday Eva went to Tallulah, where she was the guest of MRS. E. L. WALLACE for the Blanchard family reunion. Eleven brothers and sisters and various relatives and descendants attended the weekend gathering.

Mary Eve has done us all proud with her activities at the University of Oklahoma. A freshman there, she was elected "pledge of the month" for February, selected from the 42 pledges of Delta Delta Delta. She has recently been named as assistant treasurer of the collegiate chapter to serve for the coming year, when she will be living in the sorority house.

In addition to her work with her sorority, Mary Eve has served on a number of committees for the university: OU "Howdy Week"; Baptist Student union; Campus Chest; Student Senate Voting, Dad's Day; "Engine Show" tickets; and Sooner Scandals. She has been appointed Administrative Yearbook staff for the coming co-ordinator on the Sooner Yearbook staff for the coming year.

Visitors in the home of JOAN and FRED KING have been his parents, MR. and MRS. IRVING KING and cousin, FLORENCE WEISS of New York City. The guests left for home on Tuesday after a week's visit.

The Kings made a trip to Six Flags this weekend. They drove over on Thursday, with their daughters, BETSY SUE and NANCY, and guest PATTY RILEY; returned home late yesterday.

Friendship from old Selman Field days were renewed last weekend when DR. and MRS. PAUL A. MILLER were here from Washington, D. C., and visited the LEON SUGARS. The four had been friends when the Millers lived here during World War II days. Dr. Miller, who has been president of the University of West Virginia, is now assistant secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare in Washington, D. C. He was here to address the NLSC commencement last Friday. He declared himself astounded at Monroe's growth in the years since his departure.

Here from Waco, Texas, this weekend are MAJOR and MRS. EDWARD T. MOLLOY (she was the former Billie Hooper of Epps), and their daughter, LILLIAN. They are visiting their parents, BERNICE and T. J. WILLIAMS at their home, 604 Sterlington road.

Each visitor to New Orleans has his own favorite places to dine, to visit, to see. And each has a tendency to return over and over to these same places. "Why change a winner?" as they say. All very well, but this not changing can cause one to miss learning of a new place which can be a winner, too.

This week we visited New Orleans with the idea of specializing in new places. Some, indeed, were not worth the trouble, and we passed on without comment. Others were delightful and a pleasure to add to our list of favorites.

Atop the new International Trade Mart building on the river at the foot of Canal street is a lounge called, appropriately enough, "Top of the Mart". Here the center section of the room, where the elevators arrive and the combo plays, is stationary. The perimeter, filled with tables and chairs at plate glass windows, rotates. It takes just over an hour to make the complete circle of the building and to take in the breathtaking view of the city.

The view by night is especially spectacular, with the dark river curving about the base of the building, and lights flung like stars to the horizon. 'Tis a crazy quilt of lights, with main artery streets cutting bright seams across the helter-skelter patterns of residential areas; with patches of dark warehouses lit by occasional single bulbs; with floodlit buildings such as the St. Louis Cathedral providing focal points. We recommend a trip to "Top of the Mart", but watch the time! This is such a popular spot with New Orleanians that there is usually a waiting line at the elevator from ten to midnight.

A number of new hotel-motel establishments have been built in New Orleans in recent years, some in the French Quarter itself, some lying farther out of town. This was our first visit to the Bourbon Orleans, directly behind the cathedral. Here imposing doors some fourteen feet high open into a lofty panelled lobby. One wall is covered with larger-than-life portraits of Bourbon kings of France. A double staircase, red carpeted, sweeps up to the Quadroon Ballroom on the second floor. Dominating the stair landing is a mural of the Battle of New Orleans.

Another place, new to us, was "The Emerald Door", a restaurant out on St. Charles avenue. This is a place which stresses a plush decor, very unusual for a New Orleans restaurant. The menu has a cosmopolitan rather than a Creole emphasis. And here we had this week one of the best meals we've had in the Crescent city.

Some months ago, we quoted these lines in our poetry corner. As space will go, ours went, and some of the closing paragraphs were cut off. A number of readers have asked us to repeat this advice and here it is:

JUST FOR TODAY
I will try to live through the day only and not tackle my whole life problem at once.

JUST FOR TODAY
I will be happy. I will assume to be true what Abraham Lincoln said, "Most folks are as happy as they make up their minds to be."

JUST FOR TODAY
I will try to strenthen my mind. I will study. I will learn something useful. I will read something that required effort, thought and concentration.

JUST FOR TODAY
I will adjust myself to what is, and not try to adjust everything to my own desires.

JUST FOR TODAY
I will exercise my soul in three ways: I will do somebody a good turn, and not get found out. I will do at least two things that I don't want to do — just for exercise. I will not show anyone that my feelings are hurt; they may be hurt, but today I will not show it.

JUST FOR TODAY
I will be agreeable. I will look as well as I can, dress becomingly, talk low, act courteously, criticize not one bit, not find fault with anything, and not try to improve or regulate anybody but myself.

JUST FOR TODAY
I will have a program. I may not follow it exactly, but I will have it. I will save myself from two pests: hurry and indecision.

JUST FOR TODAY
I will have a quiet half hour all by myself. During this half hour, I will try and get a better perspective of my life.

JUST FOR TODAY
I will be unafraid. Especially I will not be afraid to enjoy what is beautiful and to believe that as I give to the world, so the world will give back to me.

JUST FOR TODAY
I will recognize God as my Heavenly Father, and that I am His child, and think, act and feel accordingly.

JUST FOR TODAY
I will begin the day upon awakening by praying: "This is the day which the Lord hath made; I will rejoice and be glad in it."

JUST FOR TODAY
I will pray at noon for the world's greatest need: "Grant peace, O God, in our time."

JUST FOR TODAY
I will give back to God this day before going to sleep in this covering prayer:

O Lord, Thou Knowest how I live;
All I've done amiss, forgive;
All of good I've tried to do, strengthen, bless and carry through;
All I love in safety keep—
While in Thee, I fall asleep."

White Shoes Set Off Summer Styles

Nothing will so effectively set off the clear colors of Summer '67 as spanking white footwear, points out Leather Industries of America. Whether it's an all-white pair or white combined with another color, white leather shoes provide a clean sharp accent to new bright pinks, greens, yellows — and the deep dark browns, navy, purple and, of course, black. These are available in a variety of textures including smooth, grained, suede, embossed and genuine patent leather.

White leather shoes are right for any summer occasion, from a stroll to a soiree. To serve your needs, you may choose a closed or open pump, sandal, sling - back or tie shoe. On all styles, slim leather soles add their own trimness of lne, plus needed protection and flexible support. If, in addition, shoes are lined with smooth leather, hosiery will never snag and shoes will slip on and off with frictionless ease.

Punctuating the pristine effect of pure white leather may be trims and underlays of color. Sometimes the color is used boldly, as in a white patent leather pump with bullseye buckle in neon - bright red and green. Sometimes application is discreet, as in colorful narrow perfed trim squaring off the back quarter and toeline of a white smooth leather sandal.

The beauty part of the new white leathers, apart from their crisp appearance and cool comfort, is the ease with which they can be kept spotless — if they're American - tanned. Grass and dirt stains can be wiped off real patent leather with a damp cloth. Grained and smooth leathers come clean with a minimum of effort applied to a moistened sponge and a dab of mild soap.

Ever add a little sherry to the gravy to be served with meat-balls?

This has been a sort of in-between week, catching the last flickers of end-of-school activities, and the first shadows-before of coming weeks of out of town visitors.

Last Friday PAT FUNDERBURK entertained at her home, 3802 Forsythe, complimentary to Max's mother, EVIE FUNDERBURK of Sterlington, who was retiring after 33 years in the teaching profession. Pat was assisted by her daughter, LYN and KIM, and son MINOR, who presented their grandmother with a silver tray engraved with the dates of her career.

Arriving guests noted on the credenza in the foyer a large arrangement of pink roses in an Oriental bowl, flanked by antique pink lustres. In the den, Pat used magnolia blossoms with natural foliage on the hearth, with a bouquet of daisies in the bookcase. Coral roses in a hand-painted bowl graced the living room.

The dining room table was centered with a silver platter holding two magnolia blossoms. White candles burned in silver holders at each side. Those present included Evie's sister, ROBERTA HERR, and another special guest, SALLIE RICHARDSON, also retiring this year.

The menu served to twelve included shrimp-stuffed tomato, asparagus with Hollandaise, congealed salad, crescent rolls, and for dessert, apple crisp a la mode with coffee.

Former Monroyans in town this week were EVA and FRED BECKETT and their daughter MARY EVE, of Norman, Oklahoma. They arrived Tuesday to be guests of MARY LEE and DOC MILAM until tomorrow. On Friday Eva went to Tallulah, where she was the guest of MRS. E. L. WALLACE for the Blanchard family reunion. Eleven brothers and sisters and various relatives and descendants attended the weekend gathering.

Mary Eve has done us all proud with her activities at the University of Oklahoma. A freshman there, she was elected "pledge of the month" for February, selected from the 42 pledges of Delta Delta Delta. She has recently been named as assistant treasurer of the collegiate chapter to serve for the coming year, when she will be living in the sorority house.

In addition to her work with her sorority, Mary Eve has served on a number of committees for the university: OU "Howdy Week"; Baptist Student union; Campus Chest; Student Senate Voting, Dad's Day; "Engine Show" tickets; and Sooner Scandals. She has been appointed Administrative Yearbook staff for the coming co-ordinator on the Sooner Yearbook staff for the coming year.

Many Colors For Landscape

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, want color this summer or fall in your landscape, there are many lovely plants of different colors from which you may make your choice. The hisbiscus will give color in summer and until frost. They are noted for their showy, single or double flowers. Plant them in full sun and add humus to light sandy soils. Fertilize monthly and water during drouth periods.

Copper plants (acalypha) are bronze or copper colored and thrive in full sun. They grow relatively fast. These plants will give color in summer and fall.

Chrysanthemums are considered the "queen" of all fall flowers. They may be planted through mid-June or even a little later. For garden mums growing in the landscape now, pinch the top out to encourage lower, compost plants with many flowers.

Some other good fall plants are coleus, the candlestick, or candelabra tree and Joseph's Coat or alternanthera. All of these will add color to the landscape from late summer through the fall.

Fall is the season when people enjoy being outdoors for longer periods than any other season of the year, so now is the time to provide plants in the landscape for unusual color.

Ouachita Parish is joining the nation in the celebration of the 31st anniversary of "June Dairy Month." June Dairy Month now serves as a timely reminder to the housewife to serve nutritious dairy foods to her family all the year long.

Milk has been termed the "protective food" and rightly—milk contains so many important nutrients so essential to all ages.

Milk is our richest source of calcium which is so essential for formation of bones and teeth, necessary for blood clotting, responsible for concentration and relaxation of the muscles.

In addition to calcium there are many other nutrients as protein, riboflavin, vitamins, minerals, carbohydrates and fats. Riboflavin is a water soluble vitamin and is found in the non-fat portion of the milk. It is essential for healthy skin and nerves.

You, Mrs. Homemaker, need to include milk in the diet of all the members of your family. No other food can serve so well as the foundation of an adequate diet, because no other reinforces it at so many points.

FREEZING BULLETIN

It's time for all homemakers to get busy filling the food freezer. Are you aware that the latest research gives a new time on freezing foods. The new in freezing is to start counting time as soon as the vegetable is put in the boiling water. You recall that we have been counting time after the water started boiling after the vegetables had been added — so this is a time saver. If you have not received a freezer bulletin with this new information, then call our Agricultural Extension Office and a copy will be mailed to you. This is one of the free services of this office.

You will find directions for freezing all fruits and vegetables in this leaflet from freezing new irish potatoes and french fries, also peas, okra, beans, mustard, eggplant, corn and the many other vegetables grown in this area.

Peaches, one of our favorite fruits, will be on the plentiful list real soon and you, Mrs. Homemaker, will want to put some in your freezer for later use. The directions are in this same leaflet. You may use either the syrup or dry pack method — both are given. So be sure to get this leaflet and if you follow the directions they are a result of research, not guess work.

A college education seldom hurts individuals if they are willing to learn a little something after graduation.

Weed Costs Run High In Nation

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Yes, there is a weed society of America, and more than 600 persons interested in controls, including university and government experts, attended the annual meeting in Washington recently.

Speakers reported that total losses due to weeds and the cost of control were higher than for either insect or plant diseases.

And a bit of intelligence worth repeating to all gardeners is that addition of fertilizer without weed control often will cause crop yield reduction because of the tremendous response of weed to the feeding.

From the New England Wild Flower Society's Notes:

The foliage of American holly withers fast indoors, but if you split the stems, let them stand in warmish water overnight and then keep them in a vase with water, they have been known to last indoors from Christmas to Easter.

When you are buying vegetable seeds and plants, look for varieties resistant to disease.

The New York State Agricultural Experiment Station has some recommendations, including:

The new tomato named New Yorker, resistant to verticillium wilt, earlier ripening than Fireball, with slightly smaller fruit. An improved resistant strain of Fireball also has been developed. Varieties maturing later with resistance to verticillium wilt are Galaxy, Heinz 1350 and Superman, with the latter two also resistant to Fusarium Wilt. The variety Gardener, although not resistant to these diseases, often is less affected by blossom - end rot and blotchy ripening than many varieties.

With cucumbers, mosaic and scab are common problems. Mosaic causes vines to yellow and die prematurely, or the fruit may become mottled. Scab primarily affects the fruit. Resistant varieties recommended include Tablegreen 65 and Marketmore. Tablegreen 65 has vigorous vines and is resistant to powdery mildew. The fruit is dark green.

For a supply of cucumbers steadily through the season, plant a few hills of early maturing Marketmore, or another early variety such as Challenger (resistant to mosaic but not scab) and two or three weeks later a few of Tablegreen 65.

EARLY VARIETY

An early variety of sweet corn suggested is Seneca Star, which matures between extra-early Seneca Explorer and older, early varieties. It produces uniform ears eight inches long. Silver Queen is a late maturing, white variety of good quality.

Eggplant also is subject to verticillium wilt and the Experiment Station reports there are no resistant varieties. Recommended is Early Beauty Hybrid, which matures about two weeks before other common varieties. Some fruits may be harvested before the wilt attacks. Early Beauty Hybrid produces long, slim, purple fruit over a long season. Good late maturing varieties of eggplant include Black Magic Hybrid, Burpee Hybrid, Black Beauty and Superhybrid.

Southern Gardener

Plan Fall Gardens Now

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Our fall gardens can be a real success if we plan for them in late spring. Almost everybody has some favorite chrysanthemums which they dote on in their autumn garden, but most of us forget to divide and reset chrysanthemums before it is too late in the summer to get much out of them in October.

Take up chrysanthemums, pinch them way back and replant them in large enough groups to create good sized masses of color when they bloom. Little dabs of color do not excite the eye. If you do not wish to plant so many chrysanthemums in the flower garden or beds, then dig up some longish beds in front of shrubbery, enrich the soil and plant masses of your favorite colors in the new beds. Groups of a dozen together of the fall flowering colchicums can be planted here and there in front of the chrysanthemums to bloom in September.

BIGGEST, SHOWIEST

The colchicum called The Giant is the biggest and showiest one of all. It flowers sometimes as early as late August, but usually in September and October. The very earliest colchicum is Violet Queen, and the latest one is Lilac Wonder. Even the seed stores are carrying colchicums these days, but you will see the advertisements for them from the bulb companies by July and August. Just leave the space for these big fat corms and plant some annuals in them to bloom until August - September.

As we have mentioned before in the column, the bulb people seem to be treating colchicum corms with gas to hold back the flowers in transit. Up until the past few years, colchicums arrived with part of them in bloom in their sacks. Lately, however, I have soaked them overnight to awaken them, and even then they came out slowly, so you may wind up with the purple colchicums in bloom in front of your chrysanthemums.

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS

If you do not have the Japanese anemones in your late summer and fall garden, you are missing something especially fine. Order some of the named varieties from perennial dealers now. Japanese anemone are not bulbous plants but medium sized perennials. They will come to you in pots and will appreciate about one - third to a half shade. The flowers look as if they were made out of china. Once you have them, you will never live another season without them!

The same things that we said about chrysanthemums apply to the fall asters. Our gardens are full of too crowded and starving asters right now that can be transplanted into good soil to make a brilliant show this fall. The English have the same asters and get a brilliant show from them each autumn simply by dividing them and transplanting them yearly.

Tourist Year Promoted By Stamp

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

As summer weather approaches, people everywhere are thinking about vacations and traveling. Since this year has been designated as "International Tourist Year," the United Nations is helping to promote the tourist spirit by using a new stamp on June 19 to mark the occasion.

The new stamp, designed by David Dewhurst of the United States, shows luggage labels and tags attached to the United Nations seal. The words "United Nations" and "International Tourist Year" appear in English and French. There are two values, 5 cents and 15 cents.

The U.N.'s Economic and Social Council recommended the issuance of this stamp based on a request by the International Union of Official Travel Organizations representing more than 100 countries. The objective is to encourage people from various nations to visit other countries and perhaps foster a better understanding of different creeds and cultures.

First-day covers are available by sending requests to United Nations Postal Administration, United Nations, N.Y. Remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed must be enclosed in either money order or certified check. The outside envelope must be clearly marked "First Day Cover — ITY."

The Republic of China has issued two new stamps to commemorate the "First Anniversary of President Chiang Kai-shek's Fourth Term Inauguration," reports the World Wide Philatelic Agency. The stamps have denominations of $1 and $4 (Taiwan currency) and feature similar portraits of President Chiang Kai-shek in inauguration dress. Each stamp has a different decorative border.

Garden Center Notes

Show Tribute To Cities

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The Twin City Garden Council of Monroe, West Monroe, presented designs for the Fifth District Garden Center program last Wednesday, in "A Tribute To Cleanest Cities." The program was quite timely since the district winners have been announced as Monroe and Columbia.

There was so much enthusiasm shown during the past months throughout the fifth district that the Twin City Council dedicated its program to all of the cities taking a part. All who take a part in this type contest are really winners because you just can't lose by trying to better the community by cleaning and beautifying. Personal pride has been taken throughout the many towns and cities in home yards, church yards, building sites, schools, and many other locations that are viewed by the general public. We'll never be satisfied with being lax toward this all important endeavor. We should become more and more conscious of litter not only at home, but as we travel from one state to another. This is a national contest that is sweeping every nook and corner of our country.

The first design by Mrs. J. Tolar, made of all dried materials, vertical in pattern, was entitled, "Tall and Trim." Emphasis on "trim" is now prevalent because of our present efforts in the Cleanest City Contest. The tall stately design stressed dignity, unity and harmony of color and texture.

Mrs. J. E. Braley made the next design, also using all dried materials, entitled, "Preserve Our Natural Beauty." Roadside and garden materials, dried, were used in this lovely "Hogarth" design depicting orderly path throughout, as in the route through our clean cities. Dock, millet, dried celosia (orange) and seed pods, tan hyacinth florets, and wood roses, combined together in a tall wooden chalice, formed this pleasing design.

FRESH MATERIALS

Just opposite this design, Mrs. Braley made another, using all fresh materials in abundance of color from garden flowers. Massed together were daylilies, with buds, roses (pink and orange), orange and deep orange-red daylilies, and purple salvia in a green compote container. This design would be excellent for the church altar or club room. The title, "The Judges Are Coming, the Judges Are Coming," seemed quite right for this design because of the massed abundance of beauty, color, and textures all combined neatly and harmoniously — and at the moment we are all busy getting ready for the state judging of The Cleanest City on June 8. "Make Your Region The Loveliest Ever," or "Myrtle," could be another appropriate title.

NOTICE BEAUTY

Children notice beauty and are drawn to it. It is such a natural thing for a child to love beauty and harmony. They should be allowed to be brought up in this surrounding where they will find happiness and creativity. The next design featured a small painting by a 12-year-old girl. This was the picture of a small home with a lovely garden filled with flowers seen beyond a garden arbor. The neatness of the garden, and the harmony of color in the array of garden flowers appealed to the youth who tried to capture what she saw and felt in her painting. Using the picture as the focal interest, daylilies and Burford holly formed a frame around one side. The picture was mounted on a small stand, then placed on an irregular wheat colored base. The daylilies, also humble garden flowers, seemed to give proper accent to the simple beauty of the cottage. This design was a tribute to Columbia, winner in the District V judging. The picture reminds one of the art festival held once a year in Columbia. Mary Louise Tolar, now a junior in college, was the young artist.

Mrs. E. M. Baber made a lovely design entitled "Cleanliness Is Next to Godliness," a tribute to our lovely churches, or other public buildings and civic grounds. White glads formed the large triangle design in a green compote container. White crinum lilies and gardenias formed the focal accent. A drape of black felt as a base added good balance and contrast.

Many Colors For Landscape

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, want color this summer or fall in your landscape, there are many lovely plants of different colors from which you may make your choice. The hisbiscus will give color in summer and until frost. They are noted for their showy, single or double flowers. Plant them in full sun and add humus to light sandy soils. Fertilize monthly and water during drouth periods.

Copper plants (acalypha) are bronze or copper colored and thrive in full sun. They grow relatively fast. These plants will give color in summer and fall.

Chrysanthemums are considered the "queen" of all fall flowers. They may be planted through mid-June or even a little later. For garden mums growing in the landscape now, pinch the top out to encourage lower, compost plants with many flowers.

Some other good fall plants are coleus, the candlestick, or candelabra tree and Joseph's Coat or alternanthera. All of these will add color to the landscape from late summer through the fall.

Fall is the season when people enjoy being outdoors for longer periods than any other season of the year, so now is the time to provide plants in the landscape for unusual color.

Ouachita Parish is joining the nation in the celebration of the 31st anniversary of "June Dairy Month." June Dairy Month now serves as a timely reminder to the housewife to serve nutritious dairy foods to her family all the year long.

Milk has been termed the "protective food" and rightly—milk contains so many important nutrients so essential to all ages.

Milk is our richest source of calcium which is so essential for formation of bones and teeth, necessary for blood clotting, responsible for concentration and relaxation of the muscles.

In addition to calcium there are many other nutrients as protein, riboflavin, vitamins, minerals, carbohydrates and fats. Riboflavin is a water soluble vitamin and is found in the non-fat portion of the milk. It is essential for healthy skin and nerves.

You, Mrs. Homemaker, need to include milk in the diet of all the members of your family. No other food can serve so well as the foundation of an adequate diet, because no other reinforces it at so many points.

FREEZING BULLETIN

It's time for all homemakers to get busy filling the food freezer. Are you aware that the latest research gives a new time on freezing foods. The new in freezing is to start counting time as soon as the vegetable is put in the boiling water. You recall that we have been counting time after the water started boiling after the vegetables had been added — so this is a time saver. If you have not received a freezer bulletin with this new information, then call our Agricultural Extension Office and a copy will be mailed to you. This is one of the free services of this office.

You will find directions for freezing all fruits and vegetables in this leaflet from freezing new irish potatoes and french fries, also peas, okra, beans, mustard, eggplant, corn and the many other vegetables grown in this area.

Peaches, one of our favorite fruits, will be on the plentiful list real soon and you, Mrs. Homemaker, will want to put some in your freezer for later use. The directions are in this same leaflet. You may use either the syrup or dry pack method — both are given. So be sure to get this leaflet and if you follow the directions they are a result of research, not guess work.

Weed Costs Run High In Nation

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Yes, there is a weed society of America, and more than 600 persons interested in controls, including university and government experts, attended the annual meeting in Washington recently.

Speakers reported that total losses due to weeds and the cost of control were higher than for either insect or plant diseases.

And a bit of intelligence worth repeating to all gardeners is that addition of fertilizer without weed control often will cause crop yield reduction because of the tremendous response of weed to the feeding.

From the New England Wild Flower Society's Notes:

The foliage of American holly withers fast indoors, but if you split the stems, let them stand in warmish water overnight and then keep them in a vase with water, they have been known to last indoors from Christmas to Easter.

When you are buying vegetable seeds and plants, look for varieties resistant to disease.

The New York State Agricultural Experiment Station has some recommendations, including:

The new tomato named New Yorker, resistant to verticillium wilt, earlier ripening than Fireball, with slightly smaller fruit. An improved resistant strain of Fireball also has been developed. Varieties maturing later with resistance to verticillium wilt are Galaxy, Heinz 1350 and Superman, with the latter two also resistant to Fusarium Wilt. The variety Gardener, although not resistant to these diseases, often is less affected by blossom - end rot and blotchy ripening than many varieties.

With cucumbers, mosaic and scab are common problems. Mosaic causes vines to yellow and die prematurely, or the fruit may become mottled. Scab primarily affects the fruit. Resistant varieties recommended include Tablegreen 65 and Marketmore. Tablegreen 65 has vigorous vines and is resistant to powdery mildew. The fruit is dark green.

For a supply of cucumbers steadily through the season, plant a few hills of early maturing Marketmore, or another early variety such as Challenger (resistant to mosaic but not scab) and two or three weeks later a few of Tablegreen 65.

EARLY VARIETY

An early variety of sweet corn suggested is Seneca Star, which matures between extra-early Seneca Explorer and older, early varieties. It produces uniform ears eight inches long. Silver Queen is a late maturing, white variety of good quality.

Eggplant also is subject to verticillium wilt and the Experiment Station reports there are no resistant varieties. Recommended is Early Beauty Hybrid, which matures about two weeks before other common varieties. Some fruits may be harvested before the wilt attacks. Early Beauty Hybrid produces long, slim, purple fruit over a long season. Good late maturing varieties of eggplant include Black Magic Hybrid, Burpee Hybrid, Black Beauty and Superhybrid.

Southern Gardener

Plan Fall Gardens Now

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Our fall gardens can be a real success if we plan for them in late spring. Almost everybody has some favorite chrysanthemums which they dote on in their autumn garden, but most of us forget to divide and reset chrysanthemums before it is too late in the summer to get much out of them in October.

Take up chrysanthemums, pinch them way back and replant them in large enough groups to create good sized masses of color when they bloom. Little dabs of color do not excite the eye. If you do not wish to plant so many chrysanthemums in the flower garden or beds, then dig up some longish beds in front of shrubbery, enrich the soil and plant masses of your favorite colors in the new beds. Groups of a dozen together of the fall flowering colchicums can be planted here and there in front of the chrysanthemums to bloom in September.

BIGGEST, SHOWIEST

The colchicum called The Giant is the biggest and showiest one of all. It flowers sometimes as early as late August, but usually in September and October. The very earliest colchicum is Violet Queen, and the latest one is Lilac Wonder. Even the seed stores are carrying colchicums these days, but you will see the advertisements for them from the bulb companies by July and August. Just leave the space for these big fat corms and plant some annuals in them to bloom until August - September.

As we have mentioned before in the column, the bulb people seem to be treating colchicum corms with gas to hold back the flowers in transit. Up until the past few years, colchicums arrived with part of them in bloom in their sacks. Lately, however, I have soaked them overnight to awaken them, and even then they came out slowly, so you may wind up with the purple colchicums in bloom in front of your chrysanthemums.

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS

If you do not have the Japanese anemones in your late summer and fall garden, you are missing something especially fine. Order some of the named varieties from perennial dealers now. Japanese anemone are not bulbous plants but medium sized perennials. They will come to you in pots and will appreciate about one - third to a half shade. The flowers look as if they were made out of china. Once you have them, you will never live another season without them!

The same things that we said about chrysanthemums apply to the fall asters. Our gardens are full of too crowded and starving asters right now that can be transplanted into good soil to make a brilliant show this fall. The English have the same asters and get a brilliant show from them each autumn simply by dividing them and transplanting them yearly.

Tourist Year Promoted By Stamp

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

As summer weather approaches, people everywhere are thinking about vacations and traveling. Since this year has been designated as "International Tourist Year," the United Nations is helping to promote the tourist spirit by using a new stamp on June 19 to mark the occasion.

The new stamp, designed by David Dewhurst of the United States, shows luggage labels and tags attached to the United Nations seal. The words "United Nations" and "International Tourist Year" appear in English and French. There are two values, 5 cents and 15 cents.

The U.N.'s Economic and Social Council recommended the issuance of this stamp based on a request by the International Union of Official Travel Organizations representing more than 100 countries. The objective is to encourage people from various nations to visit other countries and perhaps foster a better understanding of different creeds and cultures.

First-day covers are available by sending requests to United Nations Postal Administration, United Nations, N.Y. Remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed must be enclosed in either money order or certified check. The outside envelope must be clearly marked "First Day Cover — ITY."

The Republic of China has issued two new stamps to commemorate the "First Anniversary of President Chiang Kai-shek's Fourth Term Inauguration," reports the World Wide Philatelic Agency. The stamps have denominations of $1 and $4 (Taiwan currency) and feature similar portraits of President Chiang Kai-shek in inauguration dress. Each stamp has a different decorative border.

'Student Power' Now Cry On Many Of Nation's Campuses

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Robert Cohen jutted his black beard, clenched his fist, and said:

"We mean to erect a socialistic society on this campus."

We were sitting in a pizza-and-beer joint called Lorenzo's at 813 University Ave., across from the University of Wisconsin campus. The talk was about what was happening on the campus—at Wisconsin and in college towns all over the country where zealots such as Cohen are leading student protest into new and, to many of their elders, frightening channels.

"Student power is now equated to black power," Cohen said. "We want student confrontations in which we tell the university there is no need to negotiate; we will not negotiate."

Rain drummed heavily on University Ave. Inside Lorenzo's the humid aura of toasting cheese and cooking sausage hung over the booths. At a table nearby a girl's skirt had ascended steadily from two inches above her knees to beyond stocking top level. But Cohen was not looking at the girl. His eyes drifted to the window through which could be seen, across the street, a fence on which someone had scrawled in foot-high letters, "God is an infintely perfect teeny-bopper."

VENERATE MALCOLM X

"Malcom X," Cohen suddenly was saying, "was one of the greatest men produced in this generation."

Student power. Black power. Malcolm X. Campus talk, 1967.

Cohen is a 23-year-old volcano of words from Levittown, Pa., who does graduate study in philosophy when he is not talking about the serious business of being a radical at the University of Wisconsin. Or getting arrested for such causes as protesting the use of napalm in Vietnam, or storming the gates of Truax Air Force Base outside Madison.

He also is an archetype of a new direction of campus protest in the United States. Its symptoms are a flagging fervor for the old causes of civil rights and opposition to the war in Vietnam. Its thrust is a "confrontation" cry for what Cohen and his friends call "student power."

A definition of the rallying cry isn't easy to come by. "Students as students," was one answer given, apparently meaning "students are a class of people unto themselves, responsible only to themselves."

It seems to boil down to the old proposition that universities should run universities and students should run themselves. It can find expression in endorsing legalized marijuana, as did the Daily Cardinal, the Wisconsin student newspaper. It can be expressed in a "so what?" attitude toward traditional sexual mores.

Movement Spreads

Student power advocates at Wisconsin and elsewhere need not be bearded Cohens pounding on the tables at Lorenzo's. Lately, they can be found in the fraternity and sorority houses where the clean cut kids are supposed to live.

Cohen's like, however, can be found on most American campuses. It so happens that he spreads his dogmas at a university where controversy is as traditional as the study of animal husbandry: where the right of a student to speak his mind is treasured more highly than a Big Ten football championship.

The University of Wisconsin has an enrollment of 29,591 and it has been a hotbed of one thing or another for decades. Its disputes have been stirred by the progressive crusades of Robert L. "Fighting Bob" Lafolette, Wisconsin's legendary governor and senator after the turn of the century, and by the Communist hunts of Wisconsin's equally-fabled Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy in the 1950's.

The university's character adds a special flavor to its controversies.

Last February, 400 students sat down in Bascom Hall, the school's hilltop administration building. They were protesting the presence on campus of job recruiters from Dow Chemical Co., which makes napalm. Seventeen students, Cohen included, were arrested. Two hundred other students announced they would not let University Chancellor Robben Fleming leave the building until the prisoners were released.

Fleming walked out anyway after three hours' negotiating with student leaders. Then he wrote a personal check for $1,470 to get the arrested students out of jail on bond. The students' cases are still pending and Fleming, who leaves Madison next fall to become president of the University of Michigan, has yet to get his money back.

Fleming warned then "We stand on the brink of Berkeley" —a reference to the University of California and its more uproarious student outbreaks.

State Sen. Gordon Roseleip, in one of his rare agreements with the chancellor, introduced a resolution in the legislature to disband the two organizations which brewed the Dow protests —the "new left" Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) and a campus political party called University Community Action (UCA).

On the bulletin boards of Bascom Hall and on a long fence along University Ave., some students have already put themselves on record about student life and interests at Wisconsin.

On the portico of Bascom, a rear-view photograph of a crouching nude woman was the eye catcher for an invitation to attend an "Angry Arts Festival" sponsored by the Committee to End the War in Vietnam, and featuring the "White Trash Blues Band."

Along the fence, the signs read "Is there life after birth?". . ."Nunnery girls are not prudes". . ."The war is good business; invest your son". . ."Legalize reality". . ."Fleming is on bananas (nice trip). . ."

Alarm Elders

Such manifestations disturb the legislators who keep watch on the university's appropriations and moral climate from their observation post in the capitol a mile from the campus.

No senator is more distressed than Roseleip, a Republican from the dairy country around Darlington. In the red carpeted antechamber of the Wisconsin Senate, Roseleip waved a copy of the Cardinal which contained Cohen's regular column, a lengthy, polysyllabic endeavor entitled: "From the Left Hip."

Roseleip punched his finger at the title and said, "See?—that's where he says he's left!"

Wordlessly, he held up a copy of "Connections," an off-campus Wisconsin version of the recent journalistic phenomenon called "The Underground Press." The particular issue of this bi-weekly tabloid devoted half its front page to a reclining, three-quarter front view of a nude woman wearing a gas mask.

The senator gave an eloquent sigh. He has used such evidence in a so-far successful campaign to bar Communist speakers from the university, to ban "new left" organizations, to investigate the Cardinal, and to generally force the university administration to crack down.

A World War II veteran and past president of the Wisconsin American Legion, Roseleip's tone could match that of many bewildered parents.

"What is wrong with some of our young people today? Why do they revolt against established ethical practices. . .? Why do they demonstrate on our college campuses for marijuana, free love, smut literature and other degenerate ideas?"

It may be that Roseleip doesn't know the half of it. In the rooming houses and rented homes where the protest that alarms these senators is fomented, the worst fears of Roseleip, to name one, would appear to be doubled.

In this underground atmosphere, communism is passe. "Pot" is better than beer. The $1,407 Fleming took out of his checking account is a "gesture without meaning."

The last is the opinion of Robert Gabriner, co-editor of "Communications" and one of the more coherent of the movers and shakers in the world of the new left on the Wisconsin campus.

"The university is scared to hell of the students," he said. "They don't understand what we are."

If the university does not, Gabriner believes he does.

"The student no longer can give of himself by 'going south' and working for civil rights," he said. "The turning inward has begun. We will not be colonials, living by someone else's ground rules."

"The Soviet Union is almost as
The voice of Cohen is harsher.
bad as the United States," he says. "Vietnam is the greatest crime ever perpetuated—well, maybe some of the things the Nazis and the Communists did—but this is genocide."

Cohen has scorn of another stripe for the likes of Frank Emspak, a former Wisconsin student who headed a national coordinating committee which helped direct nation-wide anti-war protests from Madison two years ago and who was accused of being a Communist while he was at it.

"He is right wing," Cohen snorted. "The Du Bois Clubs are right wing. The Communists are right wing. They're old people who go on picnics. They have been passed by."

Amidst this toil and trouble, Chancellor Fleming keeps his cool.

In a talk with UPI, this smooth-faced, smooth-talking man of 50 whose hair is prematurely white agreed with Cohen and Gabriner that the students at Wisconsin and other universities are now demonstrating for themselves, and that they're going to keep it up.

"There is a definite change," Fleming said in almost an echo of Cohen. "It is a confrontation, in the students announcing what they are going to do and asking 'what are you going to do about it?' "

"The universities have learned to live with student protest," he said, and thereby delivered what could be the unkindest cut of all to the "confrontation" set. For life can be a little lonely on the far ceptance by the establishment can be lethal.

Barley Still Used To Measure Shoes

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Many things change but not the method of measuring shoes. Grains of barley were first used for this purpose in 14th century England, says Goodyear's Shoe Products Division, and they're still used today. 'Student Power' Now Cry On Many Of Nation's Campuses

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Robert Cohen jutted his black beard, clenched his fist, and said:

"We mean to erect a socialistic society on this campus."

We were sitting in a pizza-and-beer joint called Lorenzo's at 813 University Ave., across from the University of Wisconsin campus. The talk was about what was happening on the campus—at Wisconsin and in college towns all over the country where zealots such as Cohen are leading student protest into new and, to many of their elders, frightening channels.

"Student power is now equated to black power," Cohen said. "We want student confrontations in which we tell the university there is no need to negotiate; we will not negotiate."

Rain drummed heavily on University Ave. Inside Lorenzo's the humid aura of toasting cheese and cooking sausage hung over the booths. At a table nearby a girl's skirt had ascended steadily from two inches above her knees to beyond stocking top level. But Cohen was not looking at the girl. His eyes drifted to the window through which could be seen, across the street, a fence on which someone had scrawled in foot-high letters, "God is an infintely perfect teeny-bopper."

VENERATE MALCOLM X

"Malcom X," Cohen suddenly was saying, "was one of the greatest men produced in this generation."

Student power. Black power. Malcolm X. Campus talk, 1967.

Cohen is a 23-year-old volcano of words from Levittown, Pa., who does graduate study in philosophy when he is not talking about the serious business of being a radical at the University of Wisconsin. Or getting arrested for such causes as protesting the use of napalm in Vietnam, or storming the gates of Truax Air Force Base outside Madison.

He also is an archetype of a new direction of campus protest in the United States. Its symptoms are a flagging fervor for the old causes of civil rights and opposition to the war in Vietnam. Its thrust is a "confrontation" cry for what Cohen and his friends call "student power."

A definition of the rallying cry isn't easy to come by. "Students as students," was one answer given, apparently meaning "students are a class of people unto themselves, responsible only to themselves."

It seems to boil down to the old proposition that universities should run universities and students should run themselves. It can find expression in endorsing legalized marijuana, as did the Daily Cardinal, the Wisconsin student newspaper. It can be expressed in a "so what?" attitude toward traditional sexual mores.

Movement Spreads

Student power advocates at Wisconsin and elsewhere need not be bearded Cohens pounding on the tables at Lorenzo's. Lately, they can be found in the fraternity and sorority houses where the clean cut kids are supposed to live.

Cohen's like, however, can be found on most American campuses. It so happens that he spreads his dogmas at a university where controversy is as traditional as the study of animal husbandry; where the right of a student to speak his mind is treasured more highly than a Big Ten football championship.

The University of Wisconsin has an enrollment of 29,591 and it has been a hotbed of one thing or another for decades. Its disputes have been stirred by the progressive crusades of Robert L. "Fighting Bob" Lafolette, Wisconsin's legendary governor and senator after the turn of the century, and by the Communist hunts of Wisconsin's equally-fabled Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy in the 1950's.

The university's character adds a special flavor to its controversies.

Last February, 400 students sat down in Bascom Hall, the school's hilltop administration building. They were protesting the presence on campus of job recruiters from Dow Chemical Co., which makes napalm. Seventeen students, Cohen included, were arrested. Two hundred other students announced they would not let University Chancellor Robben Fleming leave the building until the prisoners were released.

Fleming walked out anyway after three hours' negotiating with student leaders. Then he wrote a personal check for $1,470 to get the arrested students out of jail on bond. The students' cases are still pending and Fleming, who leaves Madison next fall to become president of the University of Michigan, has yet to get his money back.

Fleming warned then "We stand on the brink of Berkeley" —a reference to the University of California and its more uproarious student outbreaks.

State Sen. Gordon Roseleip, in one of his rare agreements with the chancellor, introduced a resolution in the legislature to disband the two organizations which brewed the Dow protests —the "new left" Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) and a campus political party called University Community Action (UCA).

On the bulletin boards of Bascom Hall and on a long fence along University Ave., some students have already put themselves on record about student life and interests at Wisconsin.

On the portico of Bascom, a rear-view photograph of a crouching nude woman was the eye catcher for an invitation to attend an "Angry Arts Festival" sponsored by the Committee to End the War in Vietnam, and featuring the "White Trash Blues Band."

Along the fence, the signs read "Is there life after birth?". . ."Nunnery girls are not prudes". . ."The war is good business; invest your son". . ."Legalize reality". . ."Fleming is on bananas (nice trip). . ."

Alarm Elders

Such manifestations disturb the legislators who keep watch on the university's appropriations and moral climate from their observation post in the capitol a mile from the campus.

No senator is more distressed than Roseleip, a Republican from the dairy country around Darlington. In the red carpeted antechamber of the Wisconsin Senate, Roseleip waved a copy of the Cardinal which contained Cohen's regular column, a lengthy, polysyllabic endeavor entitled: "From the Left Hip."

Roseleip punched his finger at the title and said, "See?—that's where he says he's left!"

Wordlessly, he held up a copy of "Connections," an off-campus Wisconsin version of the recent journalistic phenomenon called "The Underground Press." The particular issue of this biweekly tabloid devoted half its front page to a reclining, three-quarter front view of a nude woman wearing a gas mask.

The senator gave an eloquent sigh. He has used such evidence in a so-far successful campaign to bar Communist speakers from the university, to ban "new left" organizations, to investigate the Cardinal, and to generally force the university administration to crack down.

A World War II veteran and past president of the Wisconsin American Legion, Roseleip's tone could match that of many bewildered parents.

"What is wrong with some of our young people today? Why do they revolt against established ethical practices. . .? Why do they demonstrate on our college campuses for marijuana, free love, smut literature and other degenerate ideas?"

It may be that Roseleip doesn't know the half of it. In the rooming houses and rented homes where the protest that alarms these senators is fomented, the worst fears of Roseleip, to name one, would appear to be doubled.

In this underground atmosphere, communism is passe. "Pot" is better than beer. The $1,407 Fleming took out of his checking account is a "gesture without meaning."

The last is the opinion of Robert Gabriner, co-editor of "Communications" and one of the more coherent of the movers and shakers in the world of the new left on the Wisconsin campus.

"The university is scared to hell of the students," he said. "They don't understand what we are."

If the university does not, Gabriner believes he does.

"The student no longer can give of himself by 'going south' and working for civil rights," he said. "The turning inward has begun. We will not be colonials, living by someone else's ground rules."

"The Soviet Union is almost as

The voice of Cohen is harsher. fringes of the new left and ac- bad as the United States," he says. "Vietnam is the greatest crime ever perpetuated—well, maybe some of the things the Nazis and the Communists did—but this is genocide."

Cohen has scorn of another stripe for the likes of Frank Emspak, a former Wisconsin student who headed a national coordinating committee which helped direct nation-wide anti-war protests from Madison two years ago and who was accused of being a Communist while he was at it.

"He is right wing," Cohen snorted. "The Du Bois Clubs are right wing. The Communists are right wing. They're old people who go on picnics. They have been passed by."

Amidst this toil and trouble, Chancellor Fleming keeps his cool.

In a talk with UPI, this smooth-faced, smooth-talking man of 50 whose hair is prematurely white agreed with Cohen and Gabriner that the students at Wisconsin and other universities are now demonstrating for themselves, and that they're going to keep it up.

"There is a definite change," Fleming said in almost an echo of Cohen. "It is a confrontation, in the students announcing what they are going to do and asking 'what are you going to do about it?' "

"The universities have learned to live with student protest," he said, and thereby delivered what could be the unkindest cut of all to the "confrontation" set. For life can be a little lonely on the far ceptance by the establishment can be lethal.

Rev. Munyon And Wife To Church Here

The Rev. and Mrs. LeRoy Munyon of Camdenton, Mo., will begin a three-month's interim ministry with St. John's Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) on Forsythe Ave., today.

The pulpit at St. John's Church was left vacant early in May by the death of the Rev. R. T. Watson. His widow died several days later.

The Rev. Mr. Munyon served in an interim capacity some time ago at the First Christian Church of Monroe when the Rev. John Stewart was called to another pastorate. He also was serving in an interim capacity at St. John's when the late Rev. Mr. Watson became pastor of the new congregation.

MANY ASSIGNMENTS

This assignment is the Munyons' 18th interim in Louisiana, Texas and Missouri since their retirement from the active ministry in June, 1957.

The Rev. Mr. Munyon attended Texas Christian University, where he was ordained, and Drake University where he received bachelor and master of art degrees, majoring in religion, sociology and philosophy.

He was chaplain of the 306th Cavalry and 49th Field Artillery during World War I, and was graduated from the First Chaplain's Training School at Fort Monroe, Va., in 1917. He held pastorates and served as general evangelist in Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and California for several years. He served as chaplain, athletic director and librarian of the Missouri Penal Institution's during the administration of Governors Park, Stark and Donnelly.

Mrs. Munyon has wide experience in general church leadership on local, district and state levels. Her activities include supervision of women's work, religious education, ecumenical relations, youth programs, secretarial duties and social engagements.

Rev. and Mrs. Munyon have two daughters, Mrs. Bill Jaynes of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Joe Reiter of Springfield, Mo., and four grandchildren.

During this tenure in Monroe they will be living at the church parsonage, 2318 Racine Drive.

Church Group Stresses More Regard For Play

NEW YORK (AP) — Christians need to have more regard for play, and less for work.

That's the conclusion of a three-year study carried out by a special commission of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

"We should emphasize play because there is so much in our intellectual atmosphere that is destructive of the play spirit," the report says.

It adds that the "Gospel element" which needs to be pointed up may be summarized by this prescription: "Relax, don't always be building bridges."

The study was made in an effort to assess new conditions arising through mounting production requiring less human labor, resulting in increasing leisure. It was aimed to bring Biblical perspectives to bear on the situation.

Up to now, the Protestant ethic has "glorified economic labor" and sometimes has appeared "to be more of a commercial ideology than a Christian doctrine of man," the report says.

MENTAL FURNITURE

"Part of our mental furniture is that 'every man should work for what he gets.' The man who lives off the labors of another is judged guilty of the sin of sloth; he is more than unclean; he is somehow less than a man."

Such assumptions "are a part of our thought-life," the report adds. "One tends to suffer guilt feelings when he is idle."

However, the findings stress that "neither toil nor compensated labor is glorified by Scripture as the ultimate spiritual necessity. God's gift of partnership is not a sentence to eternal drudgery, neither is the pay check the chief end of man."

In fact, the Scriptures themselves "are playful" in spirit, and see experiences as "worthwhile in themselves," without their being productive of goods or income, the report says.

"The ideal man of the Bible was the leisured man. For him leisure was not simply 'time off.' He was a man of freedom—free to choose his activity. His choice was most often to pursue truth and knowledge, especially of God," the report adds.

PRODUCTION NEEDS

In the middle 20th century, it is pointed out, fewer people are needed to supply agricultural and other needs, and predictions are that eventually 10 per cent of the populace can perform all the work needed for the physical welfare of all people.

"The Christian church is called upon to speak about 'play' as a crucial element in the leisure of liberation" and "to broaden its understanding of leisure beyond that which justifies leisure only as the producer of a desired end—a product."

Ways are needed by which "the qualities of play can endow work as well as permit work to endow play." But to achieve that "the scales must be weighted in favor of play because we have so glorified productive work as not to be able to understand a free and fully mature humanity."

The need was seen for more recognition of the value of doing things simply "for the sake of beauty, joy and the fullness of living. The mystics, the romanticists, and the poets have seen this playful spirit in Christianity in a way that the utilitarian West often has not."

Belongings Of Church Moved Often In Vietnam

TRUNG GIO, Vietnam (AP) — Once again the church bells and statues of the Virgin Mary are on the move as Father Phan Van Co's parish tries to dodge the worst of the Vietnam war.

For the 1,000 members of Father Co's Roman Catholic flock, this is the fourth such move since the parish elected to flee North Vietnam following the Communist takeover there.

In 1954 the move was motivated by a hatred of the Communists and a hope for religious freedom. The latest move was simply flight from almost certain death and destruction.

The parish located just below the demilitarized zone was caught between American and Viet Cong artillery and mortars that dueled daily for control of a Communist infiltration route into South Vietnam.

When U.S. 175mm artillery was moved into Gio Linh and began firing into the zone and further north, the Communists reacted by moving mortars just outside the Catholic hamlets and cutting loose with their own barrages.

HEAVY SHELLING

The Americans fired back and in one three-week period, Father Co said, 2,000 shells fell in and around the hamlets of his parishioners.

Again it was decided to move, this time further south and west to Cam Lo where the Marines have units stationed.

The villagers packed up and government trucks hauled their belongings to the new area. They took their tin roofs and some other building materials to get quick shelter from the monsoon rains.

Father Co says the Marines are passing out enough food to his flock and that none is going hungry.

"We hope and believe that the Americans will help build the new villages," Father Co says.

The land around Cam Lo is not as good as the fertile paddies the parishioners were forced to give up around Gio Linh.

HAD RICE, HOMES

"The people were not poor there. They had lots of rice and good homes. Now we must start again. Now we have nothing," Father Co said.

The new land is not suitable for growing rice, the staple of the Vietnamese diet. But it will produce vegetables and somehow the peasants will manage.

But some things will take much time and effort to replace.

Left behind were nine churches, five schools and five medical clinics.

Confident Living Daily Formula

It Is Bad When You Get Mad

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

According to tradition a man approached Mohammed and asked of the prophet a suggestion for spiritual benefit. "Do not get angry," Mohammed replied. Thinking the prophet had misunderstood the question the man repeated it. Again Mohammed answered, "Do not get angry."

Anger is one of the trickiest personal problems. Folklore and religious teachings of all peoples are full of warnings about its bad effects. "Anger is momentary madness," wrote the Roman poet Horace, "so control your passion or it will control you." Will Rogers cracked: "People who fly into a rage always make a bad landing." What all these people are saying is "It's bad to get mad."

PEALE

Anger of the slow-burning variety, commonly known as resentment, sometimes does more damage than do fits of violent temper. Easier to conceal, oftentimes hiding in the unconscious, it is harder to come to grips with and difficult to cure. Dr. John Ellis Large relates an interesting case of smoldering resentment.

George had become quite a problem to his wife. He was irritable, irascible, critical of everybody, always out of sorts. His state of mind affected his health, and he suffered from nervous tension — got so he took a dozen kinds of pills. George was not doing well in business, either, and others were being advanced ahead of him.

BOSS CONCERNED

George's boss, also concerned, told Sara that her husband was contentious, hard to get along with, downright cranky. He said, "I hope you can do something with him."

So Sara tried to get a few thoughts across to her husband. But he responded, "Get off my neck! Everybody else is on my neck. Now you've climbed on. Is that the way a wife is supposed to act?"

The troubled woman then went to see Dr. Large. "I'm in trouble. I have a real problem — my husband." And she told him how things were.

"Stop talking to him about himself," Dr. Large advised her. "Don't nag him, don't pester him. Lay off. Just love him. But that won't be enough. Your husband's trouble is deep-seated. We must try to reach the disorder in his basic attitudes. What are George's sleeping habits?"

"He tosses most of the night but about five a.m. falls into a deep sound sleep."

Sara was then given what seemed strange advice. She was told to awaken at the time her husband went into deep sleep, and to work mentally and prayerfully to project creative thoughts into George's deep unconscious. In thought she was to picture this man as peaceful and free of tension; she was to visualize him as affable and friendly in his relationships. This procedure was to be followed daily until a change in the man's attitudes was noted.

AWAKE AT FIVE

So this devoted wife got herself awake at five o'clock every morning and followed directions. Weeks went by without any sign that George felt different in any way. Then one day he said, "Wonder how come everybody at the office is so much nicer than they used to be? They must have begun to realize how badly they'd been treating me."

Some weeks later the boss called George in and informed him, "I'm making you a division manager."

George was astonished. "But why?" he involuntarily blurted out.

"Because of the way you've changed," the boss said. "I've never seen a more remarkable change in a man. You're cooperative and agreeable. You act happy and you even seem enthusiastic. You are no longer so tense and on edge."

That evening when George told his wife the good news he added wonderingly, "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform . . ."

Sara merely said, "And how!"

An angry, irritable disposition can operate to rob a person of success and happiness. You cannot overcome anger by merely telling yourself that you won't be angry. Nor is it necessarily required that someone else project serene throughts into your subconscious. You can build such thoughts into your own consciousness by affirming your ability to exercise emotional control until your mind accepts the fact that you are no longer going to let anger harm you.

It's bad to get mad. Bad for whom? You!

COMPERE COTTAGE has been in use at the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe since June 9, 1925 when the child care agency moved from Lake Charles. The one-story addition to the building was built several years ago.

Baptist Home Located In Monroe 42 Years

The Louisiana Baptist Children's Home, in its 68th year of helping children, will mark its forty - second anniversary at its Monroe location June 9, having moved from Lake Charles to the present site in 1925.

State Baptists began their child care program in 1899 with the enrollment of four children in the Protestant Orphanage in Baton Rouge. In 1903, after being temporarily located at Keatchie in DeSoto Parish, the Home was moved to Lake Charles. Inadequate land area there prompted the move to Monroe.

FIVE COTTAGES

When the children and "matrons" arrived in Monroe by train 42 years ago, five cottages had been provided for them by W. E. Compere, J. E. Smitherman, Guy Oakes, the Mary Goss Charities and citizens of Monroe. Since then five more cottages have been erected as well as several other buildings necessary to the operation of the agency. The Monroe campus measures 118 acres and fronts on Highway 80. The Home also owns a 514-acre cattle and sheep farm located six miles east of the campus.

SUPERINTENDENT THEN

F. C. (Daddy) Flowers was Home superintendent when the move was made to Monroe. Others who have held this position since include M. E. Weaver, L. M. Cole, R. C. Buckner, B. F. Wallace, T. W. Gayer, D. C. Black, and Wade B. East, who has served since August, 1962.

The Home, which is licensed to provide institutional services and foster care, helped 449 children from throughout Louisiana during the last calendar year. Youngsters from 29 parishes are currently living in the Home. A Board of Trustees, composed of 15 pastors and laymen elected annually by the Louisiana Baptist Convention, sets policies for the agency.

Church Group Stresses More Regard For Play

NEW YORK (AP) — Christians need to have more regard for play, and less for work.

That's the conclusion of a three-year study carried out by a special commission of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A.

"We should emphasize play because there is so much in our intellectual atmosphere that is destructive of the play spirit," the report says.

It adds that the "Gospel element" which needs to be pointed up may be summarized by this prescription: "Relax; don't always be building bridges."

The study was made in an effort to assess new conditions arising through mounting production requiring less human labor, resulting in increasing leisure. It was aimed to bring Biblical perspectives to bear on the situation.

Up to now, the Protestant ethic has "glorified economic labor" and sometimes has appeared "to be more of a commercial ideology than a Christian doctrine of man," the report says.

MENTAL FURNITURE

"Part of our mental furniture is that 'every man should work for what he gets.' The man who lives off the labors of another is judged guilty of the sin of sloth; he is more than unclean; he is somehow less than a man."

Such assumptions "are a part of our thought-life," the report adds. "One tends to suffer guilt feelings when he is idle."

However, the findings stress that "neither toil nor compensated labor is glorified by Scripture as the ultimate spiritual necessity. God's gift of partnership is not a sentence to eternal drudgery; neither is the pay check the chief end of man."

In fact, the Scriptures themselves "are playful" in spirit, and see experiences as "worthwhile in themselves," without their being productive of goods or income, the report says.

"The ideal man of the Bible was the leisured man. For him leisure was not simply 'time off.' He was a man of freedom—free to choose his activity. His choice was most often to pursue truth and knowledge, especially of God," the report adds.

PRODUCTION NEEDS

In the middle 20th century, it is pointed out, fewer people are needed to supply agricultural and other needs, and predictions are that eventually 10 per cent of the populace can perform all the work needed for the physical welfare of all people.

"The Christian church is called upon to speak about 'play' as a crucial element in the leisure of liberation" and "to broaden its understanding of leisure beyond that which justifies leisure only as the producer of a desired end—a product."

Ways are needed by which "the qualities of play can endow work as well as permit work to endow play." But to achieve that "the scales must be weighted in favor of play because we have so glorified productive work as not to be able to understand a free and fully mature humanity."

The need was seen for more recognition of the value of doing things simply "for the sake of beauty, joy and the fullness of living. The mystics, the romanticists, and the poets have seen this playful spirit in Christianity in a way that the utilitarian West often has not."

Belongings Of Church Moved Often In Vietnam

TRUNG GIO, Vietnam (AP) — Once again the church bells and statues of the Virgin Mary are on the move as Father Phan Van Co's parish tries to dodge the worst of the Vietnam war.

For the 1,000 members of Father Co's Roman Catholic flock, this is the fourth such move since the parish elected to flee North Vietnam following the Communist takeover there.

In 1954 the move was motivated by a hatred of the Communists and a hope for religious freedom. The latest move was simply flight from almost certain death and destruction.

The parish located just below the demilitarized zone was caught between American and Viet Cong artillery and mortars that dueled daily for control of a Communist infiltration route into South Vietnam.

When U.S. 175mm artillery was moved into Gio Linh and began firing into the zone and further north, the Communists reacted by moving mortars just outside the Catholic hamlets and cutting loose with their own barrages.

HEAVY SHELLING

The Americans fired back and in one three-week period, Father Co said, 2,000 shells fell in and around the hamlets of his parishioners.

Again it was decided to move, this time further south and west to Cam Lo where the Marines have units stationed.

The villagers packed up and government trucks hauled their belongings to the new area. They took their tin roofs and some other building materials to get quick shelter from the monsoon rains.

Father Co says the Marines are passing out enough food to his flock and that none is going hungry.

"We hope and believe that the Americans will help build the new villages," Father Co says.

The land around Cam Lo is not as good as the fertile paddies the parishioners were forced to give up around Gio Linh.

HAD RICE, HOMES

"The people were not poor there. They had lots of rice and good homes. Now we must start again. Now we have nothing," Father Co said.

The new land is not suitable for growing rice, the staple of the Vietnamese diet. But it will produce vegetables and somehow the peasants will manage.

But some things will take much time and effort to replace.

Left behind were nine churches, five schools and five medical clinics.

SANCTITY

NEW YROK (AP) — "The most disturbing thing about sanctity is that we are all called to it," Donald J. Thorman, publisher of the National Catholic Reporter, observes in a new Doubleday book, "The Christain Vision."

Confident Living Daily Formula

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

According to tradition a man approached Mohammed and asked of the prophet a suggestion for spiritual benefit. "Do not get angry," Mohammed replied. Thinking the prophet had misunderstood the question the man repeated it. Again Mohammed answered, "Do not get angry."

PEALE

Anger is one of the trickiest personal problems. Folklore and religious teachings of all peoples are full of warnings about its bad effects. "Anger is momentary madness," wrote the Roman poet Horace, "so control your passion or it will control you." Will Rogers cracked: "People who fly into a rage always make a bad landing." What all these people are saying is "It's bad to get mad."

Anger of the slow-burning variety, commonly known as resentment, sometimes does more damage than do fits of violent temper. Easier to conceal, oftentimes hiding in the unconscious, it is harder to come to grips with and difficult to cure. Dr. John Ellis Large relates an interesting case of smoldering resentment.

George had become quite a problem to his wife. He was irritable, irascible, critical of everybody, always out of sorts. His state of mind affected his health, and he suffered from nervous tension — got so he took a dozen kinds of pills. George was not doing well in business, either, and others were being advanced ahead of him.

BOSS CONCERNED

George's boss, also concerned, told Sara that her husband was contentious, hard to get along with, downright cranky. He said, "I hope you can do something with him."

So Sara tried to get a few thoughts across to her husband. But he responded, "Get off my neck! Everybody else is on my neck. Now you've climbed on. Is that the way a wife is supposed to act?"

The troubled woman then went to see Dr. Large. "I'm in trouble. I have a real problem — my husband." And she told him how things were.

"Stop talking to him about himself," Dr. Large advised her. "Don't nag him, don't pester him. Lay off. Just love him. But that won't be enough. Your husband's trouble is deep-seated. We must try to reach the disorder in his basic attitudes. What are George's sleeping habits?"

"He tosses most of the night but about five a.m. falls into a deep sound sleep."

Sara was then given what seemed strange advice. She was told to awaken at the time her husband went into deep sleep, and to work mentally and prayerfully to project creative thoughts into George's deep unconscious. In thought she was to picture this man as peaceful and free of tension; she was to visualize him as affable and friendly in his relationships. This procedure was to be followed daily until a change in the man's attitudes was noted.

AWAKE AT FIVE

So this devoted wife got herself awake at five o'clock every morning and followed directions. Weeks went by without any sign that George felt different in any way. Then one day he said, "Wonder how come everybody at the office is so much nicer than they used to be? They must have begun to realize how badly they'd been treating me."

Some weeks later the boss called George in and informed him, "I'm making you a division manager."

George was astonished. "But why?" he involuntarily blurted out.

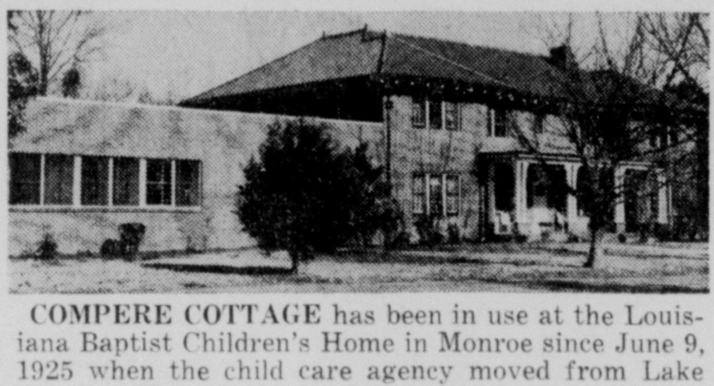
"Because of the way you've changed," the boss said. "I've never seen a more remarkable change in a man. You're cooperative and agreeable. You act happy and you even seem enthusiastic. You are no longer so tense and on edge."

That evening when George told his wife the good news he added wonderingly, "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform . . ."

Sara merely said, "And how!"

An angry, irritable disposition can operate to rob a person of success and happiness. You cannot overcome anger by merely telling yourself that you won't be angry. Nor is it necessarily required that someone else project serene throughts into your subconscious. You can build such thoughts into your own consciousness by affirming your ability to exercise emotional control until your mind accepts the fact that you are no longer going to let anger harm you.

It's bad to get mad. Bad for whom? You!



COMPERE COTTAGE has been in use at the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe since June 9, 1925 when the child care agency moved from Lake Charles. The one-story addition to the building was built several years ago.

Baptist Home Located In Monroe 42 Years

The Louisiana Baptist Children's Home, in its 68th year of helping children, will mark its forty - second anniversary at its Monroe location June 9, having moved from Lake Charles to the present site in 1925.

State Baptists began their child care program in 1899 with the enrollment of four children in the Protestant Orphanage in Baton Rouge. In 1903, after being temporarily located at Keatchie in DeSoto Parish, the Home was moved to Lake Charles. Inadequate land area there prompted the move to Monroe.

FIVE COTTAGES

When the children and "matrons" arrived in Monroe by train 42 years ago, five cottages had been provided for them by W. E. Compere, J. E. Smitherman, Guy Oakes, the Mary Goss Charities and citizens of Monroe. Since then five more cottages have been erected as well as several other buildings necessary to the operation of the agency. The Monroe campus measures 118 acres and fronts on Highway 80. The Home also owns a 514-acre cattle and sheep farm located six miles east of the campus.

SUPERINTENDENT THEN

F. C. (Daddy) Flowers was Home superintendent when the move was made to Monroe. Others who have held this position since include M. E. Weaver, L. M. Cole, R. C. Buckner, B. F. Wallace, T. W. Gayer, D. C. Black, and Wade B. East, who has served since August, 1962.

The Home, which is licensed to provide institutional services and foster care, helped 449 children from throughout Louisiana during the last calendar year. Youngsters from 29 parishes are currently living in the Home. A Board of Trustees, composed of 15 pastors and laymen elected annually by the Louisiana Baptist Convention, sets policies for the agency.

Second Soviet Warship Shadowing U.S. Carrier

ABOARD THE CARRIER AMERICA (AP) — A second, more heavily armed Soviet warship began shadowing this 6th Fleet carrier in the Mediterranean at dusk Saturday.

The Soviet guided missile destroyer No. 381, a late model Kashin-class vessel, passed about 12 miles in front of the America's task group of about six vessels, then cruised by to the left within four miles.

As the America steamed by, the Soviet destroyer turned and began following.

Officers said it has been in the Mediterranean for some time.

Officers aboard the America seemed a bit more concerned with the second Soviet ship's presence than they have with a Soviet destroyer escort which has tagged along during the carrier's air exercises.

America officers planned to ignore the Russians as much as possible.

Earlier Saturday, Soviet destroyer No. 215, which has shadowed the America since Sunday, flashed a "good morning" to one of the task group's destroyers — misspelling it "gut morning" with the signal lights. The U.S. destroyer flashed a "good morning" in return.

The niceties are mere formalities. Officers aboard the America feel the Russians have outstayed any welcome they might have had. The destroyer escort has penetrated the carrier's formation more than once — a discourtesy although not an outright violation of international rules of the road.

"Polite drivers don't go into a naval formation of this size," said Capt. Donald D. Engen, commander of the America.

The Soviet Union's Kashin vessels are a new class of guided missile destroyer. The 4,800-ton vessels are armed with two twin surface-to-air missile launchers, four 85mm antiaircraft guns, five 21-inch torpedo tubes, plus two 12-barrel and two 6-barrel rocket launchers for use against submarines. They are reported to have a speed of 32 knots.

Air exercises aboard the America are being scheduled ahead about three days now. For a time operations were being conducted day by day pending any urgent orders from Washington regarding the Middle East crisis.

PLANES DIVERTED

MANILA (UPI) — Monsoon storms Friday forced Manila-bound planes to divert to airfields as distant as Formosa.

Clark Air Force Base, 50 miles north of the Philippine capital, also had to divert many flights including some from Saigon.

Master Bedroom On First Floor Of Two-Story House

By ANDY LANG

The upper floor of this two-story house is divided into three bedrooms and a bath—but none of those bedrooms is the master suite. In an interesting arrangement, the master bedroom and its private bath are on the first floor in a separate wing of their own.

Architect Lester Cohen turned out this design in response to a number of requests from parents who wanted a downstairs bedroom, with the children off by themselves. The room is to the right of the entry hall and has a custom look about it. By locating the bath and combination vanity-closet at the rear in a separate area, the bedroom itself is left clear for any desired furniture arrangement.

A full study of this architect-designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe-Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan G-91.

DORMER BEDROOMS

The two dormer bedrooms upstairs are suitable for two youngsters who want rooms of their own. The third and larger bedroom could be shared by two children or two adults. The bathroom has alcoves for tub and vanitory. A linen closet and two hall closets, plus large attic space just off the landing, will do major storage duty on this floor.

Since this house has four bedrooms, it must be assumed that it would be used by a family of five or six persons, which means that the area for living must be good-sized. But, in a two-story house, this can be accomplished without an oversized or overly-expensive structure. The first floor, for example, has a modest 1207 square feet, exluding the service center and the garage.

Yet thoughtful planning is evident in the floor layout. The living room is well-proportioned, with plenty of wall space. Just off the center hall, it produces a fine first impression to visitors, yet it need not be entered for informal entertaining, since the family room is straight ahead. The dining room has sliding glass doors leading to a sheltered flagstone porch that can be used for dining or relaxing.

CONVENIENT

As well as being directly off the center hall, the family room is convenient to the kitchen, the lavatory and to basement access. It is highlighted by a beamed ceiling and a corner fireplace. A snack bar counter separates the family area from the kitchen, yet the two rooms form an intergrated whole. An outdoor rear terrace runs the full width of the family room, kitchen and service area. The fireplace chimney accommodates the builtin cook - out.

All kitchen appliances are spaced within a compact counter area. The snack bar can serve as a layout counter. To the side is a pantry with an alcove counter, fine for keeping dishes and cutlery for dining room use.

The service hall, directly to the left of a laundry-mud room and lavatory, permits entry into the house as well as the two-car garage. At the rear of the garage is a large storage area for tools, toys and bikes, with its opening inside the garage. Another large storage area, which could be used for terrace furniture — or anything else, for that matter—has its opening on the outside.

On the outside, Design G - 91 has a dignified combination of brick and siding. The house has a pleasant New England look. Its floor plan indicates it also would be a pleasant place in which to live.

Consider Space Need Of Trees When Planting

Don't plant trees too close to houses, walks and driveways. Trees required space for crown and root growth as they mature.

Don't move trees with insufficient soil around roots. Always move evergreens, hollies, birches, beeches, oaks, dogwood, sugar maple, sweetgums, sourwood and tulip trees with a ball of earth at least 10 times the diameter of the trunk.

Blind Man Takes Honor As Graduate

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A bright moment in the darkened world of Clarence Jackson will occur Monday when he is handed his bachelor's degree and a prize for being at the top of his Virginia Union University graduating class.

Jackson is 40 years old and blind.

The loss of sight was a gradual thing for Jackson. It began before he was discharged from the Army in 1952.

A native of nearby Hanover County, he found a job in Richmond and struggled to rear his two sons after he and their mother were divorced.

In 1960, with his sight almost gone, he had to quit work. The boys, Clarence Jr., 9, and Calvin 7 went to live with relatives.

"The loss of my eyesight made me very bitter," Jackson said.

In 1963 remarried and searching for a better future, he decided to enter Virginia Union. His wife's support was one of the many things he credits with making this move possible.

He found the faculty and the students at Virginia Union eager to help him. He learned Braille, used recordings and had assignments read to him to keep up with this work.

His plans following his graduation include a master's degree in vocational rehabilitation at Richmond Professional Institute and an opportunity to help other handicapped persons.

"The world doesn't owe a man a thing," Jackson, a Negro, said.

"No one wants a handicap, but it can be an opportunity too."

There's a real need for handicapped people in the professions, he said. "Most of us just want a chance to show what we can do."

Jackson's master's degree studies will start next fall. That will also be the time when his sons come home to stay and his darkened world will grow brighter still.

Second Soviet Warship Shadowing U.S. Carrier

ABOARD THE CARRIER AMERICA (AP) — A second, more heavily armed Soviet warship began shadowing this 6th Fleet carrier in the Mediterranean at dusk Saturday.

The Soviet guided missile destroyer No. 381, a late model Kashin-class vessel, passed about 12 miles in front of the America's task group of about six vessels, then cruised by to the left within four miles.

As the America steamed by, the Soviet destroyer turned and began following.

Officers said it has been in the Mediterranean for some time.

Officers aboard the America seemed a bit more concerned with the second Soviet ship's presence than they have with a Soviet destroyer escort which has tagged along during the carrier's air exercises.

America officers planned to ignore the Russians as much as possible.

Earlier Saturday, Soviet destroyer No. 215, which has shadowed the America since Sunday, flashed a "good morning" to one of the task group's destroyers — misspelling it "gut morning" with the signal lights. The U.S. destroyer flashed a "good morning" in return.

The niceties are mere formalities. Officers aboard the America feel the Russians have outstayed any welcome they might have had. The destroyer escort has penetrated the carrier's formation more than once — a discourtesy although not an outright violation of international rules of the road.

"Polite drivers don't go into a naval formation of this size," said Capt. Donald D. Engen, commander of the America.

The Soviet Union's Kashin vessels are a new class of guided missile destroyer. The 4,800-ton vessels are armed with two twin surface-to-air missile launchers, four 85mm antiaircraft guns, five 21-inch torpedo tubes, plus two 12-barrel and two 6-barrel rocket launchers for use against submarines. They are reported to have a speed of 32 knots.

Air exercises aboard the America are being scheduled ahead about three days now. For a time operations were being conducted day by day pending any urgent orders from Washington regarding the Middle East crisis.

PLANES DIVERTED

MANILA (UPI) — Monsoon storms Friday forced Manila-bound planes to divert to airfields as distant as Formosa.

Clark Air Force Base, 50 miles north of the Philippine capital, also had to divert many flights including some from Saigon.

Master Bedroom On First Floor Of Two-Story House

By ANDY LANG

The upper floor of this two-story house is divided into three bedrooms and a bath—but none of those bedrooms is the master suite. In an interesting arrangement, the master bedroom and its private bath are on the first floor in a separate wing of their own.

Architect Lester Cohen turned out this design in response to a number of requests from parents who wanted a downstairs bedroom, with the children off by themselves. The room is to the right of the entry hall and has a custom look about it. By locating the bath and combination vanity-closet at the rear in a separate area, the bedroom itself is left clear for any desired furniture arrangement.

A full study of this architect-designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe-Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan G-91.

DORMER BEDROOMS

The two dormer bedrooms upstairs are suitable for two youngsters who want rooms of their own. The third and larger bedroom could be shared by two children or two adults. The bathroom has alcoves for tub and vanitory. A linen closet and two hall closets, plus large attic space just off the landing, will do major storage duty on this floor.

Since this house has four bedrooms, it must be assumed that it would be used by a family of five or six persons, which means that the area for living must be good-sized. But, in a two-story house, this can be accomplished without an oversized or overly-expensive structure. The first floor, for example, has a modest 1207 square feet, exluding the service center and the garage. Yet thoughtful planning is evident in the floor layout. The living room is well-proportioned, with plenty of wall space. Just off the center hall, it produces a fine first impression to visitors, yet it need not be entered for informal entertaining, since the family room is straight ahead. The dining room has sliding glass doors leading to a sheltered flagstone porch that can be used for dining or relaxing.

CONVENIENT

As well as being directly off the center hall, the family room is convenient to the kitchen, the lavatory and to basement access. It is highlighted by a beamed ceiling and a corner fireplace. A snack bar counter separates the family area from the kitchen, yet the two rooms form an intergrated whole. An outdoor rear terrace runs the full width of the family room, kitchen and service area. The fireplace chimney accommodates the builtin cook - out.

All kitchen appliances are spaced within a compact counter area. The snack bar can serve as a layout counter. To the side is a pantry with an alcove counter, fine for keeping dishes and cutlery for dining room use.

The service hall, directly to the left of a laundry-mud room and lavatory, permits entry into the house as well as the two-car garage. At the rear of the garage is a large storage area for tools, toys and bikes, with its opening inside the garage. Another large storage area, which could be used for terrace furniture — or anything else, for that matter—has its opening on the outside.

On the outside, Design G - 91 has a dignified combination of brick and siding. The house has a pleasant New England look. Its floor plan indicates it also would be a pleasant place in which to live.

Consider Space Need Of Trees When Planting

Don't plant trees too close to houses, walks and driveways. Trees required space for crown and root growth as they mature.

Don't move trees with insufficient soil around roots. Always move evergreens, hollies, birches, beeches, oaks, dogwood, sugar maple, sweetgums, sourwood and tulip trees with a ball of earth at least 10 times the diameter of the trunk.

Transplanted trees, no matter how small, should be prevented from drying out. They should be protected from injury to root, bark and crown.

Blind Man Takes Honor As Graduate

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A bright moment in the darkened world of Clarence Jackson will occur Monday when he is handed his bachelor's degree and a prize for being at the top of his Virginia Union University graduating class.

Jackson is 40 years old and blind.

The loss of sight was a gradual thing for Jackson. It began before he was discharged from the Army in 1952.

A native of nearby Hanover County, he found a job in Richmond and struggled to rear his two sons after he and their mother were divorced.

In 1960, with his sight almost gone, he had to quit work. The boys, Clarence Jr., 9, and Calvin 7 went to live with relatives.

"The loss of my eyesight made me very bitter," Jackson said.

In 1963 remarried and searching for a better future, he decided to enter Virginia Union. His wife's support was one of the many things he credits with making this move possible.

He found the faculty and the students at Virginia Union eager to help him. He learned Braille, used recordings and had assignments read to him to keep up with this work.

His plans following his graduation include a master's degree in vocational rehabilitation at Richmond Professional Institute and an opportunity to help other handicapped persons.

"The world doesn't owe a man a thing," Jackson, a Negro, said.

"No one wants a handicap, but it can be an opportunity too."

There's a real need for handicapped people in the professions, he said. "Most of us just want a chance to show what we can do."

Jackson's master's degree studies will start next fall. That will also be the time when his sons come home to stay and his darkened world will grow brighter still.

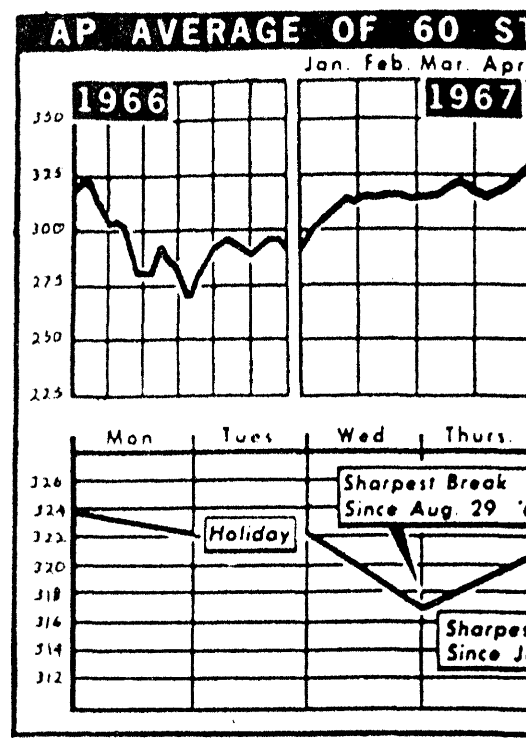
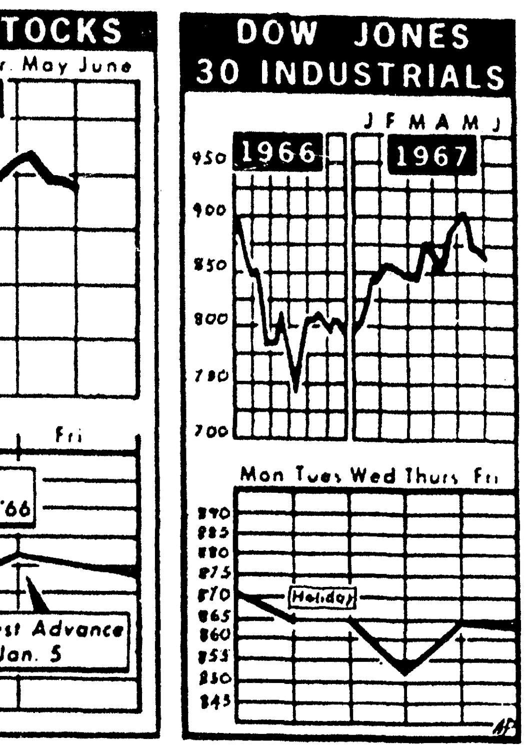
Week's Transactions On New York Stock Exchange

Complete Listings Of All Stocks Traded During Past Week On New York Stock Exchange

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Stock Exchange trading for the week





THE ASSOCIATED PRESS average of 60 stocks recorded the sharpest weekly decline of the year when it closed Friday at 319.5 from 323.7 a week ago. This marked the fourth straight weekly decline. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed at 863.31, down from 870.32 a week ago. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Stock Market Takes Sharp Loss In Week

NEW YORK (AP) — With the Middle East crisis overhanging Wall Street, the stock market last week took its sharpest loss of the year.

The trading week was cut to four days from the usual five by the Memorial Day holiday on Tuesday but this did not minimize the losses.

The holiday did help in keeping the volume down to 32,566,910 shares compared with 46,458,080 in the full previous trading week.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks fell 4.2 to 319.5, its worst loss since the week ended last Dec. 31 when it fell 4.8.

The Dow Jones industrial average this week declined 7.01 to 863.31.

Monday brought a moderate decline on very light volume 6.59 million shares the third smallest of 1967. A report of some shooting between Israelis and Arabs on the Gaza Strip increased fears that the Middle East crisis might mushroom into a full-fledged conflict.

Imminence of the Memorial Day holiday also was a reason for the Monday caution.

When the market reopened on Wednesday, prices tumbled to the worst loss of the year amid anxiety over the apparently growing crisis in the Middle East. The decline was on a very broad front ranging through all the major groups.

With some slightly better economic news and nothing worse from the Middle East the market rallied Thursday.

Some of the Thursday strength continued Friday morning when the market was higher. This faded however, and the market ended with a moderate loss on the day.

Of 1569 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange 1-070 declined and 377 advanced.

Bond prices advanced this past week for the first time since mid-April.

The advance came after corporate and municipal bond prices sank to 1967 lows during May.

Stock Market Takes Sharp Loss In Week

NEW YORK (AP) — With the Middle East crisis overhanging Wall Street, the stock market last week took its sharpest loss of the year.

The trading week was cut to four days from the usual five by the Memorial Day holiday on Tuesday but this did not minimize the losses.

The holiday did help in keeping the volume down to 32,566,910 shares compared with 46,458,080 in the full previous trading week.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks fell 4.2 to 319.5, its worst loss since the week ended last Dec. 31 when it fell 4.8.

The Dow Jones industrial average this week declined 7.01 to 863.31.

Monday brought a moderate decline on very light volume 6.59 million shares the third smallest of 1967. A report of some shooting between Israelis and Arabs on the Gaza Strip increased fears that the Middle East crisis might mushroom into a full-fledged conflict.

Imminence of the Memorial Day holiday also was a reason for the Monday caution.

When the market reopened on Wednesday, prices tumbled to the worst loss of the year amid anxiety over the apparently growing crisis in the Middle East. The decline was on a very broad front ranging through all the major groups.

With some slightly better economic news and nothing worse from the Middle East the market rallied Thursday.

Some of the Thursday strength continued Friday morning when the market was higher. This faded however, and the market ended with a moderate loss on the day.

Of 1569 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange 1070 declined and 377 advanced.

Bond prices advanced this past week for the first time since mid-April.

The advance came after corporate and municipal bond prices sank to 1967 lows during May.

Petroleum Demand In Japan High

Houston, Tex. (AP)—The demand for petroleum in Japan and western Europe has been spectacular since 1960.

In both cases, the bulk of the oil that has fed the healthy growth rates has come from the Middle East.

In 1961, the Middle East shipped 68 per cent of its oil exports to Japan and western Europe. Five years later, the figure had jumped to 73.9 per cent.

Japan's demand for petroleum increased at an annual average rate of 24½ per cent between 1961 and 1965. Western Europe followed with a 13½ per cent average.

By comparison, the world oil consumption growth rate averaged only 7½ per cent a year, that of the United States only three per cent.

Western Europe's demand for petroleum increased from 4,610,000 barrels a day in 1961 to 7,730,000 barrels daily in 1965. Japan's consumption climbed from 800,000 to 1,770,000 barrels a day.

A recent forecast indicates western Europe's requirements will exceed 11 million barrels by 1970 and Japan's will exceed 3,200,000.

The Middle East strengthened its 1961,1965 position in these rapidly expanding consumer markets while losing ground only to Africa's new plush production areas.

Middle East shipments to western Europe increased from 2,855,000 to 4,195,000 barrels a day during the five-year period but, percentagewise, its share of that market dropped from 63.9 to 54.3 per cent. Africa, paced by Libya and Algeria, meanwhile increased its claim to the European market from 9.6 to 26.4 per cent by boosting its shipments from 430,000 to 2,040,000 barrels a day.

North Africa's production can be expected to demand an even greater role in western Europe's economy. Recent discoveries remain to be developed and other new discoveries, for gas as well as oil, are anticipated.

Japanese crude production in the Middle East includes the neutral zone's offshore Khafji field discovered in 1960. Khafji's production exceeded 240,000 barrels a day last year.

The Middle East's share of the Japanese market has increased from 74.3 to 82.2 per cent since 1961, with shipments included 350,000 barrels a day to the United States, 145,000 to Canada, 240,000 to other areas in the Western Hemisphere, 435,000 to Africa, 215,000 to south Asia, 305,000 to Australia, and 270,000 to other Eastern Hemisphere areas.

In addition to the large shipments from the Middle East and Africa, western Europe received 45,000 barrels daily from the United States, 835,000 from Venezuela and the Caribbean area, 35,000 from Southeast Asia, 570,000 barrels a day from Russia, and 5,000 from other Eastern Hemisphere areas.

Japan supplemented its Middle East shipments with 40,000 barrels a day from the United States, 30,000 from Venezuela and the Caribbean area, 5,000 from western Europe, 140,000 from Southeast Asia, 90,000 from Russia, and 5,000 from other Eastern Hemisphere areas.

Ellender Comments On Mid-East

World Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D - La., Saturday emphasized that the current Middle East situation is an international problem and that the U.S. should take no unilateral action.

"Ideally, this crisis should be dealt with by the United Nations," said Ellender in a prepared radio speech, "but it now appears that any decisive action by that organization will prove impossible."

Ellender said the controversy over the United Arab Republic's proposed blockage of the Gulf of Aqaba against Israeli shipping should be solved by international diplomacy, perferably by international maritime nations.

The narrow gulf of Aqaba lies between Egypt and Saudi Arabia, and provides Israel with its only access to the Red Sea and Indian Ocean.

As part of an effort to resolve the Suez crisis in 1956, said Ellender, the Eisenhower Administration gave assurance that the disputed gulf would be kept open to international traffic.

"While there is no argument that the gulf is indeed an international waterway," said Ellender, "passage to the gulf itself must be attained through the Strait of Tiran, which lies within the three - mile territorial limits of Egypt."

Ellender said international maritime nations acting in concert could bring about a peaceful settlement of the problem, but advised against the U.S. acting independently. "would be an open invitation for the Soviet Union to step in on the side of the Arab nations."

In 1937, the Duke of Windsor, formerly King Edward VIII of Great Britain, was married to Mrs. Wallis Simpson of Baltimore.

Business Inventories Arouse Some Concern

NEW YORK (AP) — A sharp increase in the accumulation of business inventories aroused some concern this past week.

Some economists interpreted the rise as a reflection of a decline in sales.

The Commerce Department reported that inventories climbed $611 million in April to a total of $80,000,000.

This gain was the largest since January and was twice the increase registered in March. From last September through January the amount of inventories went up about $1 billion a month.

The slower pace of increase in February and March had encouraged economists to believe that the inventory adjustment was proceeding satisfactorily, paving the way for an increase in future sales.

Government economists were disappointed that the process of working off excess stocks apparently was interrupted in April, but they said they did not find the figures alarming.

The troublesome element, in their opinion, was that the ratio of inventories to sales rose to 1.82 months supply in April from 1.78 in March and 1.62 in April 1966. The latest figure was the highest since the 1960-61 recession.

A major factor in the increase in the ratio was a drop in manufacturers' sales of $800 million in April to a total of $44,096,000,000.

The Commerce Department pointed out that at least one-third of the April inventory increase apparently was associated with the continuing defense buildup.

Durable goods inventories accounted for about $400 million of the April increase and nondurables inventories went up about $220 million. The durable goods total was $51,615,000,000 and the nondurables $28,709,000,000.

Manufacturers' new orders rose in April to $44,043,000,000 from $43.7 billion in March. Of the total, $22,325,000,000 was in durable goods, up from $22,065,000,000 in March.

The increase in orders reflected greater bookings for primary metals in particular and increases in machinery and transportation equipment orders.

During the week, Congress completed action on legislation restoring the 7 per cent business investment tax credit, retroactive to March 10.

The bill will give business tax benefits of $1.7 billion over the next four years by the early restoration of the incentives, which originally had been scheduled to remain suspended until next Jan. 1.

The incentives are the tax credit for investment in capital equipment and two methods of accelerated depreciation. They were suspended last Sept. 10 as part of the administration's attempt to restrain inflation. They are being restored to help stimulate the currently sluggish economy.

The stock market on Wednesday took its worst tumble since last fall. Brokers attributed the slump to investors' anxiety over the Middle East crisis. The Associated Press 60-stock average fell 5.3 points to 316.8, its biggest loss since last Aug. 29. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 12.42 points to 852.56, its steepest setback since last Oct. 3.

On Thursday the Dow Jones average regained the exact amount it had lost the previous day.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, with 40,000 members, won a 6 per cent wage increase in a new contract with the nation's railroads. This broke a pattern of 5 per cent boosts achieved in negotiations between the railroads and other unions.

Automobile production the past holiday-shortened week totaled an estimated 129,000 passenger cars, compared with 173,244 the previous week and 146,860 a year earlier in a week also shortened by Memorial Day.

Steel output in the week ended May 27 amounted to 2,385,000 tons, off 1 per cent from 2,408,000 tons the previous week.

End Adv June 3-4 .

Kangaroo Caper

LUTON, England (UPI) — The police sergeant was somewhat skeptical when he heard an excited voice on the telephone saying "there's a kangaroo hopping along the street."

But he sent a police car and there was a kangaroo, a small one, which was taken to nearby Whipsnade Zoo. Police still are trying to find out where the kangaroo came from.

In 1965, the United States orbited twin astronauts Ed White and Jim McDivitt in the historic Gemini IV spacecraft. White became the first American to walk in space. He was tied to the Gemini by a cord and maneuvered with the aid of a jet gun.

Wedding Belles

ALTAVISTA, Va. (UPI) — June is a busy month for 18-year-olds. More girls graduate from school at 18 than at any other age, and more girls marry at 18, too — most of them in June. According to a survey by the Lane Company furniture makers, 3 million girls will receive high school diplomas this June, and more than 30 per cent of them will march down the aisle to wedding music.

Kangaroo Caper

LUTON, England (UPI) — The police sergeant was somewhat skeptical when he heard an excited voice on the telephone saying "there's a kangaroo hopping along the street."

But he sent a police car and there was a kangaroo, a small one, which was taken to nearby Whipsnade Zoo. Police still are trying to find out where the kangaroo came from.

In 1965, the United States orbited twin astronauts Ed White and Jim McDivitt in the historic Gemini IV spacecraft. White became the first American to walk in space. He was tied to the Gemini by a cord and maneuvered with the aid of a jet gun.

Wedding Belles

ALTAVISTA, Va. (UPI) — June is a busy month for 18-year-olds. More girls graduate from school at 18 than at any other age, and more girls marry at 18, too — most of them in June. According to a survey by the Lane Company, furniture makers, 3 million girls will receive high school diplomas this June, and more than 30 per cent of them will march down the aisle to wedding music.

Petroleum Demand In Japan High

Houston, Tex. (AP)—The demand for petroleum in Japan and western Europe has been spectacular since 1960.

In both cases, the bulk of the oil that has fed the healthy growth rates has come from the Middle East.

In 1961, the Middle East shipped 68 per cent of its oil exports to Japan and western Europe. Five years later, the figure had jumped to 73.9 per cent.

Japan's demand for petroleum increased at an annual average rate of 24½ per cent between 1961 and 1965. Western Europe followed with a 13½ per cent average.

By comparison, the world oil consumption growth rate averaged only 7½ per cent a year, that of the United States only three per cent.

Western Europe's demand for petroleum increased from 4,610,000 barrels a day in 1961 to 7,730,000 barrels daily in 1965. Japan's consumption climbed from 800,000 to 1,770,000 barrels a day.

A recent forecast indicates western Europe's requirements will exceed 11 million barrels by 1970 and Japan's will exceed 3,200,000.

The Middle East strengthened its 1961,1965 position in these rapidly expanding consumer markets while losing ground only to Africa's new plush production areas.

Middle East shipments to western Europe increased from 2,855,000 to 4,195,000 barrels a day during the five-year period but, percentagewise, its share of that market dropped from 63.9 to 54.3 per cent. Africa, paced by Libya and Algeria, meanwhile increased its claim to the European market from 9.6 to 26.4 per cent by boosting its shipments from 430,000 to 2,040,000 barrels a day.

North Africa's production can be expected to demand an even greater role in western Europe's economy. Recent discoveries remain to be developed and other new discoveries, for gas as well as oil, are anticipated.

Japanese crude production in the Middle East includes the neutral zone's offshore Khafji field discovered in 1960. Khafji's production exceeded 240,000 barrels a day last year.

The Middle East's share of the Japanese market has increased from 74.3 to 82.2 per cent since 1961, with shipments included 350,000 barrels a day to the United States, 145,000 to Canada, 240,000 to other areas in the Western Hemisphere, 435,000 to Africa, 215,000 to south Asia, 305,000 to Australia, and 270,000 to other Eastern Hemisphere areas.

In addition to the large shipments from the Middle East and Africa, western Europe received 45,000 barrels daily from the United States, 835,000 from Venezuela and the Caribbean area, 35,000 from Southeast Asia, 570,000 barrels a day from Russia, and 5,000 from other Eastern Hemisphere areas.

Japan supplemented its Middle East shipments with 40,000 barrels a day from the United States, 30,000 from Venezuela and the Caribbean area, 5,000 from western Europe, 140,000 from Southeast Asia, 90,000 from Russia, and 5,000 from other Eastern Hemisphere areas.

Ellender Comments On Mid-East

World Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D - La., Saturday emphasized that the current Middle East situation is an international problem and that the U.S. should take no unilateral action.

"Ideally, this crisis should be dealt with by the United Nations," said Ellender in a prepared radio speech, "but it now appears that any decisive action by that organization will prove impossible."

Ellender said the controversy over the United Arab Republic's proposed blockage of the Gulf of Aqaba against Israeli shipping should be solved by international diplomacy, perferably by international maritime nations.

The narrow gulf of Aqaba lies between Egypt and Saudi Arabia, and provides Israel with its only access to the Red Sea and Indian Ocean.

As part of an effort to resolve the Suez crisis in 1956, said Ellender, the Eisenhower Administration gave assurance that the disputed gulf would be kept open to international traffic.

"While there is no argument that the gulf is indeed an international waterway," said Ellender, "passage to the gulf itself must be attained through the Strait of Tiran, which lies within the three - mile territorial limits of Egypt."

Ellender said international maritime nations acting in concert could bring about a peaceful settlement of the problem, but advised against the U.S. acting independently, "would be an open invitation for the Soviet Union to step in on the side of the Arab nations."

In 1937, the Duke of Windsor, formerly King Edward VIII of Great Britain, was married to Mrs. Wallis Simpson of Baltimore.

Business Inventories Arouse Some Concern

NEW YORK (AP) — A sharp increase in the accumulation of business inventories aroused some concern this past week.

Some economists interpreted the rise as a reflection of a decline in sales.

The Commerce Department reported that inventories climbed $611 million in April to a total of $80,000,000.

This gain was the largest since January and was twice the increase registered in March. From last September through January the amount of inventories went up about $1 billion a month.

The slower pace of increase in February and March had encouraged economists to believe that the inventory adjustment was proceeding satisfactorily, paving the way for an increase in future sales.

Government economists were disappointed that the process of working off excess stocks apparently was interrupted in April, but they said they did not find the figures alarming.

The troublesome element, in their opinion, was that the ratio of inventories to sales rose to 1.82 months supply in April from 1.78 in March and 1.62 in April 1966. The latest figure was the highest since the 1960-61 recession.

A major factor in the increase in the ratio was a drop in manufacturers' sales of $800 million in April to a total of $44,096,000,000.

The Commerce Department pointed out that at least one-third of the April inventory increase apparently was associated with the continuing defense buildup.

Durable goods inventories accounted for about $400 million of the April increase and nondurables inventories went up about $220 million. The durable goods total was $51,615,000,000 and the nondurables $28,709,000,000.

Manufacturers' new orders rose in April to $44,043,000,000 from $43.7 billion in March. Of the total, $22,325,000,000 was in durable goods, up from $22,065,000,000 in March.

The increase in orders reflected greater bookings for primary metals in particular and increases in machinery and transportation equipment orders.

During the week, Congress completed action on legislation restoring the 7 per cent business investment tax credit, retroactive to March 10.

The bill will give business tax benefits of $1.7 billion over the next four years by the early restoration of the incentives, which originally had been scheduled to remain suspended until next Jan. 1.

The incentives are the tax credit for investment in capital equipment and two methods of accelerated depreciation. They were suspended last Sept. 10 as part of the administration's attempt to restrain inflation. They are being restored to help stimulate the currently sluggish economy.

The stock market on Wednesday took its worst tumble since last fall. Brokers attributed the slump to investors' anxiety over the Middle East crisis. The Associated Press 60-stock average fell 5.3 points to 316.8, its biggest loss since last Aug. 29. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 12.42 points to 852.56, its steepest setback since last Oct. 3.

On Thursday the Dow Jones average regained the exact amount it had lost the previous day.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, with 40,000 members, won a 6 per cent wage increase in a new contract with the nation's railroads. This broke a pattern of 5 per cent boosts achieved in negotiations between the railroads and other unions.

Automobile production the past holiday-shortened week totaled an estimated 129,000 passenger cars, compared with 173,244 the previous week and 146,860 a year earlier in a week also shortened by Memorial Day.

Steel output in the week ended May 27 amounted to 2,385,000 tons, off 1 per cent from 2,408,000 tons the previous week.

Funny Money

What if you discover that a dollar bill, recently acquired by you, is a counterfeit? Your quick reaction might be:

"This thing is a hot potato. I'd better unload it onto somebody else as fast as I can."

But if you do, you will be committing the serious crime of passing counterfeit money. True, you do have a hot potato on your hands. But it is folly to add to the minor mistake of accepting the money the major mistake of passing it along.

Your duty is plain. Notify the local police department or the United States Secret Service at once, giving as much information as you can about when, where, and from whom you received the bill.

No, you will not be reimbursed for the one dollar. But you will be helping to curb one of the most ancient and persistent of crimes — one that has been given a new lease on life by modern techniques of printing and engraving.

In the roster of criminals, the counterfeiter is something of a maverick. He is seldom motivated by sudden passion or by grinding poverty or by personal inadequacies. He has time enough for planning, money enough for equipment, and talent enough for manufacturing. He is a cool customer who knows exactly what he is doing.

However, merely passing — unlike manufacturing — counterfeit money may occur in perfect innocence. It is part of the government's job in prosecuting to prove that the person who passed the counterfeit money knew (or at least thought) that it was counterfeit. Consider this case:

An intoxicated fellow, caught spending counterfeit money in a bar, denied that he knew it was bogus. At the trial, the government told the court:

"Shortly before this man's arrest, he burned a $5 bill to light his cigar. So he must have known the money was no good."

But the court was not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt, and dismissed the charge. The judge said it was quite possible for a drinking man to burn real money — just to show off.

In another case, though, there was evidence that the defendant, when he realized detectives were on his trail, flushed his counterfeit money down a toilet.

This time, the defendant was convicted. The court found no reasonable explanation for this behavior except a guilty conscience.

State Health Agency Gets New Name

The name of Louisiana's official health agency has been changed from Louisiana State Board of Health to Louisiana State Department of Health.

In a memorandum to public health employees, Dr. Andrew Hedmeg, director of the department, said the change results from two legislative acts of the 1966 session which referred to the health agency as the State Department of Health, and a new opinion from the State Attorney General's Office that the agency should operate under that title.

The change in no way alters the name or responsibilities of the Louisiana State Board of Health which, under the Constitution, consists of a president and eight members. These nine board members govern the functions and establish policies for the State Department of Health, and will continue to pass regulations through the State Sanitary Code concerning health matters for the state.

Dr. Hedmeg retains the official title of state health officer.

As an economy measure, Dr. Hedmeg said, the department will continue to use existing supplies of stationery and various forms until they are exhausted, even though they bear the designation State Board of Health."

Funny Money

What if you discover that a dollar bill, recently acquired by you, is a counterfeit? Your quick reaction might be:

"This thing is a hot potato. I'd better unload it onto somebody else as fast as I can."

But if you do, you will be committing the serious crime of passing counterfeit money. True, you do have a hot potato on your hands. But it is folly to add to the minor mistake of accepting the money the major mistake of passing it along.

Your duty is plain. Notify the local police department or the United States Secret Service at once, giving as much information as you can about when, where, and from whom you received the bill.

No, you will not be reimbursed for the one dollar. But you will be helping to curb one of the most ancient and persistent of crimes — one that has been given a new lease on life by modern techniques of printing and engraving.

In the roster of criminals, the counterfeiter is something of a maverick. He is seldom motivated by sudden passion or by grinding poverty or by personal inadequacies. He has time enough for planning, money enough for equipment, and talent enough for manufacturing. He is a cool customer who knows exactly what he is doing.

However, merely passing — unlike manufacturing — counterfeit money may occur in perfect innocence. It is part of the government's job in prosecuting to prove that the person who passed the counterfeit money knew (or at least thought) that it was counterfeit. Consider this case:

An intoxicated fellow, caught spending counterfeit money in a bar, denied that he knew it was bogus. At the trial, the government told the court:

"Shortly before this man's arrest, he burned a $5 bill to light his cigar. So he must have known the money was no good."

But the court was not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt, and dismissed the charge. The judge said it was quite possible for a drinking man to burn real money — just to show off.

In another case, though, there was evidence that the defendant, when he realized detectives were on his trail, flushed his counterfeit money down a toilet.

This time, the defendant was convicted. The court found no reasonable explanation for this behavior except a guilty conscience.

State Health Agency Gets New Name

The name of Louisiana's official health agency has been changed from Louisiana State Board of Health to Louisiana State Department of Health.

In a memorandum to public health employees, Dr. Andrew Hedmeg, director of the department, said the change results from two legislative acts of the 1966 session which referred to the health agency as the State Department of Health, and a new opinion from the State Attorney General's Office that the agency should operate under that title.

The change in no way alters the name or responsibilities of the Louisiana State Board of Health which, under the Constitution, consists of a president and eight members. These nine board members govern the functions and establish policies for the State Department of Health, and will continue to pass regulations through the State Sanitary Code concerning health matters for the state.

Dr. Hedmeg retains the official title of state health officer.

As an economy measure, Dr. Hedmeg said, the department will continue to use existing supplies of stationery, and various forms until they are exhausted, even though they bear the designation State Board of Health."

LET'S SUPPORT A STATE WIDE TAX FOR FULL TEACHER'S PAY RAISE!

VOTE NO ON HOUSE BILL No. 30!

The education of our children is in the hands of these devoted people. But, we must make sure this tax money is for them! The exponents of the House Bill No. 30 would have you believe this is a tax for "Teachers pay raise only"!

However, Let's Have These Questions Answered!

Have you been given a chance to read this Bill? Have you seen it published in your local paper? Do you honestly know what is in this Bill? Are you basing your vote on "hear-say" only? Will this Parish receive back anywhere near what they collect in taxes? How much of this money is actually dedicated to teachers pay and what percentage goes to the cost of collecting the tax, the reimbursing of the cost of holding this election, and the many other purposes totally disconnected with the education of our children?

Under House Bill No. 30, No Exact Dollars Are Dedicated!

Once a bill is passed... IT IS THE LAW! You are urged to THINK TWICE! If we want to give our teachers a raise (and what intelligent, law-abiding, self-respecting citizen doesn't), let's propose a "Teachers pay raise" Bill. Let this bill dedicate money to their pay raise, and not be one written so vaguely and in such a mysterious manner as House Bill No. 30.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

For a perfect jewelry box, try this idea.

Hardware stores sell small chests to hold little odds and ends—nails, bolts, etc., for workbenches. Since I had been wanting a large jewelry box for some time, my husband got me one in colored plastic with clear plastic drawers.

I really love it because the drawers can be sectioned and it holds so much. Best of all, the jewelry can be seen through the clear plastic in front!

Lillian Riley

BATHED IN COLOR

DEAR HELOISE:

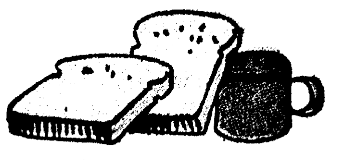
When our second child was still very small and being bathed in the kitchen sink, I would lay him on a towel on the counter near the sink.

We have cupboards over the counters, so the baby was looking up at the bottom of a cupboard. When he was old enough to be attracted to bright colors, I pasted some colorful pictures under the cabinet.

The baby seemed to enjoy looking at the pictures rather than a bare board. Less wiggling, too!

Mrs. Stolpe

STRAWBERRY TOAST



DEAR HELOISE:

Try putting granulated gelatin (strawberry is what my children like best) on hot buttered toast.

Take the gelatin in its dry form, place it in an empty shaker and sprinkle it over the toast. Delicious! It's a welcome change from cinnamon toast.

Eudora Collins

TIME FOR WEEDING

DEAR HELOISE:

The other day my husband used a worn-out car cushion to protect his knees while weeding in the garden.

It certainly was easier on his knees, and it kept his pants cleaner.

Doris Bowman

FOUR-IN-ONE MIRROR

DEAR HELOISE:

With four daughters using one bathroom, we knew we were in for trouble with an average-size mirror.

We bought a full-length door mirror, turned it horizontally, measured the tallest and shortest girl for a happy medium, installed it, and now all four can primp at once.

Mrs. Atkinson

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

My kids "kid" me for saving everything.

I always tell them that I may read in Heloise's column a hint on how to put the odd pieces of "junk" to use.

Mrs. N. H. M.

THE WRITE ADVICE

DEAR HELOISE:

When using a writing pad, I open to the back of the pad and write on the last page, tear it off and repeat. Thus I don't get the imprint of writing on the second page as I did when I used the front of the pad. This is especially good for heavy-handed people.

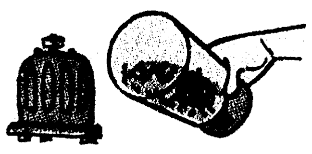
Also, some ballpoint pens write better with the cardboard base under the single page you are writing on.

Isabella Clark

BLENDED CRUMBS

DEAR HELOISE:

To get instant crumbs, drop a slice of crisp toast in your blender and just turn it on a few seconds.



You may have to turn it off and shake the glass container (or stir the crumbs) to get them as fine as you want.

Reader

If you have a hint, problem or suggestion you'd like to share . . . write to Heloise in care of this newspaper. 6-4

REASONABLE PROOF

DEAR HELOISE:

Quite by accident one day I found that you can use perfume in other ways than to smell pretty!

I had accidentally marked my wall with a felt-tipped marker, and being in a hurry, I reached for the nearest thing—perfume. A small dab on a facial tissue, with the aid of a little elbow grease, and the mark fairly floated off.

I decided to try it on fingerprints and smudges, and it works like a charm.

Stasia Skovron

* * *

Yes, it works. Do you know why? It is the alcohol in the perfume which removes the marks.

So why not save your expensive perfume and just use plain ol' rubbing alcohol?

Heloise

HIGH-CHAIR REPAIR

DEAR HELOISE:

When a bolt was stripped on the tray of my youngster's high chair, I tried wrapping a tiny piece of aluminum foil (one layer thick) over the threads of the bolt.

The bolt may not hold forever, but it will do until my husband fixes it properly!

Bonnie C. White

WORN-OUT ELASTIC

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is the way I repair stretched elastic on underpants and half slips:

I thread ¼"-wide elastic in a steel crewel-rug needle, and using the old elastic as you would beading, thread it through. I cut the elastic 1" larger than my waist and tie a square knot. That way it is easy to adjust as it weakens or my weight changes.

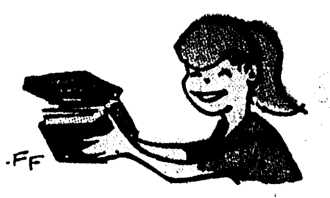
I use ⅛"-wide elastic on the leg openings.

Mrs. Reinach

"WRITE SOON . . ."

DEAR HELOISE:

When I receive a letter, I address an envelope to that person, put the letter in it and file it in my address book in the "A" (for "Answer") section.



When I have time to write, I have the person's letter, and the addressed envelope reminds me that I have not answered it.

Lee

MOP-UP ACTION

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who use a special mop to apply floor wax: I cover my mop with a top cut from one of my husband's old socks before I start waxing.

Not only does it keep the mop clean but the wax spreads beautifully, and the old sock can be discarded.

T. T.

CAMPER'S ADVICE

DEAR HELOISE:

On camping trips, if you put your clean dishes and silverware in plastic bags, you won't have to dust or rewash them before every meal.

I put plates in one, bowls in another, etc.
